In October, 1864, he re-enforced Resaca and held it against Gen. John B. Hood. In 1866 he obtained a charter for the Cairo and Vincennes Railroad company, aided in its construction and became its first president. He was elected to congress and served from March, 1867, to March, 1869. In 1876 he was president of the Illinois Republican convention, and in the same year was delegate to the national convention of the party in Cincinnati. In August, 1876, he was appointed commissioner of internal revenue, and retained the office until May, 1883. Gen. Raum is author of "The Existing Conflict Between Republican Government and Southern Oligarchy." He has practiced law for some years in Washington, and is a prominent Grand Army man.

Dumplings with Royal Baking Powder

No dessert is more delicious, wholesome and appetizing than a well-made dumpling, filled with the fruit of the season. By the use of the Royal Baking Powder the crust is always rendered light, flaky, tender and digestible. Dumplings made with it, baked or boiled, will be dainty and wholesome, and may be eaten steaming hot with perfect impunity.

RECEIPT.—One quart of flour; thoroughly mix with it three teaspoons of Royal Baking Powder and a small teaspoon of salt; rub in a piece of butter or lard the size of an egg, and then add one large potato, grated in the flour; after the butter is well mixed, stir in milk and knead to the consistency of soft biscuit dough; break off pieces of dough large enough to close over four quarters of an apple (or other fruit as desired) without rolling, and lay in an earthen dish (or steamer) and steam until the fruit is tender. Bake if preferred.

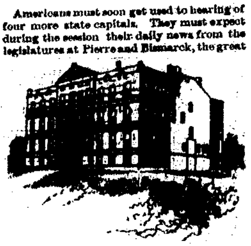
In all receipts calling for cream of tartar and soda, substitute Royal Baking Powder. Less trouble, never fails, makes more appetizing and wholesome food and is more economical. Royal Baking Powder is specially made for use in the preparation of the finest and most delicate cookery.

NEW STATE CAPITALS.

WHERE LAWS FOR THE RECENTLY ADMITTED STATES WILL BE MADE.

Helena Temporarily Chosen by Montana, Bismarck Selected by North and Pierre by South Dakota, and Olympia Settled Upon by Washington.

Americans must soon get used to hearing of four more state capitals. They must expect during the session their daily news from the legislatures at Pierre and Bismarck, the great schemes in incubation at Olympia and the "fierce senatorial fight at Helena." It is just possible they will begin to hear of this last even before this article is widely read, for Montana not only has materials for a lively sensation, but its political parties are almost evenly balanced.

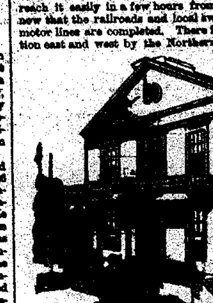


STATE HOUSE AT BISMARCK.

Helena is, from a romantic standpoint, the most interesting of all the new capitals, none of the other three being located at what is, or is expected to be, the largest city. In Washington and both Dakotas the people have followed the wise American custom of having their legislation done at some other than the principal city. Helena dates from the close of the civil war, when Montana was sought by many men of broken fortunes or impaired health, and at least $30,000,000 worth of gold was taken out of the gulch or little valley in which Helena is situated. It began as a mining camp. Every pound of the dirt on which the city is built has been washed over, and some of it twice—the second time by the Chinese. Col. Broadwater, of the Hot Springs hotel, sent a $100,000 brick to the Minneapolis exposition as a specimen of the new state's products, and the Helena papers relate as a pleasant item of recent news that Mrs. McAdow, part proprietor of the Spotted Horse lode, recently drove into town with a "little brick" of $40,000 in gold, which she deposited in bank.

Helena was a wild and roaring camp, and then a lively town; unfortunately it next became a town of many criminals, for the lawless got temporary control of the government and "road agents" multiplied. One fine morning the citizens rose to discover that the "vigilantes" had got to work. On some doors were marked "Look out!" on others "Get out!" and by way of emphasis three notorious thieves were hanging by the neck from a conspicuous beam. The "vigilantes" hanged and shot fifty-two men during their reign, and the moral atmosphere was purified. Capital came in even to an excess, a good government was established and in 1870-75 it began to be remarked that Helena had as fine society as any place in America. For many years past the curious fact has been noted that the Helena banks had more money on deposit in proportion to population than those of any other city in the country.

Helena also has an advantage over the other capitals in the matter of sublime scenery, though Olympia has Puget Sound and Bismarck and Pierre the raging Missouri. One can choose his climate in Montana and reach it easily in a few hours from Helena, now that the railroads and local switch and motor lines are completed. There is connection east and west by the Northern Pacific, down to Ogden and Salt Lake City by another road, and to adjacent points by still other lines. The city is also building an [illegible]



STATE HOUSE AT OLYMPIA.

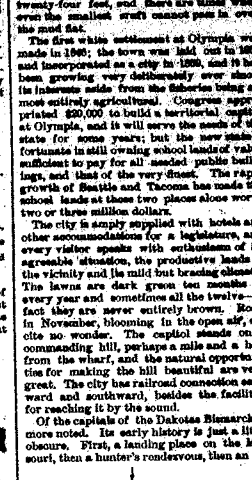
[illegible] hunting grounds of the very best, and is at the same time so lavishly supplied with agricultural products.

The sound affords oysters, clams and fish all the year round, the adjacent woods still abound in grouse and pheasants, while in the mountains, not more than twenty-five miles away, bear, deer, elk, and mountain sheep are still found in winter. The many prongs of Puget's sound give the interior navigation of Washington such a peculiar geography that the non-resident could not divine by any amount of study the natural place for the "coming great city," and Seattle and Tacoma are active in attempting to decide it, but it seems to be agreed by all that it is not to be at Olympia. The anchorage is not first class, and large vessels can reach the wharf only at high tide. The variation between highest and lowest tides is often as much as twenty-four feet, and there are times when even the smallest craft cannot pass in over the mud flat.

The first white settlement at Olympia was made in 1846; the town was laid out in 1851 and incorporated as a city in 1859, and it has been growing very deliberately ever since, its interests aside from the fisheries being almost entirely agricultural. Congress appropriated $20,000 to build a territorial capitol at Olympia, and it will serve the needs of the state for some years; but the new state is fortunate in still owning school lands of value sufficient to pay for all needed public buildings, and that of the very finest. The rapid growth of Seattle and Tacoma has made the school lands at those two places alone worth two or three million dollars.

The city is amply supplied with hotels and other accommodations for a legislature, and every visitor speaks with enthusiasm of its agreeable situation, the productive lands of the vicinity and its mild but bracing climate. The lawns are dark green ten months of every year and sometimes all the twelve—in fact they are never entirely brown. Roses in November, blooming in the open air, excite no wonder. The capitol stands on a commanding hill, perhaps a mile and a half from the wharf, and the natural opportunities for making the hill beautiful are very great. The city has railroad connection eastward and southward, besides the facilities for reaching it by the sound.

Of the capitals of the Dakotas Bismarck is more noted. Its early history is just a little obscure. First, a landing place on the Missouri, then a hunter's rendezvous, then an Indian trading post, and finally a "rattling frontier town," reached by daily stage, it became a place of note when the great travel ahead of the Northern Pacific railroad set in. In 1874 it became the terminus of that road, and so remained till the "hard times" were past and the great northwestern "boom." Bismarck had it bad. Corner lots sold at Chicago prices, and real estate owners spoke confidently of "holding for $1,000 per front foot." The regular collapse followed, and after that legitimate development. But an extremely trying period intervened.



LEWIS AND CLARKE COUNTY COURT HOUSE.
[Temporary State House.]

When the territorial capital was located at Bismarck the Northern Pacific Railroad company donated a site for the state house—on a hill, a mile or more from the station, and no house within half a mile of it. "No matter," said the citizens, "the town will soon grow to it," and $200,000 were put into the new Capitol. One could have got even bets that the town would surround the Capitol in a year. It is only by a figure of speech that it can be said to have reached it yet. The railroad went on west, and this cut off the outfitting and terminus freighting, and real estate took a big tumble. It is not claimed by the most enthusiastic Bismarckers that the place is what it used to be, or even what it ought to be, but that it will be all that they ever expected it to be they do not admit a doubt. The Milwaukee and St. Paul road promises speedy connection, and a roadbed is graded to Aberdeen. Already the assured permanence of the capital location has done something, and Bismarck once more anticipates a great future. At any rate it is the capital of North Dakota.

Pierre, capital of South Dakota, is far less known to the public than Bismarck, and indeed it became capital by a sort of resolution of forces, as a certain school of scientists say when they cannot explain a phenomenon. It was simply "in the way," pretty near the center of the territory and on the Missouri river—that decided it. Huron, in Beadle county, being already a railroad center, had bright hopes of becoming the capital, but the people decided that the growth of the country would soon make Pierre the center of population, especially since the great Sioux reservation of 11,000,000 acres had just been thrown open to settlement. Pierre received a plurality only of the votes, the [illegible] other candidate cities—Huron, Sioux Falls, Mitchell, Watertown and Chamberlain, their vote ranking in the order named.

Pierre is on the east bank of the Missouri, and really seems a point designed by nature for the junction of several lines of traffic. At present there is but one railroad, but that is the great east and west artery of south Dakota—a branch of the Chicago and Northwestern system. The Manitoba system will soon have a line to Pierre, and, of course, the natural routes westward will be utilized in [illegible]

[illegible] and commodious quarters [illegible]. The new hotel, to [illegible] will be after the taste of the [illegible], and, in short, it may be said that Pierre will be able to make the Dakota solons comfortable.

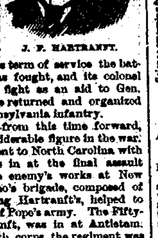
THE LATE GEN. HARTRANFT.

Soldier, Lawyer, State Auditor and Governor of Pennsylvania.

In the death of Gen. Hartranft, of Pennsylvania, the nation, his state and the veterans of the civil war have lost a strong man. John Frederick Hartranft was born in Montgomery county, Pa., in 1830. He was descended from a family which came to America from Silesia in 1694. When he was 14 years old his parents removed to Morristown, where he attended school. He then went to Marshall college, at Mercersburg, and from there to Union college, at Schenectady, N. Y., where he was graduated when he was 23 years old. At Union he studied engineering, and upon leaving college embraced the profession, but soon became deputy sheriff of Montgomery county, Pa. While in this position he studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1859.

Hartranft early took an interest in military matters. Before becoming a lawyer he had joined the Morris City Rifles, becoming first a lieutenant, then captain, and finally colonel.

When the three months' men were called out in the spring of '61 Col. Hartranft marched to the front at the head of this regiment, the Fourth Pennsylvania militia. On the day of the expiration of its term of service the battle of Bull Run was fought, and its colonel went through the fight as an aid to Gen. Franklin. Then he returned and organized the Fifty-first Pennsylvania infantry.



J. F. HARTRANFT.

Col. Hartranft, from this time forward, became no inconsiderable figure in the war. He took his regiment to North Carolina with Burnside, and was in at the final assault which carried the enemy's works at New Berne. There Reno's brigade, composed of regiments including Hartranft's, helped to cover the retreat of Pope's army. The Fifty-first, with Hartranft, was in at Antietam. A part of the Ninth corps, the regiment was sent to Vicksburg. After the fall of that place, with the Ninth corps, it went to East Tennessee to join Burnside, at Knoxville.

Next Hartranft was placed in charge of the Ninth corps in rendezvous for reorganization at Annapolis. The Fifty-first regiment, whose time expired, re-enlisted, and Hartranft was soon at the head of a brigade composed of it and other regiments in Virginia. He was in at the second Bull Run, Chantilly, South Mountain, Wilderness, Fredericksburg, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor, Petersburg and at the fall of Richmond.

He was made a brigadier general for gallantry at Spottsylvania, and brevetted a major general at the close of the war. He retired from the service as the "Hero of Fort Steadman," commemorative of his gallant attack upon and capture of that fort contrary to orders.

In 1865 Gen. Hartranft was elected auditor general of his state and re-elected in 1868. He was then chosen governor, and has since been known as Governor Hartranft of Pennsylvania. When he retired from the office he was made postmaster by President Hayes; before his time expired was made collector, from which office he retired when President Cleveland was elected. He was major general of the National Guard of Pennsylvania at the time of his death.

It Grieved Him So.

Old Sol Baker, a celebrated wild cat killer of the Keystone state, bragged around that he had killed a ton of cats. Some one doubted his story, and he sat down to figure. The total weight was only 1,760 pounds, including one very old cat whom he scared to death, and he was so grieved that he drowned himself. Had he been a coal dealer his ton would have been all right.—Detroit Free Press.

THE PROPER THING.

The tight coat sleeve is dead.

Tartans and stripes grow in favor.

The basque waist is almost a thing of the past.

Skirts grow longer in the back but shorter in front.

Gloves of tan and gray shades will remain in favor all winter.

Entire dresses of crocheted wool are worn by English children.

High waists fastened behind and long sleeves are a feature of the new light silk dresses.

Dressy outside jackets have applique work bordering their loose fronts that open over long vests.

Trained velvet towns will be worn by handsome matrons, young or middle-aged, the coming season.

The cape-sleeved jacket, simulating a cape and waist-coat in front and a jacket in the back, is a new and favorite light wrap.

Rich brocades on satin grounds are the fabrics for handsome winter gowns in combination with plain silks, satin velvet or faced cloth.

Long mantles of the Russian type, with plain loose coat sleeves under the long hanging sleeves, are the models most frequently shown in the cloak departments of the leading houses.

Very elegant tea gowns are somewhat Japanese in cut and in their decorations of gold embroidery. Simpler wrappers are of pale blue or old rose flannel, with princesse back, full front and full sleeves.

Long cloth redingotes, fitted in the back and lapping loosely in front, have a fichu collar of fur following the lapped front to the waist line, and large sleeves with cuffs of fur. Brown furs of long fleece and black Persian lamb are used on clorhs of any dark color.

A great benefit has been secured to the poor by the introduction of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup; for it now only takes 25 cents to cure a cough or cold.

Anybody troubled with rheumatism, neuralgia, stiff neck, or any pain or ache should procure a bottle of Salvation Oil at once. Price 25cts.

THE PROHIBITORY SENTIMENT

Pervading the country is due in a great measure to the large amount of spurious Whiskey that is being sold. Imposed upon by irresponsible dealers who doctor and color up spirits to represent Whiskey, consumers are retaliating by voting to wipe out the entire business. To aid in checking this sentiment by supplying consumers with a pure Whiskey, I am now placing my celebrated "I.W. HARPER OLD NELSON COUNTY, KY. WHISKEY" direct to them, from distillery warehouse.

This whiskey is made from selected rye and corn and barley malt at my distillery in Nelson County, Ky., and represents the highest type of distillation.

As a stimulant or tonic it is prescribed by the leading physicians.

As a beverage it will recommend itself to the most exacting connoisseur. Repectfully

HON. Thomas Hunter of Cayuga county, nominated State Senator from the twenty-seventh senatorial district at the Republican senatorial convention is a brother of John Hunter, senior member of the Hunter-Comstock Arms Co., of this village.

AT the Republican district convention held in Oswego on Thursday last, John T. Mott, W. G. Gage, John H. McGraw, S. F. Kingsford, A. S. Guthrie and Amos Allport were elected delegates to the Congressional Convention held in Weedsport Saturday, which unanimously nominated Hon. Sereno E. Payne for the vacancy caused by the death of Congressman Nutting. T. D. Lewis made a fight at the convention for the position of delegate in place of W. G. Gage, but lacked the votes necessary to get it.

Taxing Railroads.

The Elmira, Cortland & Northern Railroad refuses to pay the taxes levied against its property in the towns of Homer, Cuyler and Truxton, Cortland County, on the plea that such taxes are excessive and exorbitant, and the Company has appealed to the Supreme Court of the Sixth Judicial District for a review and reduction of the tax. The respective Boards of Assessors of these towns have put valuations for tax purposes upon the Company's property within their several borders at from $8,000 to $10,000 per mile of track. The Company maintains that neither the inherent value of the property nor the earnings of the railroad warrant tax valuations greater than $3,000 to $4,000 per mile of track, and asks the Court for an order compelling the towns to correct their levies accordingly. The Court has appointed a referee to take testimony in the case and report.—Rome Sentinel.

[illegible] Oct., and took passage on the ill-fated steamer Quinte that was burned on Wednesday last in Quinte bay.

The steamer left Deseronto at 5:30 p. m. with a crew of twelve and twenty passengers. She carried freight, express and mail for Picton and way ports. When but a few minutes from the dock fire was discovered in the wood work near the fire hole, and the pumps were set at work, but without avail. Pilot Collier beached the boat on a shoal. The captain and crew were at their boats and all efforts were made to save the passengers, who lost self-control and plunged into the water without life preservers.

Mr. Hart in an interview at Belleville says:—

"Upon leaving the dining hall I went to the forward gangway with the intention of getting to the hurricane deck. We tried to release the boat but the heat drove us away. As near as I can remember we all got over the rail and the woman was clinging to me. She had me by my coat tail. When the boat reached shore and the wheel stopped I got into the wheel and rested in the buckets of the wheel until rescued. When the boat came to the aid of our party I sent it to the stern of the boat where I had seen a woman jump into the water, and believe from her struggles that she was drowning. She was the Salvation Army captain and was rescued all right and we were all picked up and taken to the shore. I could have swum to the shore but Colonel Strong was calling for help when we got into the water and I took him by the collar and got him to the paddle box. The woman and her child were also hanging to me and I know it would be useless to attempt to swim ashore with them all, as it would mean death to the whole party. All I lost was a gold ring. I cannot describe the experience of that hour. One hardly had time to realize what was going on before it was over. There was the wildest confusion, cries of despair and the roar of the flames and the crackling of the wood, which all produced an effect that will never be forgotten. It was not until the first excitement was over that it was found that life had been lost, all that were saved thought of course that everybody else had been equally fortunate. I can give no better description of the scene, but it will ever be a panorama before my eyes."

The following were burned, bruised or injured:

Miss A. Sleve Kellar; Mrs. Anderson, cook; Engineer Short; Fireman Harte; Mr. St. Charles; Col. Strong, U. S. Consul at Belleville; Captain Christie.

One of the injured has since died. One paper claims that four were lost, probably by burning. Mrs. Christie, mother of tee captain of the boat,, and her twelve-year-old son, were in the ladies' cabin a few moments before the alarm was given, but have not been seen since and must have been burned. Mrs. Stacey, assistant to the cook, and her young son were in the dining hall and perished in the flames. A lady's maid is also missing. None of the freight or anything belonging to the crew was saved.

Much credit is due Mr. Hart for his bravery and coolness at so critical a time. Fultonians never weaken.

Does It Pay to Advertise?

To business men of every class this is a question of no little importance, as total failure or complete success is often the issue. A young man, just emancipated from parental control, is about to embark in business on his own account. He has a good stock of merchandise on hand for sale, but being only a beginner, he has little patronage. What should he do? Why, advertise. If nobody knows him let him make himself known. A newspaper advertisement, judiciously drawn up, and, if necessary, neatly illustrated, and given to a proper medium, will often suffice to make success almost certain. A good advertisement will ring louder than any bell, and is the staff of life in trade, just as bread is the staff of human life. Advertising enables a business man to place his goods before the eyes of thousands who would otherwise never know of their existence, or that of the owner. It is well known among our most successful merchants that liberal advertising not only pays, but is indispensible to the economical and successful working of their establishments. There are innumerable living instances among us where colossal fortunes have been realized by timely and judicious appeals for patronage through the newspaper and periodical press, while it would be difficult to find an instance in which it failed to pay.—St. Louis Price Current.

[illegible] He was a member of [illegible] Post G. A. R. and of [illegible] Lodge I. O. O. F., which, with visiting brothers from Oswego, New Haven and other places, attended their deceased brother to the grave in a body, headed by the North Scriba Cornet Band, which rendered some fine music for the occasion. The funeral was held from the North Scriba Baptist church and was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Nesbitt in a very impressive manner. Mr. Coe was born at North Scriba fifty-two years ago and has always lived here. He was a very popular business man, was known throughout the county, and respected by all, especially the poor of this town, who were never turned away from his counter for the want of money. The remains were interred at North Scriba cemetery. The grief stricken wife and son have the sympathy of the entire community in their bereavement.

The building lately occupied by W. H. Eggleston as a residence and store was mysteriously burned last Friday night about 7 o'clock. It was owned by Patrick Smith. There was a small insurance. Mr. Eggleston moved out about a week ago.

Gilbert Jennings, proprietor of the Palermo Center House will have a party on Thanksgiving night, and also a raffle about a week before the party.

Wales Marshall and Birna Parker are on the sick list. Dr. Green is attending them.

Mr. Hubbard of Oswego, is to deliver a temperance lecture at the church on Wednesday evening, Nov. 3d.

Palermo Center has another new blacksmith. Wm. Gorman of Central Square, has rented the shop of D. H. Trimble and has commenced work.

Mrs. Nellie Gaffey of Caughdenoy, is in town on a visit.

Mrs. Myron Hills is making some improvements on her house.

Mrs. Hiram Jennings has been on the sick list for some time but is on the gain.

G. W. Bush jr., has purchased the drugs in the store formerly owned by Dr. Todd and is to continue the business there.

Farmers' cellars look empty, this season with but few potatoes and garden vegetables in them and no apples.

At the last sale of cheese from our factory it took 9.65 pounds of milk to make one pound of cheese. The cheese was made from Sept. 5th to 10th.

Our Type Writer factory is crowded with orders, Workmen are constantly added to its force. They have over 150 orders ahead. The upper story is partitioned off with several roomsone, for the Superintendent, one for nickel plating, one for packing and two for teaching typewriting and stenography. To any one who purchases a typewriter, typewriting and stenography will be taught free. This factory is one which not only the town of Parish has reason to be proud of but the county of Oswego. It will work alongside of the best typewriters in the countey.

For reason satasfactoay to the Regents of the University, our Academy will have three Regent's examinations in one year under the superintendence of Prof. Scribner. Our school is progressing finely.

There is but little stir in politics in this town. Parish is solid for David for Surrogate. We learn that some farmers in the first assembly district are thinking seriously of voting for Farmer Howard for assemblyman. We cannot see why farmers should not go to the legislature as well as anybody. We have often thought that farmers are too generous politically in voting for persons of other callings rather than for themselves.

Short of the Mark.

That's what much of the clothing sold around town is and in more senses than one. Much of it that is labelled all wool comes a long way from being so. A good deal of clothing that looks well made, in the window, or even on the merchant's table, is often not up to the mark of what it should be in wearing quality. The desire to constantly lower the price is resposible for much of the trash offered for sale.

A point we insist upon is that value must take precedence of price. The clothing we sell must not only look well, it must wear well. Our aim is never to offer a garment for sale that can in any sense be said to be too short for the mark. If it proves so, bring back the article and we will cheerfully make it right.

[illegible] He says that the United States [illegible] supervise Congressional [illegible] up thoroughly [illegible] the only [illegible] here. The [illegible] done in this [illegible] The law, whatever it may be, has to be enforced by State officials and the witnesses, and everybody else connected with the case come from the community which is oftentimes in sympathy with the violator of the law. No statute can be enforced where the public does not desire to enforce it.

Mr. Brown directs his fire against the Southern districts, which have small voting on their general elections—the black districts. There are, of course, two sides to the case. Congressman Catchings, of Mississippi, says the idea that the negroes of the South are sitting up nights waiting for a chance to deposit an honest ballot, is a mistake. He does not think that fifty per cent of those in the districts that are overwhelmingly one way or the other, have gone to the polls in the last ten years. Negroes will pick cotten within one hundred yards of the polls and never quit to cast their votes, except such as are paid for going directly, and such bribery is seldom necessary, majorities being so large. The trouble is that the colored people of the South do not read the current literature of the day and have no conception of economic questions. For themselves they see no direct benefit to be reaped from political life, and they know that it now means simply who shall hold office. There was a time, in the sixties, when they were first freed, when to their minds, their salvation depended upon voting the Republican ticket. They were packed about the polls waiting to exercise their prerorgatives. The lapse of time, peace, security, has brought a feeling of indifference. Thus, and much more, Mr. Catchings, and thus you see the fallacy of putting your trust in princes, especially if the princes be Messrs. Browne and Catchings. It is a long way from India to Mississippi.

Though it rained and blew and snowed here day before yesterday, the meeting of the National Board of Promotion of the proposed exposition in Washington in 1892, was an unqualified success. The meeting was called for noon, but long before that time, and long afterwards, delegates kept arriving, until the attendance was far in excess of even the most sanguine expectations. There were more than one hundred men present as delegates—representative men, governors, mayors, capitalists—from every state from Maine to California, from Dakota to Florida. It had been supposed that the spacious main parlors of Willard's Hotel, opened together, would accommodate the assembly, but so great was the crowd, that it was found necessary to hold the business meeting in Willard Hall. Among those present were Governor Biggs, of Delaware, Governor Fleming, of Florida, and Governor Jackson, of Maryland.

In his report to the promoters, Secretary Anderson was particularly happy, and his presentation of the claims of Washington was most convincing. He called attention to the fact that there is already here the nucleus of an exposition that has already cost the government over $50,000,000, and every year adds to the expenditure. This is the National museum, the Capitol, the Patent Office, the Washington Monument, and the various government buildings, with their stores of relics and treasures of art and their exhibits of the practical workings of the government. These are practically no exhibit of themselves. To be sure, some of them could be loaned, as they have been in the past, but they could be only a part of all the attractions, and it would be better to keep even these permanently at the seat of government, rather than to further engage in the traveling show business of lugging these goods to expositions all over the country.

If an industrial or commercial city secures the exposition, it must be at the cost of her neighbors, for during the exposition she would receive the trade of the country. Washington is neutral ground. She has nothing to sell, no commercial interests to foster. Located here, the exposition would give the rival mrnufacturing and commercial centres equal chances for the Spanish-American trade.

Board of Trustees' Proceedings

FULTON, N. Y., October 23d, 1889.

Board met pursuant to adjournment.

Present, President Wilson and Trustees Johnson, Wolever and Patterson.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The President reported that he had received $9 for one oil lamp sold, presenting Treasurer's receipt.

The Street Commissioner presented receipt from the Treasurer for $7.37 for money received from the Commissioner of Highways of the town of Volney for plank and labor on Emery road bridge.

Trustee Kellogg came in.

The Commissioners appointed to assess damages arising from the laying out of the highway extending easterly from Broadway to Oscar Dines' reported as follows:

TO THE HONORABLE, THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE VILLAGE OF FULTON, N. Y.

Gentlemen:—We, the undersigned, Commissioners duly appointed to assess the damages arising from the laying out of the highway extending easterly from Broadway to the highway at Oscar Dines' and crossing and taking lands of the Mt. Adnah Cemetery Association, John W. Pratt, Robert Dines, James M. Chesebro, Charity Slater, Mrs. Susan M. Chesebro, Mary B. Warner, Charles Browning, and Geo. B. Parker, beg to report that first having taken the oath of office, we appointed a day and place of hearing, due notice of which was duly given to each of said interested parties, and having heard the proofs offered and examined the said premises, we find that the benefits to be derived to each of said parties and to their remaining lands by the opening of such street, will at least equal the value of the land taken and the damages caused by such taking, and therefore award no damages and make no assessment for payment of damages, to or against either of said persons.—Dated, October 23d, 1889.

N. E. BURDICK,
FRANK DILTS,
H. E. NICHOLS,
Commissioners.

Mr. Salladin appeared before the Board and asked permission to build an addition on the north side of his house on Second street, within the fire limits.

F. D. VanWagenen also appeared and asked permission to build an annex to his barn in the rear of the VanWagenen block on First street.

Permission was in each case granted.

Marcus Crahan from the Fire Department reported the unsafe condition of the boiler of Steamer No. 1.

On motion of Trustee Johnson the President and Trustees Patterson and Kellogg were appointed a Committee to examine the boiler and report at the next meeting.

The following bills were reported correct by the Finance Committee and Clerk directed to draw orders on the proper funds for the amounts:

P. Fitzgibbons, repairs Steamer No. 2,	$114.13
Alonzo Clark, serving notices,	1.00
C. Wolever, Street Commissioner,	96.50
H. E. Nichols, Com'r. to assess damages,	6.00
N. E. Burdick, " " "	6.00
Frank Dilts, " " "	6.00

On motion the Board adjourned for two weeks.

M. C. HIGHRITER, Clerk.

Cheese Market Report

(From the Utica Herald.)

AT UTICA.

UTICA, Oct. 28.

Business was dull to-day, and prices were not named until a late hour. There was no stir, and but little competition except on some of the best lots, September cheese was closed out by a large number of factories, but there are a few that still carry a week or two of the make of that month and occasionally one that has the whole month's cheese on hand. Buyers thought they had paid quite enough to-day, and in some cases more than they could really afford to pay. There was considerable talk of the syndicate operations, and inquiry developed the fact that many of the factories have already given options on their property. Following are the sales of the day:

51	4,490	9½
33	2,797	9¾
8	755	9⅞
40	3,469	10c.
1	120	10⅛
136	11,755
	890	Com.
Total	12,645

Ruling 9½c. Transaction one year ago 10,018 boxes, ruling price 9⅝c. Two years ago 12,064 boxes, ruling 10¼c.

There were sales of butter at 23 to 25c. Bulk at 23c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, Oct. 28.

Cheese—The market opened dull, with buyers claiming fully one-half cent lower prices. Not much activity was shown at any time and trade was slow, many buyers waiting later than usual in hopes of securing better rates. The home trade appears to have lost its former briskness and is not offering any better prices than the export trade. While there has been no general holding back of stocks, there were some salesmen who were offered better than 9½c who refused to sell. The general expression of opinion is that prices have probably reached bottom, and that it will not be long before some improvement will be shown. But who can tell? It is all guess work. The transactions are:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
2	98	9c.
41	2,475	9¼
44	3,137	9½
3	215	10c.
8	530	Com.
97	6,455
Farm dairies	975
Total.	7,430

Farm Dairies—Prices on the morning market averaged better than the factory market, ranging from 9¼ to 10¼c., with the bulk at 9¾c. Sales reached 975 boxes.

Butter—Forty-four packages dairy butter sold at 20 to 25c., very little at the latter price. The bulk sold at 21c

AT FULTON.

Twenty factories were represented at this market Monday night with 2,500 boxes of cheese. 500 boxes sold at 9¼ to 9½ cents.

Conger's Patent Chest-Shield and Double Seated Underwear.

CAMEL'S HAIR,
NATURAL WOOL,
WHITE AND SCARLET.

It is recommended by leading physicians, and prevents pneumonia and kindred diseases, is manufactured in scarlet, white and natural wool.

Conger's "Chest-Shield" Underwear contains a Chest and Lung Protector with an ordinary undershirt. It is opened at the back instead of front for the purpose of preventing draughts of cold air through the front, which, especially, when one is very warm produces those chilly sensations which often terminate in congestion of the chest so prevalent of late years in our changeable climate, the Shield being both on the back and front protects all the vital parts, and the experience of everyone will agree with us that to be kept warm on the back, particularly between the shoulders and down the spine, is the only sure method of keeping the ENTIRE BODY COMFORTABLE. PNEUMONIA is the most dreaded disease known in our changeable climate during at least six months of the year, and it will increase just as long as you neglect proper protection to the vital points at the back and chest. THE CHEST-SHIELD UNDERSHIRT WILL PROTECT YOU AS THOUSANDS WHO HAVE WORN IT WILL TESTIFY.

It costs but a trifle more than the usual style of Underwear and will save in COMFORT and HEALTH much more than you might want to expend for remedies to cure diseases of the lungs etc.

It is not at all clumsy, sets on the body like a jacket and buttons at the back of the neck as easy as buttoning a collar on your shirt. Try it for one season and you will realize that we speak the truth while you will gain comfort and retain health. Ask for the "Chest-Shield" and double seated Underwear at

PERSONAL.

Mrs. G. O. Cooper started for her home in Lansing, Mich., last evening.

Miss Matie McGann of Auburn is visiting her parents in Oswego Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Livinstone of St. Louis Mo., are the guests of C. S. Osgood.

Mr. and Mrs. Mac Miller of Picton, Canada, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dr. D. E. Lake.

S. Osborne left yesterday for Michigan. From there he goes to Dakota City, Iowa, to spend the winter.

Dr. G. V. Emens is in attendance at the Dental Convention now in session at Elmira. He expects to return this evening.

Rev. J. C. Breaker is in Hornellsville this week attending the Baptist State Mission Convention. He will return Friday.

Mrs. J. M. Warner who has been spending several weeks at A. L. Warner's, returned to Kirkville, N. Y., on Monday.

Dr. I. C. Curtis is in attendance at a Dental Convention being held in Elmira, where he reads a paper on "Treatment and filling of pulpless teeth." He also gives a clinic on the same subject.

Earl Hinds of this village met his brother, F. M. Hinds of Mexico, week before last for the first time. Earl left his home before his brother was born and came here to Fulton, thirty-eight years ago.

R. T. Owen, supervisor of the town of Norwich, N. Y., was the guest of G. C. Webb and G. W. Morton on Thursday last. Mr. Owen is the man that had charge of these two Fultonians and kept them straight during their recent trip to the North Woods.

Pleasant Evenings.

Arrangements are nearly completed for a series of lectures, talks, recitations, songs, &c., to be conducted in Grace Mission Chapel. There will be relation of personal experience by some of our best talent.

This series will begin next Monday evening. The time of opening will be 7:30 p. m. The price for course tickets is 25 cents. Single admission 5 cents. Tickets on sale at C. S. Eggleston's.

Among those who have signified their willingness to take part and the subjects on which they will talk, are the following: China and Japan, Harry Comstock; Out West, F. E. Bacon; Andersonville, R. B. McCully and Peter Youngs; Europe and Back, E. R. Redhead; Army Life, George Ward and James Printy; Magic Lantern and Chemistry, Prof. Clapp; Life in the British Army and Navy, J. Barnhard and S. Green; Palestine, the Holy City, Prof. C. S. Eggleston; Price of Liberty, Capt. Palmer; Ten Nights in a Bar Room, Fred Bennett of the Patriot. These talks will certainly be interesting and instructive as the gentlemen are all well versed on the subjects on which they are to speak and if not out of place permit us to lay particular stress on this point in connection with the last talk named on the list.

Fine Success of Revival Meetings at the Universalist Church.

These meetings are making a very deep impression on the public mind. To those not accustomed to attend Universalist meetings, it is a surprise to them to know and feel the deep spiritual impression that prevails. The religion of Christ is placed upon the high ground of righteousness because it is right. The love of God is the power presented to move to consecration and devotion instead of fear. Sure retribution for sin is presented as a part of God's government, and as a remedial agent, like the correction of a child, to bring the sinner to see the heinousness of sin, and the need of Christ as a saviour.

The impressiveness of these services, the pulpit ability displayed, the deep christian spirit manifested, the high character of the singing by Rev. Stanford Mitchell and the pathos by which he renders it, all combine to make these meetings such that all Christians may well bid these worker's God speed, and should go and help them along. Let brotherly love prevail. They will close next Sunday. ***

NOTES.

At the Universalist church last evening there was a large audience, the church being practically full. The meeting was one of unusual interest, taking into account the remarkably fine singing of Stamford Mitchell and the sermon of Rev. Mr. Brunning on the parable of the "Ninety and Nine," which for its urgent pleading for Christian lives and work and doctrinal points showing the mission, power and success of Christ in the purpose for which he was sent. His people congratulated him very heartily at the close of the services.

There will be a prayer meeting tomorrow night at the Universalist church at a quarter to 7 o'clock. At 7:30 services Rev. Stamford Mitchell will not only sing but he will also preach, and he is said to be able to preach as well as he sings.

To Our Subscribers.

The SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT which appeared in our columns some time since, announcing a special arrangement with Dr. B. J. KENDALL Co., of Enosburgh Falls, Vt., publishers of "A Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases," whereby our subscribers were enabled to obtain a copy of that valuable work FREE by sending their address (and enclosing two-cent stamp for mailing same) is renewed for a limited period. We trust all will avail themselves of the opportunity of obtaining this valuable work. To every lover of the Horse it is indispensable, as it treats in a simple manner all the diseases which afflict this noble animal. Its phenomenal sale throughout the United States and Canada, make it standard authority. Mention this paper when sending for "Treatise." 25 m 3

Two hundred and fifty extra copies of THE TIMES of Oct. 16th, were sold. This number contained the account of the laying of the corner stone of the new Catholic church and Father McGuiness' sermon.

The lecture of Belle Boyd, the rebel spy, under the auspices of Post Schenck G. A. R., last Wednesday evening at the Opera House was fairly well attended and the lecture gave excellent satisfaction.

The friends and neighbors of Chauncey Wolever got up a "husking bee" for him last Thursday and Friday afternoons and husked about 60 bushels of corn. Mr. Wolever and one of his boys were sick and this deed of kindness is fully appreciated.

Thursday and Friday evenings Rev. Ure Mitchell of Cortland is expected at the Universalist church. On Saturday night there will be no services. On Sunday morning communion services will be had, sermon by the pastor, and the meetings close on Sunday night with a sermon by Rev. S. Mitchell, the singer.

The marriage of Miss Rena Reynolds to Mr. Edward J. Howard, occurred yesterday at Mt. Pleasant, Iowa. The newly married couple will reside at Seattle, W. T. The bride is a neice of Mrs. J. G. Reynolds of Granby and T. B. Reynolds of Fulton. She made many friends during her visit here last summer.

Bald heads and a large number yet in the flush of youth took in the entertainment at the opera house Saturday evening. The manner of advertising the show which was Rose Hill's Folly Co. indicates questionable taste, at least in every respect except from a financial standpoint. A large crowd of the sterner sex were there and a good variety entertainment was given.

Reno, the magician, gave two most excellent entertainments at the opera house on Thursday and Friday evenings. We have seen Hermann and Kellar but fail to see where they surpasses Reno in the tricks performed. He is an artist that cannot help but please all that witness his performance and it embraces many marvels in necromancy. Crowded houses await him should he again visit Fulton.

Deputy Sheriff Murphy sold the furniture, fixtures, cigars, liquors etc., property of M. Holkins the present proprietor of the Lewis house on Saturday last to satisfy a judgment of $140. in favor of Mrs. Frances Smith of Watertown. The entire stock was bid in by the clerk, George Bell for $9.50, This was just as the proprpriettor of the Lewis house desired it should be. Smith who levied on the goods is a pop beer man. Doing business in his wife's name. The account was a disputed one, and was contracted several years ago. The amount for which the stock was bid in at just pays the deputy sheriff's fees.

First of November comes on Friday of this week and with it comes Prof. J. S. Riggs from Auburn, this state, who will lecture in the opera house in the evening of that day on "Athens and the Modern Greeks." The Professor has not only read of this ancient and historic city and its people, but has, in person, visited and made a study of them for many months at a time. No doubt but he will make his lecture intensely interesting and instructive, and by the aid of the sterioptican will bring this renowned city very vividly before the minds and eyes of all who shall be privileged to get within seeing distance. From the sale of tickets up to date and the expressed desire from a large number the prospects are that the opera house will be crowded to overflowing.

Secure tickets and seats as early as possible, either from committee or at Watson's drug store.

The gymnasium classes have started very promisingly and still room left for a few more in both classes. Students on Friday at 8:30 p. m., and regular class on Tuesday evening at 8:30. Dumb and bar bells have been ordered and will be here in two or three days.

The week of prayer for young men which is observed throughout this and other lands, and which was instituted at the Albany convention of Young Men's Christian Associations, in 1866, will be fittingly recognized here. Sunday November 10th, begins the week. On this day the pastors of the several churches will speak about and too young men, and in the afternoon a mass meeting will be held in which the different phases of the work, for this important element of every community will be presented. Special services will be held on the Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings following in our own rooms.

Next Sunday meeting as usual, to which every man, old and young, is cordially invited. Music, singing and addresses, attractive, hearty and thoroughly profitable. Come, and welcome! ***

Guy Bros'. Minstrels.

We copy the following from the Biddeford Daily News:—The popular Guy Bros'. Minstrels gave an excellent show at the City Opera House last evening. This is decidedly the best show that has been in our city for years, every feature being new, the costumes were magnificent, the songs were catchy, the marches, drills and dances were well executed. The hits of the evening were made by the famous comedians G. R. and W. H. Guy in their comical songs and dances. The burlesque on the "Japs" brought down the house. The Guy Brothers are sure of a crowded house when they come again.

The advance sale of reserved seats for Rev. J. S. Riggs' lecture on "Athens and the Modern Greeks" has been very large. The lecture will be at the opera house, next Friday evening and it will be crowded.

We have attended a great many poor shows but at the present moment fail to recall the time when we have seen so many poor actors collected together in one aggregation as those that played at the opera house last evening.

The young people's society of Christian Endeavor of the M. E. church have completed arrangements for a grand concert to be held at the church on Friday evening, Nov. 8. The artist that take part come highly recommended. See advertisement.

Do not forget the meeting of the Pathfinder Boat Club at Armory Hall next Monday evening. A movement is on foot for a series of entertainments this winter and there are other things of importance to be considered. All members are urged to attend.

The concert given by the singing convention at the Baptist church Friday evening was not largely attended but gave excellent satisfaction to those that were there. The large number that took lessons under Prof. Robertson speak in high terms of the methods employed and pronounce it a scheme that is productive of much good from a musical standpoint.

In a neighboring town one Sunday evening recently a minister closed his sermon as follows: "We would be pleased, moreover, to have the young man who is now standing outside the door come in and make certain whether she is here or not. That would be a great deal better than opening the door half an inch and exposing the people in the last row of seats to a draught.

The second anniversary of the Grace Mission will occur next Sunday. In the afternoon Rev. W. D. Chase will give a talk and in the evening will occur the regular monthly temperance service. Prof. Clapp will give a discourse on the effects of alcohol on the human system. Mrs. C. M. Lee will render two selections from John B. Gough. Quartet singing under the leadership of Will Buck.

[illegible] EXCURSION.

A Happy Time Spent with Kingston, Ont., Brethren.

Royally entertained does not express it. The thirty-nine members of Hiram Lodge No. 144 F. & A. M. of Fulton were more than royally entertained by the three Kingston, Ont. lodges during their recent visit there. Starting from Fulton on Tuesday morning Oct. 22 Cape Vincent was reached at 11:30 a. m. Here they were met by Right Worshipful Brother W. L. Hamilton, P. D. D. G. M. of Kingston, the ex mayor of Kingston and now internal revenue inspector, and went immediately to the steamer. On their arrival at Kingston they were met at the wharf by Dist. Deputy Wilkinson and a delegation of officers from the three lodges. They were conducted in carriages to the two leading hotels, the Frontenac and British American.

From the time the members of Hiram Lodge entered Kingston until their departure everything was done by the hospitable Canadians to make the visit one of continuous enjoyment.

At 1:30 on the day of arrival they were taken in carriages on a visit to the penitentiary. This of course was no new sight to several of the boys, but the delightful ride and visit was enjoyable nevertheless—then the insane asylum was visited and points of interest in the "Limestone city" and its suburbs pointed out.

At 8 o'clock in the evening the visiting members of the Fulton lodge, Cape Vincent lodge, and a few members from Watertown and Sandy Creek lodges, were welcomed in the lodge room by R. W. Bro. Welch and R. W., H. J. Wilkinson as D. D. G. M. The grand master R. T. Walkem, Q. C., entered the lodge room and was received with honors of his rank. He also welcomed the American brethren. Responses were made by I. C. Curtis and Rev. J. C. Breaker of Hiram lodge, and W. Bro. Woodruff of Cape Vincent lodge.

The exemplification of the third degree work was then entered upon, the following members of Hiram lodge acting as officers:

W. M., Dr. I. C. Curtis,
S. W., T. D. Lewis,
J. W., W. Hastings,
S. D., G. C. Webb,
J. D., Robt. McKay,
S. M. C., A. E. Keller,
J. M. C., W. W. Loomis.

The work is reported by Kingston papers as being admirably rendered in every particular. A banquet in the lodge room followed when speeches and songs were given in abundance,

At ten o'clock the following day the Fultonians were again taken out in carriages and visited the Royal Military college, Fort Henry and Tete du Pont barracks. At 3:30 p. m. they started homeward with vivid recollections of their pleasant trip and the hospitable manner in which they had been entertained.

Have You Heard It?

We refer to the Edison Phonograph now on exhibition at the rooms over Williams' drug store on Oneida street. The phonograph is small, no larger than a sewing machine, but it gets there every time, reproducing conversation and music with distinctness that is wonderful. The representative of THE TIMES went in yesterday to look the phonograph over. A small cylinder about two inches in diameter and four inches long, made of some composition, is that on which the sounds are received. This cylinder is caused to revolve by means of a pedal attached to the machine, and is capable of receiving about 2,500 words, which can be reproduced at any time. The reproduction comes through a funnel that looks very much like a bass horn in a brass band. The music of a celebrated band of New York, quartet singers, and several kinds of instruments were heard. If anyone has a desire to see the great invention of the greatest of all inventors, they will have an opportunity for a few days at the place above mentioned. Admission is 10 cents.

WORTH KNOWING.

From Pennsylvania come reports of a big tobacco crop.

The Farmers Review estimates this year's corn crop at 2,368,392,068 bushels.

The Rural New-Yorker suggests that one way of breaking up a hen that persists in sitting is to place her in a yard with a harmless dog.

Fat poultry should be sold now. There will never be a better time to dispose of such stock.

According to the Michigan Dairyman, the Peninsula State now has 113 cheese factories, 107 creameries, and two condensed milk factories.

There is little, if any, profit in a crop of 500 bushels of wheat from fifty acres, says Farm and Fireside; but there may be a good profit in a crop of 500 bushels from twenty acres.

Waldo F. Brown thinks that no farm should be without at least three good ladders—one long one that will easily reach to the top of the barn, one of medium length, and a good step ladder.

The proportion of the more valuable food material increases till the kernels are fully developed and begin to harden. Unless in cases of scarcity it is not wise to use the corn until this stage is reached.

Prices this year have averaged about as well as last and the outlook is as good, if not better, for the poultry keeper as it is for the grower of any other farm crop.

The best sermons are oftentimes the briefest, and American Agriculturist, in the statements here presented, tells some very important facts in the fewest of words:

On an average, the man with the fewest clods in the field in the fall has the most wheat in the field the next summer.

Good farming consists as much in overcoming adverse circumstances as in improving fully favorable opportunities.

Pay cash if you have to borrow money to do it. The banker will charge you less than the merchant for credit.

There is some sentiment about having an ice house on the farm, but there is at least as much financial wisdom.

The moon is never right while the seed bed is cloddy.

Before you enlarge production cheapen its cost.

"No more laudanum for our babies." All mothers unite in pronouncing Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup the best soothing remedy now sold. It is free from opiates.

Laxador is the best tonic and regulator in the market. It is recommended for all bowel, stomach and liver affections. Price only 25 cents.

Don't Keep Poor Stock.

Please listen to a few admonitory suggestions, such as are especially seasonable in the Fall and will bear repeating annually. It will not pay to keep poor, unprofitable stock at any season, and particularly through the Winter. Every farmer who raises stock has some which it will not pay to keep longer. Just as soon as stock reach maturity they should be sold. It is a daily loss to keep them longer, for they soon eat themselves up—that is, they will soon consume their own value in food. Hogs that are nine or ten months old should be fattened and killed. Cows that are getting old should be sold off. Two or three year old steers should be sold. The flock of sheep should be culled out and the oldest well fed and sold as soon as got in order. Horses that are not needed should be put in marketable shape and sent to market. Get rid of the poorest and feed the balance with what they would have eaten. Hold on to the best, and continue to make them better still by good care and feeding.

One Fact

Is worth a column of rhetoric, said an American statesman. It is a fact, established by the testimony of thousands of people, that Hood's Sarsaparilla does cure scrofula, salt rheum, and other diseases or affections arising from impure state or low condition of the blood. It also overcomes that tired feeling, creates a good appetite, and gives strength to every part of the system. Try it.

Bright's Disease.

A Ten-Year-Old Child Saved After the Failure of Four Physicians.

My little girl, ten years of age, was taken sick in March, 188[illegible], with scarlet fever. When recovering she took a severe cold, which developed Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. Her ankles, feet and eyes were terribly swollen; she had a burning fever, and all the symptoms of an aggravated case of Bright's Disease. Four of our best physicians attended her, but without success, and

Her Life was Despaired of.

But a mother's love and prayers surmounted all difficulties, and I determined to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y. This was a last resort, and I hoped, although my little daughter's case was a very severe one, that the Favorite Remedy would do for her what it had done for others whose condition had not been, seemingly, so hopeless. How happy I am that I [illegible]

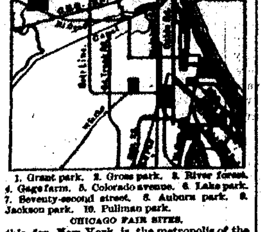
WORLD'S FAIR SCHEMES.

SITES PROPOSED BY THE CITY OF CHICAGO.

Plan of A. Degraff Hinsdale for a Monster and Novel Structure that Shall Completely Dwarf the Eiffel Tower that Has Been So Great a Success in Paris.

All the world in America is interested in the struggle for the World's fair between New York and Chicago. There is [illegible] for



1. Grant park. 2. Gross park. 3. River forest. 4. Gage farm. 5. Colorado avenue. 6. Lake park. 7. Seventy-second street. 8. Auburn park. 9. Jackson park. 10. Pullman park.

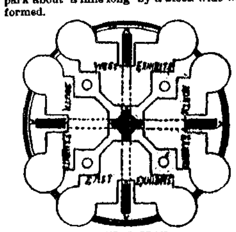
CHICAGO FAIR SITES.

this, for New York is the metropolis of the eastern states and Chicago is the metropolis of what should now be called the middle states, for Illinois and the states about it are no longer western.

Chicago has plenty of sites to offer. She is built on a prairie, and a level plain stretches south and west of her for hundreds of miles. There are sites north, west and south. Two have been mentioned on the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, three more lie due west, while among her parks to the southward are three more, with one at Pullman.

But there is one proposed site, perhaps the most available of all, in the very heart of the city. This is what is called the Lake front. What the Lake front is it may be well to explain to those who have never been in Chicago.

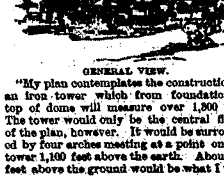
The Illinois Central railroad enters the city from the south, skirting Lake Michigan from Hyde Park to the Union depot. From Twelfth street to the depot, about a dozen blocks, there is an open space, bounded on the south by Twelfth street, on the east by the lake, on the west by Michigan boulevard, and on the north by the depot. Before the Chicago fire this space was the margin of Lake Michigan, the railroad running on trestle work several hundred yards out in the lake. After that fire the debris of the burned city was dumped there and the space between the railroad and Michigan boulevard was filled up. Grass was sown and a level park about a mile long by a block wide was formed.



GENERAL PLAN.

Since then the lake front has been used for military reviews, fireworks on the evenings of gala days, and other like purposes. On one end of it stand the exposition buildings, where Republican and Democratic national conventions have been held; where Garfield and Cleveland and Blaine were nominated for president. It is within a few blocks of the principal hotels and convenient to all the shops. It faces Lake Michigan for its whole length, and during the heated term, during a part of which the fair is to be held, will be fanned by cool breezes from the lake.

New York has come forth lately with a plan for a tower structure which is so made that it lays the Eiffel affair completely in the shade. Mr. A. De Graff Hinsdale, a New York architect, has conceived a plan which he has copyrighted. It was first published in The New York Press, and his description is here copied by permission:



GENERAL VIEW.

"My plan contemplates the construction of an iron tower which from foundation to top of dome will measure over 1,800 feet. The tower would only be the central figure of the plan, however. It would be surrounded by four arches meeting at a point on the tower 1,100 feet above the earth. About 500 feet above the ground would be what I term midway arches, supporting an immense floor that could be used as a promenade and for divers purposes, such as concerts, restaurants, museums, or anything of that kind. The floor would be so large that it would accommodate at one time all the visitors who would be likely to visit the exposition in a day. I estimate the number at 500,000. The structure would be substantial and firm.

"The diameter of the ground space to be occupied by the tower—that is, from the foot of one outer arch to the foot of the opposite one—would be 2,500 feet, giving ample room between the bases of the arches and the tower for the construction of exposition buildings. At the ground end of each large arch would be a depot for passengers, who would be conveyed from the ground to the top of the arches, 1,100 feet up, in cars operated by means of a continuous cable system. In each arch there would be two up and two down tracks. The tracks will be above, necessitating the suspension of the cars. They will be so suspended that they will always remain level.

"At the summit of the large arches there will be a grand union depot, the sixteen cars coming to the edge of a platform several hundred feet square. From this point the top of the lookout tower can be reached by sixteen special and independent elevators.

"The midway arches and grand promenade will have six separate elevators at the end of each arch, making forty-eight in all. In the center of the tower there will be twenty elevators running from the ground to the highest platform—1,300 feet above.

"The symbolical part of the design will be found in the position of the feet of the arches, which would be north, south, east and west. In the northern quarter would be placed the exhibit from the north, and so on. At the top of the whole structure would be a statue of Columbus, with his face to the west, and at the base of each arch would be a small pedestal tower, with groups symbolic of the quarters of the globe which they respectively face. The whole structure would be lighted by electricity at night, making a magnificent sight that would be visible for miles.

"The cost of the tower and the arches complete, if built according to my idea, would be about [illegible]."

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." Mrs. Ella A. Goff, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

SULPHUR BITTERS

The Best and Purest Medicine EVER MADE.

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin clean and smooth. Those Pimples and Blotches which mar your beauty are caused by impure blood, and can be removed in a short time, if you are wise and use the great blood purifier,

SULPHUR BITTERS. Why suffer with Boils? Why rave with that terrible Headache? Why lay and toss on the bed of pain, with Rheumatism? What makes you trouble so?—Your nerves are all unstrung, and need a gentle soothing tonic to assist nature to repair the damage which your excesses have caused. Sulphur Bitters is not a cheap Rum or poor Whiskey drink, to be taken by the glass, like other preparations which stimulate only to DESTROY. If you have failed to receive any benefit from other medicines or doctors, do not despair. Use SULPHUR BITTERS. They will cure you where all others fail. No person can remain long sick who uses SULPHUR Bitters.

The Dose is small—only a tea spoonful. It is the best and cheapest medicine. Try it, and you will be satisfied. Get it of your Druggist.

DON'T WAIT. GET IT AT ONCE.

If you are suffering from Kidney Disease, and wish to live to old age, use SULPHUR BITTERS. They never fail to cure.

RENEWS HER YOUTH.

Mrs. Phœbe Chesley, Peterson, Clay Co., Iowa, tells the following remarkable story, the truth of which is vouched for by the residents of the town. "I am 73 years old, have been troubled with kidney complaint and lameness for many years; could not dress myself without help. Now I'm free from all pain and soreness and can do all my own housework. I owe my thanks to Electric Bitters for having renewed my youth, and removed completely all disease and pain. Try a bottle, 50c. and $1, at R. E. Phillips' drug store.

There are 3,000 medical women in the United States whose incomes range from $5,000 to 20,000 a year.

A Woman's Discovry.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made and that too by a lady in this county. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed eminent. For three months she coughed incessently and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for the Consumption and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz. Thus write W. C. Hamrick & Co. of Shelby N. C.—Get a free trial bottle at R. E. Phillips' drug store

Wh[illegible] my youth away;

[illegible] lives forever,

And a [illegible] dies in a day.

I am sick of the showy seeming

Of a life that is half a lie;

Of the faces lined with scheming

In the [illegible] that hurries by.

From the sleepless thought's endeavor

I would go where the children play.

For a dreamer lives forever,

And a toiler dies in a day.

I feel no pride but pity

For the burdens the rich endure;

There is nothing sweet in the city

But the patient lives of the poor.

Oh, the little hands so skillful,

And the child mind choked with weeds,

The daughter's heart grows willful,

And the father's heart that bleeds.

No, no! from the street's rude bustle,

From trophies of mart and stage,

I would fly to the wood's low rustle,

And the meadow's kindly page.

Let us dream as of old by the river,

And be loved for the dream alway,

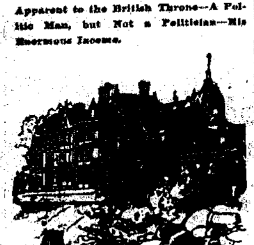
For the dreamer lives forever,

And the toiler dies in a day.

IS THE PRINCE DYING?

QUEEN VICTORIA'S SON SAID TO HAVE BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

Some of the Characteristics of the Heir Apparent to the British Throne—A Politic Man, but Not a Politician—His Enormous Income.



A GOOD deal more than a hint comes from London that the Prince of Wales has been informed by his physicians that he has that incurable ailment known as Bright's disease of the kidneys. If this be true there is no probability of his ever sitting on the English throne. There are yet no signs of any breaking down in his mother, the queen, and there is no malady more sure to bring death than Bright's disease.

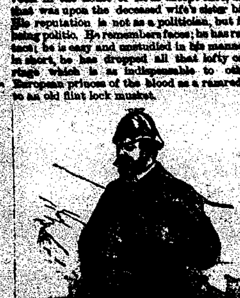
The English people would regard the death of Albert Edward as a great misfortune to them. This may seem singular, since his reputation in America is that of a profligate. One hears of him at the theatres paying especial attention to the most beautiful actresses. In India, some years ago, he was said to have given free vent to his immoral tastes and shocked the civilized world. Recently he witnessed a sparring match in which the bruiser John L. Sullivan took part. Why is it, then, that the English people take so great an interest in the life of this man, who is neither great nor good?

In the first place the prince had largely finished sowing his "wild oats" ten years ago. Of late those scandals with which his name was formerly connected seem to have ceased. His English taste for manly sports led him to view a sparring match, perhaps an undignified act for one of his position, but it would easily be forgiven by a nation whose young men all read sporting papers; and whose school boys are trained to box and settle their disputes in a ring. Indeed, one of the elements of popularity of Albert Edward is that he is the patron in England of those hardy sports which have given such strength and courage to Englishmen, and enabled them always to do more with fewer troops than any other nation.

The prince, though not a great man, is far seeing. One occupying his position, belonging to a family set apart from all others except of royal blood, would be expected to hold to the belief that he was secure in his position. The prince does not take this view of royalty in England. He has watched the democratic tendency of the age and adapted himself to it. He has the wisdom to follow public opinion rather than stand against it. The Prince of Wales is the most democratic man of those enjoying a similar position in Europe. He makes it a point to become identified with all classes. He can always be counted upon to take a part in meetings and other matters tending to benefit the public.

He constantly is called upon to preside at these meetings, and his speeches are remarkable for being adapted to the audience and to the purpose. To hospitals, churches, public buildings of all kinds he constantly lends the interest attaching to his presence, and is kept busy either in laying their corner stones or at their dedication. In this way he becomes identified with the people whose king, it was supposed, he would one day be, and it is perhaps this want of holding aloof from them, common with his predecessors, which has led him to that democratic demeanor he shows whenever court etiquette will permit. He goes about quite as other people go, and of late years it has been a common occurrence to see him riding in the park in a hansom cab.

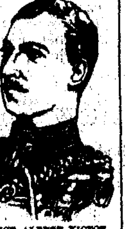
It is said that the prince would do well in politics; not that he troubles himself as to the law making of the nation, for he has never availed himself of his privilege as a voter in the house of lords except once, and that was upon the deceased wife's sister bill. His reputation is not as a politician, but for being politic. He remembers faces; he has rare tact; he is easy and unstudied in his manner; in short, he has dropped all that lofty carriage which is as indispensable to other European princes of the blood as a ramrod is to an old flint lock musket.



[illegible] The prince, if he had not been born to so exalted a station, would doubtless have made a typical club man. He likes good company and is a man about town. There is scarcely an evening that he doesn't visit some one of the theatres. Actresses whom he has desired should be presented to him have, with one exception, accepted the invitation. The exception is Mary Anderson. It doubtless required a good deal of courage for the American to decline this invitation. Her action was liable to misconstruction, and she might offend the British public. Miss Anderson, however, boldly declined the honor, and it does not appear that her audiences grew less after she had done so.

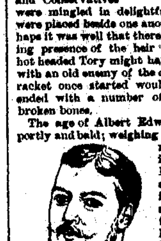
The prince has a royal income, but when he was younger he spent so much money that he became involved. His allowance by parliament is £40,000 a year, or nearly $200,000, and the princess is allowed £10,000 more, or $50,000. The prince also has an income of over £60,000, or $300,000, from the revenues of the duchy of Cornwall, which he holds by inheritance, so that his income aggregates about $500,000 a year. But he has nearly all the royal entertaining to do, and it is said that his mother makes him an additional allowance. He spends every penny of his income, including the allowance.

The prince has had sufficient sense to avail himself of his position as out of or above party strife. Several years ago he gave a dinner at Marlborough house, at which he gathered forty-two guests, all prominent in one way or another. Such a dinner could only be given by the Prince of Wales, for he need receive no regrets. An invitation from him is in the form of a command, and no previous engagement can stand. At this dinner Tories and Conservatives were mingled in delightful confusion, and were placed beside one another at table. Perhaps it was well that there was the restraining presence of the heir apparent, or some hot headed Tory might have got into a row with an old enemy of the opposition, and the racket once started would probably have ended with a number of sore heads and broken bones.



PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR.

The age of Albert Edward is 48. He is portly and bald; weighing 180 pounds, though not quite 5 feet 7 inches in height. He dresses well, and on the whole is quite a respectable looking gentleman. He is the leader of society in England, being a member of what is called the Marlborough or Sandringham set. Both these names are taken from his residences. He used to set the fashions for dress, but that is now the province of his son, Prince Albert Victor.



PRINCE GEORGE.

In the autumn the prince has usually gone to Scotland for deer stalking. Early winter he has spent in the south of France; spring and early summer—the social season—in London, and midsummer on the continent. He is the father of five children, Princes Albert Victor and George and the Princesses Louise, Victoria and Maud. The Princess of Wales is a sister of the present czarina of Russia.

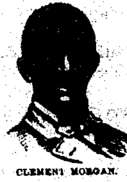
Should the heir apparent die of the disease which it is said has come upon him, the event will cause considerable commotion in social circles in England. Albert Victor will then be Prince of Wales, and will have to do the entertaining. This will necessitate his taking a wife, which thus far he has delayed.

The cut at the head of this article is of the prince's country house, Sandringham.

HONORED BY HARVARD.

Sketch and Portrait of Clement G. Morgan, Elected Senior Orator.

Clement Morgan, the colored man who was chosen next senior orator at Harvard, but who has declined to serve, was born in Petersburg, Va., twenty-eight years ago, and early removed, with his family, to Washton. He attended and was graduated from the high school there, learned the barber's trade and worked at it awhile. Then desiring more education he taught school in St. Louis. When he had laid aside a fair amount he went to Boston, and in 1884 entered the Latin school. He was very popular with the boys and was graduated well up in his class. In 1886 he entered Harvard. During his spare hours he plied the razor and shears as a means of support. During the summers he served as hall boy in a Saratoga hotel. Last summer he earned considerable money lecturing on the colored problem. By these and other devices he worked his way through his undergraduate course and secured a fair library. In spite of his narrow means he always contrived to dress in becoming style and good taste.



CLEMENT MORGAN.

Morgan is of medium height, weighs about 150 pounds and wears a mustache. He is a brilliant speaker, and talks in a smooth, fluent, yet forcible style. He pronounces his words with clear articulation and never falters for a word.

Standing erect, he makes a striking figure, his elocutionary training having taught him how to hold himself when on his feet. His oratory is finished to a degree. His manners are polished, his personal appearance prepossessing.

Morgan has not associated with the members of his class to any great extent. That is, his association with them has not been of the intimate character of student life. This, it is claimed, has not been on account of hostility among the students toward a colored man, but because he has had [illegible]

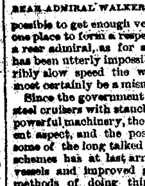
THE FLYING SQUADRON.

A NEW DEPARTURE IN THE UNITED STATES NAVY.

Important Results Expected from the Coming Cruise of the Chicago, Atlanta, Boston, Yorktown and Perhaps the Dolphin. Rear Admiral J. G. Walker in Command.

For some years it has been the aim of various naval officers high in authority to get enough vessels together to form a squadron of evolution, or a flying squadron, as it is now usually termed. Other powers have fitted out similar squadrons, and it has been a notable fact that discipline and efficiency have never been carried to a higher degree of perfection than in such squadrons. In the first place, the vessels selected must necessarily be in the best of condition to stand the cruise, the motto of which is always to be ready for movement on the shortest possible notice. As the speed of a fleet or squadron is obviously that of the slowest vessel, ships having good speed and endurance are those most generally selected. As a rule, this means the crack vessels of the navy, and naturally, officers who are proud of their profession and anxious to see it succeed in everything, are those most apt to be selected.

An officer to command such a body is chosen on account of his ability to make things go and to bring all out of vessels and men that there is in them. Owing to the old wooden vessels of the United States navy being in such a bad state of repair, with boilers all patches, machinery worn and hulls pretty well shaken to pieces, it has hardly been possible to get enough vessels together in any one place to form a respectable command for a rear admiral, as for a flying squadron it has been utterly impossible, and with the terribly slow speed the word "flying" would most certainly be a misnomer.



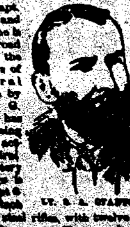
REAR ADMIRAL WALKER.

Since the government has begun building steel cruisers with stanch frames and strong, powerful machinery, the case assumes a different aspect, and the possibility of realizing some of the long talked of and well digested schemes has at last arrived. With the new vessels and improved guns have come new methods of doing things, which differ in many respects most radically from what officers and men, during the long period of stagnation, have been accustomed to. In those days of what it is presumed may be now most properly called the "old navy," or perhaps still earlier in the days of self supporting sailing ships, method was not so indispensable, although even then it made important contributions to success, but in these days of mastless armored ships, of coal and countless mechanisms, torpedoes, electricity, high powered rifled guns and smokeless powders, a dozen shops and factories contribute to the outfit of a single ship, and a single misfitting valve may cause disaster. Method, the most refined and careful in detail, and the success of which is tested by experiment and maneuver, is absolutely requisite.

The vessels of the squadron, although not up to the most recent date in their style of construction, disposition of batteries, power of machinery and so forth, are vessels that those who serve in them will have no reason to be at all ashamed of; as they are very much superior to the foreign squadrons that, as a general rule, are sent to visit our ports. They are unarmored, to be sure, but they have steel curved decks and more or less coal protection to their vitals. The batteries of the Boston and Atlanta are very much heavier than any ships of similar tonnage carry in other navies, they have fine seagoing qualities, good maneuvering power and are comfortable craft to serve in.

Four, or at the most five, vessels, should the Dolphin accompany the squadron, do not make a very large number for extensive evolutions, but for cruising or a flying squadron the differences in type, the electric appliances and the various fittings make them well calculated to fill every requisite. Should the present plan be carried out, all the other new vessels, as they are put in commission ready for sea service, will join this squadron for a period of six month's drill, and at the end of that time, if they pass the rigid scrutiny of the commander-in-chief, they are to be detached and sent to join some one of the squadrons on a foreign station.

The Chicago, the flagship, is the largest of our cruisers in commission. Her commanding officer is Capt. H. B. Robeson, and at her mizzen she is to fly the broad blue flag with the two white stars of a rear admiral which is flown by Commodore J. G. Walker, who has for the time being been made an acting rear admiral. The main battery of the Chicago is four 8-inch, eight 6-inch and two 5-inch [illegible] breech loading steel rifles, with twelve rapid [illegible] machine guns. She was built by [illegible]



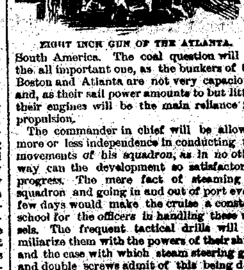
LT. S. A. STANTON.

[illegible]

The Yorktown, Commander [illegible], commanding, is one of the greatest [illegible] pioneers of her type in the [illegible] proved herself a very [illegible] [illegible] be made [illegible] the admiral [illegible] a hurry to some port where [illegible] ing. Commander [illegible] ber of years naval attache to the United States legation in England, and is probably more thoroughly equipped than any other commanding officer in the squadron to carry out the details of plans similar to those at present proposed, as for years the maneuvers of the English squadrons have been proverbial for the thoroughness and reality that have attended their every detail, and the discussions that they have given rise to have been of greatest value in the formulating of methods for the carrying on of duty in their navy. The Yorktown is of only 1,700 tons displacement, and her battery is of 6 inch guns with nine rapid fire and machine guns. She is the first of the vessels built by Messrs. Cramp at Philadelphia. She has a top speed of a little over seventeen knots, and her cost was $455,000.

Should the graceful Dolphin be ordered to the squadron she will form a by no means to be despised addition. Her qualities have been more thoroughly proved than those of any of the other vessels, as she has just completed a cruise around the world, returning in such excellent condition that she could be sent out again almost immediately to take her part in the evolutions.

Early in November is the period fixed upon for everything to be in readiness, and if the plan as at present drawn up should be carried out, the squadron will start over for Lisbon, touching on the way at the Azores and Madeira. Then it will work its way into the Mediterranean, remaining but a short while at any one port, and probably will then stretch down toward the West Indies or South America. The coal question will be the all important one, as the bunkers of the Boston and Atlanta are not very capacious; and, as their sail power amounts to but little, their engines will be the main reliance for propulsion.



EIGHT INCH GUN OF THE ATLANTA.

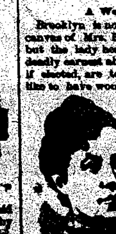
The commander in chief will be allowed more or less independence in conducting the movements of his squadron, as in no other way can the development so satisfactorily progress. The mere fact of steaming in squadron and going in and out of port every few days would make the cruise a constant school for the officers in handling these vessels. The frequent tactical drills will familiarize them with the powers of their ships, and the ease with which steam steering gear and double screws admit of this being done will no doubt be surprising to those whose sea life has thus far been passed in the old style wooden ship. The drills about the individual vessels will be of considerable value to the service at large, as no manuals have been thus far entirely satisfactory, and it has been almost an impossibility to adapt the old systems of drill in use with muzzle loading smooth bores to the requirements of the breechloading rifles.

The electrical appliances for training the guns and the electrical shell hoists are in an experimental state, and whether the new vessels are to have them will depend largely upon the report made on those already installed. One very important feature of the exercises will be the target firing while under way at sea, and interesting results may be looked for, particularly with the large caliber guns. The recent speeding and turning trials at Newport were in reality the preliminary evolutions of this squadron, and afford excellent data on which to base the comparative merits of the different vessels. What they can accomplish under sail alone and their behavior in weathering the Atlantic gales are features that will be of interest to professional men.

The drawing up of this programme, with a view of accomplishing as much as possible with the means at command, is an important feature of our naval administration, and will be an excellent test of the value and efficiency of the departure from the older methods. The squadron of evolution cannot be too highly spoken of as a regular part of naval training and preparation for war; it is a school of the most elevated standard possible, with the chances greatly in favor of the best results for officers and men. It will prune theories, point out defects and suggest remedies with a force and authority that the navy has long been in need of, and it will convey lessons next in value to those taught by war itself.

A Woman for Mayor.

Brooklyn is not greatly torn up over the canvass of Mrs. Emma Beckwith for mayor, but the lady herself asserts that she is in deadly earnest about it. She says her plans, if elected, are to help women. She would like to have women on the school board, in the police courts, police stations, and prisons. Among other things Mrs. Beckwith thinks that women can do is to clean the streets. She can [illegible]

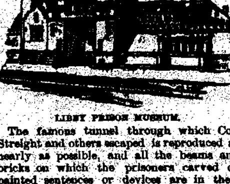


[illegible]

The old building as it stood in Richmond was first photographed and sketched as a whole, and its parts, large and small, till it was so perfectly known and noted that every detail could be reproduced. Then, as it was taken down, every one of its 500,000 pieces of wood, brick, stone and iron was cleaned and numbered; they were transported to Chicago and, save the decayed wooden sections which had to be replaced, and some portions destroyed in a railroad accident, the whole was restored. It stands upon a commanding point, and is well filled with Union and Confederate relics, largely the collection of Mr. C. F. Gunter, the president of the Museum association.

There are old swords, guns, flags, shells, pictures and fragments of a hundred kinds collected from the battle fields. There are diaries from the pockets of fallen soldiers, containing the last lines they wrote; photographs stained with the blood of their owners, letters without direction when the writer was killed, scores of curious ornaments whittled out in camp, and hundreds of original letters written on the battle field or immediately after by men who had taken part, and donated by their recipients. There are also many curios not so directly connected with the war, such as autograph letters of eminent men and old books and papers throwing light on those times.

Special departments are given to Lincoln, Grant and Sherman, and many of the mementos are quite rare and valuable. There are displays under glass of war time newspapers, flaming "extras," noted proclamations and many other stirring documents, and one series which combines the pathetic and the ludicrous—files of southern papers, from the clean and hotly edited sheets in which the beginning of the war was chronicled down to the dirty wall paper on which the last issue was printed.



LIBBY PRISON MUSEUM.

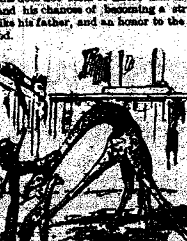
The famous tunnel through which Col. Streight and others escaped is reproduced as nearly as possible, and all the beams and bricks on which the prisoners carved or painted sentences or devices are in their place. The mementoes of Lincoln and John Brown are of peculiar interest. The Libby prison war museum will rank high among the sights of Chicago.

CINCINNATI'S FAVORITE.

The New Baby at the Zoological Gardens.

The first giraffe ever born in America, and the only one ever born alive in confinement, has taken up his abode at the Zoological Garden in Cincinnati. He was born on Sunday, and in honor of the occasion was immediately dubbed "Sunday." The little shaver weighed shortly after birth about 125 pounds. His height was 5 feet 5 inches, and measured from the ground to the root of his tail 3 feet 3 inches. From his nose to the top of his head he measured 10 inches. The neck from jaw to waist measured 19 inches. The head of this interesting animal is of a reddish brown color. The abdomen and legs are whitish and faintly spotted. The neck, back and sides, outside the shoulders and thighs, are of a dull rust color.

The father of the baby is eighteen feet tall, and can reach twenty-two feet. The mother is seventeen feet tall. The pair have been in the Zoo for twelve years, and have never missed a single meal on account of sickness during the time of their captivity. The mother is very affectionate, but, strange to say, will not nurse the baby, thus forcing the attendants to supply him with a bottle. However, this does not seem to affect him in the least, and his chances of becoming a strong man, like his father, and an honor to the Zoo are good.



THE BABY GIRAFFE.

[From the Commercial Gazette.]

Giraffes are caught in pitfalls about ten feet deep, having a wall of dirt heaped up from one side to the other and about six or seven feet high. When caught in one of these pits its fore legs fall on one side, its hind legs on the other, and its abdomen rests on the edge of the wall. The animal thus balanced by its belly on the wall is unable to spring out, despite its struggles. The hide of the giraffe is of such thickness that sometimes a bullet will not pierce it.

THE PROHIBITORY SENTIMENT

Pervading the country is due in a great measure to the large amount of spurious Whiskey that is being sold. Imposed upon by irresponsible dealers who doctor and color up spirits to represent Whiskey, consumers are retaliating by voting to wipe out the entire business. To aid in checking this sentiment by supplying consumers with a pure Whiskey, I am now placing my celebrated "I. W. HARPER OLD NELSON COUNTY, KY. WHISKEY" direct to them from distillery warehouse.

This whiskey is made from selected rye and corn and barley malt at my distillery in Nelson County, Ky., and represents the highest type of distillation.

As a stimulant or tonic it is prescribed by the leading physicians.

As a beverage it will recommend itself to the most exacting connoisseur. Respectfully

The Voice of the Dreamer.

BY JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY.

I am tired of planning and toiling
In the crowded hives of men;
Heart-weary of building and spoiling
And spoiling and building again.
And I long for the dear old river
Where I dreamed my youth away;
For a dreamer lives forever,
And a toiler dies in a day.

I am sick of the showy seeming
Of a life that is half a lie;
Of the faces lined with scheming
In the throng that hurries by.
From the sleepless thought's endeavor
I would go where the children play,
For a dreamer lives forever,
And a toiler dies in a day.

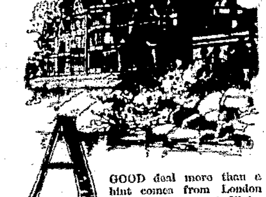
I feel no pride but pity
For the burdens the rich endure;
There is nothing sweet in the city
But the patient lives of the poor.
Oh, the little hands so skillful,
And the child mind choked with weeds,
The daughter's heart grows willful,
And the father's heart that bleeds.

No, not from the street's rude bustle,
From trophies of mart and stage,
I would fly to the wood's low rustle,
And the meadow's kindly page.
Let us dream as of old by the river,
And be loved for the dream alway,
For the dreamer lives forever,
And the toiler dies in a day.

IS THE PRINCE DYING?

QUEEN VICTORIA'S SON SAID TO HAVE BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

Some of the Characteristics of the Heir Apparent to the British Throne—A Polite Man, but Not a Politician—His Enormous Income.



A GOOD deal more than a hint comes from London that the Prince of Wales has been informed by his physicians that he has that incurable ailment known as Bright's disease of the kidneys. If this be true there is no probability of his ever sitting on the English throne. There are yet no signs of any breaking down in his mother, the queen, and there is no malady more sure to bring death than Bright's disease.

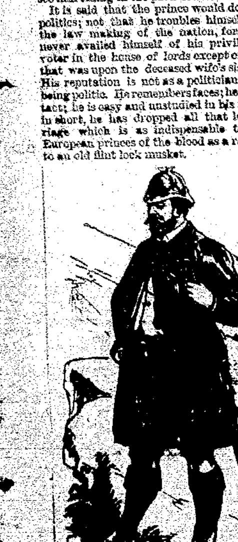
The English people would regard the death of Albert Edward as a great misfortune to them. This may seem singular, since his reputation in America is that of a profligate. One hears of him at the theatres paying especial attention to the most beautiful actresses. In India, some years ago, he was said to have given free vent to his immoral tastes and shocked the civilized world. Recently he witnessed a sparring match in which the bruiser John L. Sullivan took part. Why is it, then, that the English people take so great an interest in the life of this man, who is neither great nor good?

In the first place the prince had largely finished sowing his "wild oats" ten years ago. Of late those scandals with which his name was formerly connected seem to have ceased. His English taste for manly sports led him to view a sparring match, perhaps an undignified act for one of his position, but it would easily be forgiven by a nation whose young men all read sporting papers; and whose school boys are trained to box and settle their disputes in a ring. Indeed, one of the elements of popularity of Albert Edward is that he is the patron in England of those hardy sports which have given such strength and courage to Englishmen, and enabled them always to do more with fewer troops than any other nation.

The prince, though not a great man, is far seeing. One occupying his position, belonging to a family set apart from all others except of royal blood, would be expected to hold to the belief that he was secure in his position. The prince does not take this view of royalty in England. He has watched the democratic tendency of the age and adapted himself to it. He has the wisdom to follow public opinion rather than stand against it. The Prince of Wales is the most democratic man of those enjoying a similar position in Europe. He makes it a point to become identified with all classes. He can always be counted upon to take a part in meetings and other matters tending to benefit the public.

He constantly is called upon to preside at these meetings, and his speeches are remarkable for being adapted to the audience and to the purpose. To hospitals, churches, public buildings of all kinds he constantly lends the interest attaching to his presence, and is kept busy either in laying their corner stones or at their dedication. In this way he becomes identified with the people whose king, it was supposed, he would one day be, and it is perhaps this want of holding aloof from them, common with his predecessors, which has led him to that democratic demeanor he shows whenever court etiquette will permit. He goes about quite as other people go, and of late years it has been a common occurrence to see him riding in the park in a hansom cab.

It is said that the prince would do well in politics; not that he troubles himself as to the law making of the nation, for he has never availed himself of his privilege as a voter in the house of lords except once, and that was upon the deceased wife's sister bill. His reputation is not as a politician, but for being polite. He remembers faces; he has rare tact; he is easy and unstudied in his manner; in short, he has dropped all that lofty carriage which is as indispensable to other European princes of the blood as a ramrod is to an old flint lock musket.

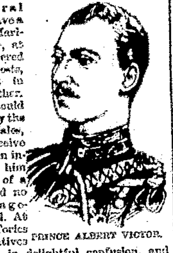


THE PRINCE AS A HIGHLANDER.

There's a pretty story in this connection, which reads as if it might come from one of those fairy tales wherein princes are constantly doing something very nice or very wicked. Albert Edward on one occasion stopped and picked up the cane of a cripple. The prince did not regard it so remarkable an act for him to do as to remember it, but the cripple appreciated it sufficiently to send the prince a handsome clock, with a note containing the information that it was in acknowledgment of the prince's kindness in picking up his cane. The clock came from Brookline, Mass., and the sender was probably an American. It adorns one of the rooms of Marlborough house.

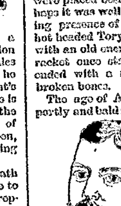
The prince, if he had not been born to so exalted a station, would doubtless have made a typical club man. He likes good company and is a man about town. There is scarcely an evening that he doesn't visit some one of the theatres. Actresses whom he has desired should be presented to him have, with one exception, accepted the invitation. The exception is Mary Anderson. It doubtless required a good deal of courage for the American to decline this invitation. Her action was liable to misconstruction, and she might offend the British public. Miss Anderson, however, boldly declined the honor, and it does not appear that her audiences grew less after she had done so.

The prince has a royal income, but when he was younger he spent so much money that he became involved. His allowance by parliament is £40,000 a year, or nearly $200,000, and the princess is allowed £10,000 more, or $50,000. The prince also has an income of over £60,000, or $300,000, from his revenues of the duchy of Cornwall, which is his by inheritance, so that his income aggregates about $500,000 a year. But he has nearly all the royal entertaining to do, and it is said that his mother makes him an additional allowance. He spends every penny of his income, including the allowance.



PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR.

The prince has had sufficient sense to avail himself of his position as out of or above party strife. Several years ago he gave a dinner at Marlborough house, at which he gathered forty-two guests, all prominent in one way or another. Such a dinner could only be given by the Prince of Wales, for he need receive no regrets. An invitation from him is in the form of a command, and no previous engagement can stand. At this dinner Tories and Conservatives were mingled in delightful confusion, and were placed beside one another at table. Perhaps it was well that there was the restraining presence of the heir apparent, or some hot headed Tory might have got into a row with an old enemy of the opposition, and the rocket once started would probably have ended with a number of sore heads and broken bones.



PRINCE GEORGE.

The age of Albert Edward is 48. He is portly and bald; weighing 160 pounds, though not quite 5 feet 7 inches in height. He dresses well, and on the whole is quite a respectable looking gentleman. He is the leader of society in England, being a member of what is called the Marlborough or Sandringham set. Both these names are taken from his residences. He used to set the fashions for dress, but that is now the province of his son, Prince Albert Victor.

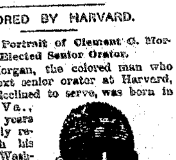
In the autumn the prince has usually gone to Scotland for deer stalking. Early winter he has spent in the south of France; spring and early summer—the social season—in London, and midsummer on the continent. He is the father of five children, Princes Albert Victor and George and the Princesses Louise, Victoria and Maud. The Princess of Wales is a sister of the present czarina of Russia.

Should the heir apparent die of the disease which it is said has come upon him, the event will cause considerable commotion in social circles in England. Albert Victor will then be Prince of Wales, and will have to do the entertaining. This will necessitate his taking a wife, which thus far he has delayed.

The cut at the head of this article is of the prince's country house, Sandringham.

HONORED BY HARVARD.

Sketch and Portrait of Clement G. Morgan, Elected Senior Orator.



CLEMENT MORGAN.

Clement Morgan, the colored man who was chosen next senior orator at Harvard, but who has declined to serve, was born in Petersburg, Va., twenty-eight years ago, and early removed, with his family, to Washington. He attended and was graduated from the high school there, learned the barber's trade and worked at it awhile. Then desiring more education he taught school in St. Louis. When he had laid aside a fair amount he went to Boston, and in 1884 entered the Latin school. He was very popular with the boys and was graduated well up in his class. In 1886 he entered Harvard. During his spare hours he plied the razor and shears as a means of support. During the summers he served as ball boy in a Saratoga hotel. Last summer he earned considerable money lecturing on the colored problem. By these and other devices he worked his way through his undergraduate course and secured a fair library. In spite of his narrow means he always contrived to dress in becoming style and good taste.

Morgan is of medium height, weighs about 150 pounds and wears a mustache. He is a brilliant speaker, and talks in a smooth, fluent, yet forcible style. He pronounces his words with clear articulation and never falters for a word.

Standing erect, he makes a striking figure, his elocutionary training having taught him how to hold himself when on his feet. His oratory is finished to a degree. His manners are polished, his personal appearance prepossessing.

Morgan has not associated with the members of his class to any great extent. That is, his association with them has not been of the intimate character of student life. This, it is claimed, has not been on account of hostility among the students toward a colored man, but because he has had little time outside of his college work that has not been devoted to money making. He intends to study law and to enter the race for legal honors in the south.

A National Flower.

The little 7-year-old daughter of a leading physician in a neighboring city heard the question as to what flower would make the best national emblem discussed at considerable length only the other day by a party of guests at her father's dinner table. Each guest had given an opinion and supported it with the customary arguments, when suddenly the little girl woke up.

"Papa," she said, "I know what I think would be the best national emblem."

"Well, Josephine," said the father, "what is it?"

She answered with an air of relief, as if glad to have the question definitely settled—

"The chestnut!"—Boston Transcript.

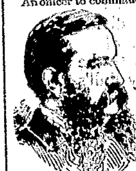
A NEW DEPARTURE IN THE UNITED STATES NAVY.

Important Results Expected from the Coming Cruise of the Chicago, Atlanta, Boston, Yorktown and Perhaps the Dolphin. Rear Admiral J. G. Walker in Command.

For some years it has been the aim of various naval officers high in authority to get enough vessels together to form a squadron of evolution, or a flying squadron, as it is now usually termed. Other powers have fitted out similar squadrons, and it has been a notable fact that discipline and efficiency have never been carried to a higher degree of perfection than in such squadrons. In the first place, the vessels selected must necessarily be in the best of condition to stand the cruise, the motto of which is always to be ready for movement on the shortest possible notice. As the speed of a fleet or squadron is obviously that of the slowest vessel, ships having good speed and endurance are those most generally selected. As a rule, this means the crack vessels of the navy, and naturally, officers who are proud of their profession and anxious to see it succeed in everything, are those most apt to be selected.



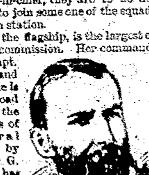
REAR ADMIRAL WALKER.

An officer to command such a body is chosen on account of his ability to make things go and to bring all out of vessels and men that there is in them. Owing to the old wooden vessels of the United States navy being in such a bad state of repair, with boilers all patches, machinery worn and hulls pretty well shaken to pieces, it has hardly been possible to get enough vessels together in any one place to form a respectable command for a rear admiral, as for a flying squadron it has been utterly impossible, and with the terribly slow speed the word "flying" would most certainly be a misnomer.

Since the government has begun building steel cruisers with staunch frames and strong, powerful machinery, the case assumes a different aspect, and the possibility of realizing some of the long talked of and well digested schemes has at last arrived. With the new vessels and improved guns have come new methods of doing things, which differ in many respects most radically from what officers and men, during the long period of stagnation, have been accustomed to. In those days of what it is presumed may be now most properly called the "old navy," or perhaps still earlier in the days of self supporting sailing ships, method was not so indispensable, although even then it made important contributions to success, but in these days of mastless armored ships, of coal and countless mechanisms, torpedoes, electricity, high powered rifled guns and smokeless powders, a dozen shops and factories contribute to the outfit of a single ship, and a single misfitting valve may cause disaster. Method, the most refined and careful in detail, and the success of which is tested by experiment and maneuver, is absolutely requisite.

The vessels of the squadron, although not up to the most recent date in their style of construction, disposition of batteries, power of machinery and so forth, are vessels that those who serve in them will have no reason to be at all ashamed of; as they are very much superior to the foreign squadrons that, as a general rule, are sent to visit our ports. They are unarmored, to be sure, but they have steel curved decks and more or less coal protection to their vitals. The batteries of the Boston and Atlanta are very much heavier than any ships of similar tonnage carry in other navies, they have fine seagoing qualities, good maneuvering power and are comfortable craft to serve in.

Four, or at the most five, vessels, should the Dolphin accompany the squadron, do not make a very large number for extensive evolutions, but for cruising or a flying squadron the differences in type, the electric appliances and the various fittings make them well calculated to fill every requisite. Should the present plan be carried out, all the other new vessels, as they are put in commission ready for sea service, will join this squadron for a period of six month's drill, and at the end of that time, if they pass the rigid scrutiny of the commander-in-chief, they are to be detached and sent to join some one of the squadrons on a foreign station.



LT. S. A. STANTON.

The Chicago, the flagship, is the largest of our cruisers in commission. Her commanding officer is Capt. H. B. Robeson, and at her mizzen she is to fly the broad blue flag with the two white stars of a rear admiral which is flown by Commodore J. G. Walker, who has for the time being been made an acting rear admiral. The main battery of the Chicago is four 8-inch, eight 6-inch and two 5-inch breech loading steel rifles, with twelve rapid fire and machine guns. She was built by John Roach & Sons at Chester, and the contract price was $[illegible]. Owing to the numerous changes that have been made in the fitting of this vessel, the sum actually expended is largely in excess of this estimate.

Lieut. S. S. Stanton will be flag lieutenant of the squadron.

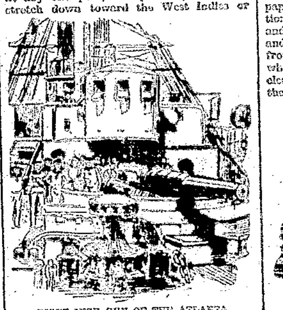
The Atlanta, Capt. Howell, the inventor of the automobile torpedo now being furnished to naval vessels, and the Boston, Capt. [illegible], and sister ships of about [illegible] tons displacement, also built by John Roach & Sons, and probably costing to date about $[illegible]. Their batteries are extremely heavy for vessels of their class, and although they apparently carry them with ease, showing then few or no signs of being over-weighted, the interpretation of the day is not in favor of such heavy guns as the eight inch, the tendency being a larger number of quick fire guns of smaller caliber, the projectiles from which are sufficiently powerful to pierce the sides of any craft against which these ships would be called upon to fight.

Their batteries are two 8-inch and six 6-inch breech loading steel rifles, with ten rapid fire and machine guns. There are no torpedo fittings for these vessels. A radical departure from the then existing methods of construction is apparent in the build of these ships, the raised portions forward and aft are moved together, forming a superstructure deck amidships, leaving the ends low and affording thereby a free sweep for her large guns, one of which is mounted on the port side forward and the other diagonally aft on the starboard side. All sorts of direful predictions were made regarding these vessels when they were at first proposed, and it must have been a genuine surprise to the wiseacres and croakers when their stanchness and stability at sea became an assured fact.

The Yorktown, Commander Chadwick commanding, is one of the gunboat class, the pioneer of her type in the new navy. She has proved herself a very speedy as well as an extremely handy vessel, and on account of her qualities and smaller size, she will probably be made occasional flagship, whenever the admiral thinks it necessary to proceed in a hurry to some port where the depth of water would prevent the Chicago from entering. Commander Chadwick was for a number of years naval attache to the United States legation in England, and is probably more thoroughly equipped than any other commanding officer in the squadron to carry out the details of plans similar to those at present proposed, as for years the maneuvers of the English squadrons have been proverbial for the thoroughness and reality that have attended their every detail, and the discussions that they have given rise to have been of greatest value in the formulating of methods for the carrying on of duty in their navy. The Yorktown is of only 1,700 tons displacement, and her battery is of 6 inch guns with nine rapid fire and machine guns. She is the first of the vessels built by Messrs. Cramp at Philadelphia. She has a top speed of a little over seventeen knots, and her cost was $455,000.

Should the graceful Dolphin be ordered to the squadron she will form a by no means to be despised addition. Her qualities have been more thoroughly proved than those of any of the other vessels, as she has just completed a cruise around the world, returning in such excellent condition that she could be sent out again almost immediately to take her part in the evolutions.

Early in November is the period fixed upon for everything to be in readiness, and if the plan as at present drawn up should be carried out, the squadron will start over for Lisbon, touching on the way at the Azores and Madeira. Then it will work its way into the Mediterranean, remaining but a short while at any one port, and probably will then stretch down toward the West Indies or South America. The coal question will be the all important one, as the bunkers of the Boston and Atlanta are not very capacious; and, as their sail power amounts to but little, their engines will be the main reliance for propulsion.



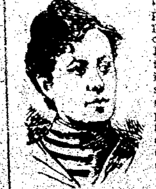
EIGHT INCH GUN OF THE ATLANTA.

The commander in chief will be allowed more or less independence in conducting the movements of his squadron, as in no other way can the development so satisfactorily progress. The mere fact of steaming in squadron and going in and out of port every few days would make the cruise a constant school for the officers in handling these vessels. The frequent tactical drills will familiarize them with the powers of their ships, and the ease with which steam steering gear and double screws admit of this being done will no doubt be surprising to those whose sea life has thus far been passed in the old style wooden ship. The drills about the individual vessels will be of considerable value to the service at large, as no manuals have been thus far entirely satisfactory, and it has been almost an impossibility to adapt the old systems of drill in use with muzzle loading smooth bores to the requirements of the breechloading rifles.

The electrical appliances for training the guns and the electrical shell hoists are in an experimental state, and whether the new vessels are to have them will depend largely upon the report made on those already installed. One very important feature of the exercises will be the target firing while under way at sea, and interesting results may be looked for, particularly with the large caliber guns. The recent speeding and turning trials at Newport were in reality the preliminary evolutions of this squadron, and afford excellent data on which to base the comparative merits of the different vessels. What they can accomplish under sail alone and their behavior in weathering the Atlantic gales are features that will be of interest to professional men.

The drawing up of this programme, with a view of accomplishing as much as possible with the means at command, is an important feature of our naval administration, and will be an excellent test of the value and efficiency of the departure from the older methods. The squadron of evolution cannot be too highly spoken of as a regular part of naval training and preparation for war; it is a school of the most elevated standard possible, with the chances greatly in favor of the best results for officers and men. It will prune theories, point out defects and suggest remedies with a force and authority that the navy has long been in need of, and it will convey lessons next in value to those taught by war itself.

A Woman for Mayor.



EMMA BECKWITH.

Brooklyn is not greatly torn up over the canvass of Mrs. Emma Beckwith for mayor, but the lady herself asserts that she is in deadly earnest about it. She says her plans, if elected, are to help women. She would like to have women on the school board, in the police courts, police stations, and prisons. Among other things Mrs. Beckwith thinks that women can do is to clean the streets. She considers a broom a proper implement for woman. She also especially desires women to be appointed inspectors of tenement houses, factories and markets. She is a woman of middle age, and is spoken of as "attractive and fearless." Bad Brooklyn boys annoy her by singing "Whoa, Emma!" in front of her house. Her ballots will be printed on pink paper.

I have suffered with rheumatism for quite a number of years, and after trying Salvation Oil pronounce it the best remedy I have ever used.

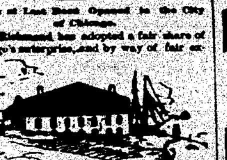
LIBBY PRISON MUSEUM.

It Has at Last Been Opened in the City of Chicago.



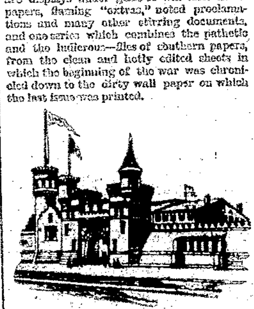
LIBBY PRISON AS IT WAS.

Old Richmond has adopted a fair share of Chicago's enterprise, and by way of fair exchange Chicago has taken Libby prison. This noted structure now stands in Chicago with almost exactly the same appearance it had in Richmond, though a castellated wall surrounds it, and is a museum of curiosities of the war and southern life and history generally. The removal and reconstruction of the old tobacco warehouse may be compared in skill with the noted removal of the obelisk of Luxor from Egypt to Paris and similar feats, save that the obelisk had to be moved entire, while the Libby was taken to pieces.

The old building as it stood in Richmond was first photographed and sketched as a whole, and in parts large and small, till it was so pictured to eye and mind that every detail could be reproduced. Then, as it was taken down, every one of its 800,000 pieces of wood, brick, stone and iron was classed and numbered; they were transported to Chicago and, save the decayed wooden sections which had to be replaced, and some portions destroyed in a railroad accident, the whole was restored. It stands upon a commanding point, and is well filled with Union and Confederate relics, largely the collection of Mr. C. F. Gunter, the president of the Museum association.

There are old swords, guns, flags, shells, pictures and fragments of a hundred kinds collected from the battle fields. There are diaries from the pockets of fallen soldiers, containing the last lines they wrote; photographs stained with the blood of their owners, letters without direction when the writer was killed, scores of curious ornaments whittled out in camp, and hundreds of original letters written on the battle field or immediately after by men who had taken part, and donated by their recipients. There are also many curios not so directly connected with the war, such as autograph letters of eminent men and old books and papers throwing light on those times.

Special departments are given to Lincoln, Grant and Sherman, and many of the mementoes are quite rare and valuable. There are displays under glass of war time newspapers, flaming "extras," noted proclamations and many other stirring documents, and one series which combines the pathetic and the ludicrous—files of southern papers, from the clean and hotly edited sheets in which the beginning of the war was chronicled down to the dirty wall paper on which the last issue was printed.



LIBBY PRISON MUSEUM.

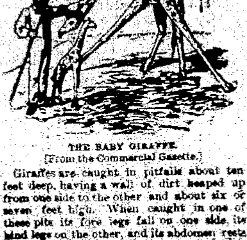
The famous tunnel through which Col. Streight and others escaped is reproduced as nearly as possible, and all the beams and bricks on which the prisoners carved or painted sentences or devices are in their place. The mementoes of Lincoln and John Brown are of peculiar interest. The Libby prison war museum will rank high among the sights of Chicago.

CINCINNATI'S FAVORITE.

The New Baby at the Zoological Gardens.

The first giraffe ever born in America, and the only one ever born alive in confinement, has taken up his abode at the Zoological Garden in Cincinnati. He was born on Sunday, and in honor of the occasion was immediately dubbed "Sunday." The little shaver weighed shortly after birth about 125 pounds. His height was 5 feet 5 inches, and measured from the ground to the root of his tail 3 feet 3 inches. From his nose to the top of his head he measured 10 inches. The neck from jaw to waist measured 19 inches. The head of this interesting animal is of a reddish brown color. The abdomen and legs are whitish and faintly spotted. The neck, back and sides, outside the shoulders and thighs, are of a dull rust color.

The father of the baby is eighteen feet tall, and can reach twenty-two feet. The mother is seventeen feet tall. The pair have been in the Zoo for twelve years, and have never missed a single meal on account of sickness during the time of their captivity. The mother is very affectionate, but, strange to say, will not nurse the baby, thus forcing the attendants to supply him with a bottle. However, this does not seem to affect him in the least, and his chances of becoming a strong man, like his father, and an honor to the Zoo are good.



THE BABY GIRAFFE.

[From the Commercial Gazette.]

Giraffes are caught in pitfalls about ten feet deep, having a wall of dirt heaped up from one side to the other and about six or seven feet high. When caught in one of these pits its fore legs fall on one side, its hind legs on the other, and its abdomen rests on the edge of the wall. The animal thus balanced by its belly on the wall is unable to spring out, despite its struggles. The hide of the giraffe is so thick that oftentimes a bullet will not pierce it.

THE PROHIBITORY SENTIMENT

Pervading the country is due in a great measure to the large amount of spurious Whiskey that is being sold. Imposed upon by irresponsible dealers who doctor and color up spirits to represent Whiskey, consumers are retaliating by voting to wipe out the entire business. To aid in checking this sentiment by supplying consumers with a pure Whiskey, I am now placing my celebrated "I. W. HARPER OLD NELSON COUNTY, KY. WHISKEY" direct to them from distillery warehouse.

This whiskey is made from selected rye and corn and barley malt at my distillery in Nelson County, Ky., and represents the highest type of distillation.

As a stimulant or tonic it is prescribed by the leading physicians.

As a beverage it will recommend itself to the most exacting connoisseur. Respectfully

I. W. HARPER.

This excellent magazine for November filled with illustrations which are unsurpassed for exelence by any magazine or periodical in this country is before us. Among the illustrated articles are "The French Army on a Peace Footing," "The Stable of the Queen of England," "In the Whirlpools of the Grand Canon," "Co-operative House-Keeping in Tenements," "Cornell University," "Passenger Agent Service" and "India Under the Queen." This number contains the complete illustrated novel by George A. Hibbard "The Dark Horse or a Month in an American Country House" and much besides that is interesting and instructive. The price is 25 cents and it goes without saying that it is well worth the money.

To Our Subscribers.

The SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT which appeared in our columns some time since, announcing a special arrangement with Dr. B. J. KENDALL Co., of Enosburgh Falls, Vt., publishers of "A Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases," whereby our subscribers were enabled to obtain a copy of that valuable work FREE by sending their address (and enclosing two-cent stamp for mailing same) is renewed for a limited period. We trust all will avail themselves of the opportunity of obtaining this valuable work. To every lover of the Horse it is indispensable, as it treats in a simple manner all the diseases which afflict this noble animal. Its phenomenal sale throughout the United States and Canada, make it standard authority.

A man who has practiced medicine for 40 years ought to know salt from sugar; read what he says:

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen:—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours Truly,

L. E. Hewitt had a stroke of paralysis Monday afternoon while riding in his carriage near Plainville. He was discovered in a nearly unconscious condition by some farmers in the vicinity and taken to Plainville. His son-in-law, S. B. Mead, at once went out and yesterday Mrs. Hewitt went there to attend her husband. Mr. Hewitt's condition this morning we're unable to learn.

The Spanish have a proverb: "Woman loves with her ear, but man with his eye." Persuasive wooing captures a woman's heart, while an attractive appearance conquers the man. To retain man's affection and secure enduring happiness, a woman should be as charming in married life as in the days of bewitching maidenhood. Her captivating weapons are a fair and blooming complexion, soft and spotless hands, freedom from skin and scalp impurities, pimples, chapping, and the possession of the delicate bloom of perfect Health. [illegible] foundation [illegible] to resist the shocks and [illegible] youth is the epoch of formation of character, of habit, and our success or failure in life depends greatly on care or neglect with which we have been trained in our early days.

Now, a young man whose only object is self aggrandisement, whose motive is conceit or unruly ambition; whose aim does not reach beyond the dignities of this world, the empty honors conferred by his fellow citizens; the exalted positions held by successful politicians or the evanescent brilliancy of a great name which disappears with the circumstances which gave it birth; a young man with no views beyond these forgets his mission in life, is an ill-formed being and overthrows the plans of God by placing the material above the spiritual, the temporal ahead of the eternal and spending a busy but useless life; laboring for the favor of man and forgetting that God "rewards every man according to his works."

We have in our villages a large number of young men of whom the Church and the State will never be proud, who are obnoxious weeds in the garden of society and whose future life and actions (if not reformed and corrected in time) will prove a detriment to religion and to our country. The thoughts I wish to submit to the attentive consideration o your readers concern:

1st. The necessity of saving young men—that is evident from the foregoing remarks.

2d. The evils to be avoided.

3rd. The remedy to be applied and the virtues to be practiced.

4th. The reward to be expected in this world and from the hands of our Divine Master in His Heavenly Kingdom.

We must save our young men from

INFIDELITY. Any serious person who possesses a just idea of the higher purposes of man's creation and who observes attentively the ways of youth will be readily convinced of the fact that on our streets, in our places of business, in our schools will be found many who believe in nothing but themselves. Question them about the Diety, eternity, the Immortality of the soul; future retribution; the Guiding of Divine Providence; the necessity of religion; the mission of Christ etc.; they stand dumbfounded, not even understanding the meaning of the terms. They know not why they were created; why they have will, memory and understanding; why they are the king of the visible creation; where they expect to go after leaving this world. Many of our great statesmen have died without a thought of religion, died as if all ended at death for them as well as for the animal without reason; let us save our young men from infidelity; they are branches separated from the tree and deprived of the sap of spiritual life. How will we save them? By teaching them the true doctrine of Christ; by impressing upon them the importance of following in the footsteps of the Master and believing his word just as He condescended to reveal it; by instructing them at home and in the church, questioning them in regard to their belief, to their faith; destroy by solid teaching the vague notions entertained by youthful minds on religious subjects; and induce them to work under the eye of the Supreme Master who created all things for His glory and man's happiness. Save them from

FALSE MAXIMS such as these:

1st. It is sufficient to be an honest man and good citizen to be saved.

2d. It is not what we believe but what we practice that will ensure our salvation. This maxim is false because once God has revealed truths, once Christ has spoken, we are obliged to believe His word and we have something beside the precepts of morality to attend to on earth; a man might be naturally kind, honest, charitable and if he refuse to believe the dogmatic truths of religion as revealed, his virtues will not save him, because he doubts God's veracity by rejecting revealed truth. On the other hand a man might preserve preciously the entire deposit of faith, if he do not practice what he is taught, if his life be not conformable to that of Christ, his belief, his faith will not save him. We must have faith but faith without works is a body without a soul, dead in the sight of God.

3rd. Another false maxim is this: "It matters not what religion I follow if I lead a good life and do good to others." It might be of little consequence if God had left man at liberty to choose promising him salvation in whichever way he might walk, but Christ established his church with her doctrine and precepts and He is the way, the truth and the life; if we tread in the path traced out by Him we may claim a reward, if not we are simply exploring unknown regions following our own will. God will not recognize us with our counterfeit doctrine and virtues.

4th. Youth will pass—young men must enjoy themselves, they will grow serious in time—false maxim—for there is no peace for the wicked; there is no lasting joy in iniquity; there is no happiness for the transgressor; there is no vacation in God's service and the young man's vices will follow him even to old age; as the young tree is inclined so shall it grow, and whithersoever the old tree shall fall there shall it remain.

Save them from evil books which are dangerous companions; from sensational papers, which poison virtue; from [illegible]

[illegible] and [illegible] of [illegible] whom.

Save them from the baleful association and company of street loafers, of the dudes and [illegible]. The boys who we see constantly lounging around hotel corners, [illegible] whose motto is the present by this inscription: "We are the [illegible] of Fulton and the dregs of Oswego Falls society, we are outcast from all respectable company—our habits are cursing, swearing, munching tobacco, drinking, gambling and frequenting the fast and abandoned society of Fulton; we are for sale to the highest among the low bidders of vice and we expect to be scandalous young men, unfaithful husbands, and even dissipated in old age."

The remedy for such an evil as the above is to give personal advice to these boys, teach them to respect themselves and organize societies where they can meet and improve themselves.

Save them from secret societies and independent clubs, we have no need of secret societies. Any man who wishes to do good, enjoys great liberty in this country and none but the children of iniquity fear the light.

INDEPENDENT CLUBS organized by young men whether laborers or school boys are dangerous, because these boys have little experience and less religion and should never be allowed to assemble regularly, frame their own rules independently etc. without a wise director, a prudent counsellor, an enlightened and virtuous guide. At their age they need restraint without tyranny, liberty without license. They must be saved from themselves, their youthful mischief and their companions. Young school boys and girls should not be allowed to keep steady company; to remain away evenings, their parents know not where; they begin their insignificant flirtations and shallow insipid courtship before they knew the price of a loaf of bread or the value of the shoes they wear out in their evening rambles. Let parents teach their daughters how to become useful; keep them at home; there is where a serious young man will go to seek a suitable companion for life and not among the flirts on the street, let the girls become better christians, virtuous. edifying ladies and the boys will be more exemplary.

SAVE THEM FROM THE SALOON. The saloon is plotting the ruin of religion and society; the saloon keeper is a public enemy and we must save our young men from their grasp—the boys go there because the place is pleasant; the electric light gives bright color to their poisonous beverage but it also shines over a multitude of crimes; birds sing at the entrance but to announce that the drunken young man will soon howl like a beast; flowers in bloom spread their fragrance awaiting the foul breath of the cursing and obscene drinker; the rooms are warm and so are the prisons of hell; music, song and dance help the hours and pennies pass away while voices at home are silent and hearts sadden as the night hours are slowly counted; the lusty proprietors smile at the ruin and degredation they have wrought. They take your time, your money, your senses and then cast you out upon the street as a nuisance out of place in their respectable parlors. Young man, beware of your worst enemy the saloon keeper. Let us encourage our young men to be good. Bring them to church on Sunday, make home pleasant for them, induce then to join our best societies and all will be well. Let the members of temperance societies be zealous in their efforts to convert the wayward.

Let the Young Men's Christian Association not become a club of aristocratic, well dressed young men who look down with contempt upon the poor outcast; let it not be a nursery of bigotry nor a seminary for idle conversation nor a stage for unhealthy flirtations; let it not be a substitute for she church, for religion; no society can replace religion; no society can replace religion. no society can accomplish the mission of religion; societies are but the bell calling the people to church; the steps conducting to the sanctuary, the introduction to religion.

These societies are not destined to save souls but to help souls persevere in virtue: let the rich young men lend a helping hand to the poor; the aristocratic lift up the outcast and elevate him and they will find as moralists have found that rich apparel (not unlike charity in one respect) often covereth a multitude of sins while under the ragged garments of the pauper frequently beats a heart in unison with that of Christ.

Let each do his best in his own sphere of life, saue all the men he can and remember that God who is the Father of all and wishes to save alll men will reward our efforts an hundredfold,

REV. WM. J. EARLEY.

[illegible] Greece [illegible] high position, but in 1453 she became conquered by the Turks, [illegible] so thoroughly as to be almost blotted out.

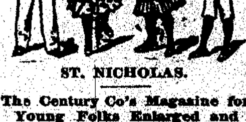
In the 19th century began their struggles for independence. Their heroic struggles from 1821 to 1829 the civilized world watched and honored and helped. When they were starving America sent a vessel of provisions. This kindness the Greeks have never forgotten, and now when one goes to Athens the moment it is known he is an American he is most kindly received.

They have made great strides since they gained independence and seem determined to make Athens one of the most magnificent cities of the world. It is now a city of 60,000, and they are having one of their streets paved entirely with marble, while all the houses on the street are marble. This marble they get a short distance from Athens. They are making great studies in education. Their University is the richest in the world, with some 3,000 in attendance. They also have a ladies' college with an attendance of 1,500. In fact education is as free as water. The art school was built and donated by a private citizen, is built of marble and trimmed with gold. The Piræus, the port of Athens, has also largely increased and is now a thriving business city with many manufactures, and ships from all parts of the world going and coming from its harbor. They excel in business, and in the cities on the Mediterranean in the east they control trade. The merchants grow rich. It is a current saying that it takes two Jews to cheat a Turk and two Turks to cheat a Greek.

Dr. Riggs graphically described a dance of the natives which would have seemed utterly ridiculous but that was plainly a remnant of the famous chorus of ancient Greek tragedies. A lively account was given of Good Friday and the services of Easter morning. They all gathered around in front of a platform by the Cathedral. It was dark and there were no lights, and they were very quiet. As the hour of midnight was tolled there were instantly enormous quantities of fireworks sent off, and it seemed like a Fourth of July celebration. The Greek church is lifeless and one of extreme formality. The Greek is very pious for a few days preceeding Easter or when celebrating some religious festival—but as soon as this is over he lapses and will cheat and lie without any sense of moral responsibility. A missionary has been at work there 25 years, but finds it hard to accomplish much as only 150 converts have been made during that time. The speaker felt confident that in the near future a great religious change would take place.

Their language is nearly the language of the New Testament Greek. The Greek language of to-day is much purer than it was a century past; they are weeding out the French and Italian expressions. It has reached about that stage towards purity to which the language of the New Testament had come in the descent from purity. In their customs they follow the French and all learn the French language from necessity, as the French is understood by all the people bordering the Mediterranean, while none others speak the Greek.

Views of ancient and modern Athens and ancient ruins were given by means of the sterioptlcon. The lecturer received hearty applause and afterwards met a large number of friends.



ST. NICHOLAS.

The Century Co's Magazine for Young Folks Enlarged and Printed in New Type.

SINCE 1873, when, under the editorial management of Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, the publication of St. Nicholas for Young Folks was begun, it has led all magazines for girls and boys. Nothing like it was known before, and to-day, as the Chicago Inter-Ocean recently said, "it is the model and ideal juvenile magazine of the world." Through its pages the greatest writers of our time are speaking to the youth of America and England, and the best artists and engravers are training the eyes of the boys and girls to appreciate the highest in art. Nobody knows how many readers St. Nicholas has. In "the third largest public library in America,—that in Indianapolis,—more than 4,000 people read each month's number.

Since the first issue Mrs. Dodge has remained as editor. [illegible]

Utica, Nov. 4.

Politics seemed to exclude cheese from the market to-day, [illegible] talk of the syndicate in factories. C. B. Byrne was busy all the afternoon taking options, and he states it understood that he does not represent an English syndicate, but only C. B. Byrne & Co. He has taken options on about 40 factories in Oneida county, many of them standing in the front rank.

As to cheese, that seemed to be a minor consideration to-day. The ruling is off ¼c, and is based on part of time. Full cream goods sold at [illegible] and upward. Many of the October goods turn out to be skims, but as one maker said to-day, "If they had the state brand on them no one would take them for anything but full creams." The September and early Octobers of the full make were generally taken for home trade, and went to western cities. The Septembers still held back are in firm hands and will probably not be sold for some time to come, unless better prices can be obtained.

Following are the sales of the day:

Lots	Boxes	Price.
47	3,950	9¼
9	535	9⅝
11	900	9⅝
4	665	9¼
28	1,680	9⅝
1	100	9⅝
1	300	9¾
3	140	10c
2	200	p. t.
100	8,400
	475	Com.
Total	8,875

Ruling 9½c. Transactions one year ago 6,780 boxes, ruling 9⅝c. Two years ago 9,850 boxes, ruling 10¼c. Sales of butter were 64 packages creamery at 23 to 25c., bulk at 25c.

LITTLE FALLS, Nov. 4.

Cheese—Our market shows very little variation from that of a week ago. Just about the same amount of stock changed hands, and the prices are substantially the same. White cheese is more sought for, being given the preference by all buyers. The quality of stock is being well maintained, and salesmen are letting it go forward without hesitation. There should be a large consumption of cheese at present prices, both in this country and abroad, and this would seem to indicate that it would not be necessary that prices go any lower in order to dispose of all the cheese still in first hands. The trade to-day is as follows:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
31	1,953	9¼
39	2,716	9½
9	860	9¾
1	190	10c.
12	730	Com.
92	6,439
Farm dairies	1,090
Total.	7,529

Farm dairies—There was a good lively market in dairy cheese and prices ranged at 9¼ to 10c.; nearly all sold at 9¾c. and 10c. Sales were 1,090 boxes.

Butter—The sales of farm dairy butter reached 48 packages, prices ranging at 18 to 21c., the bulk selling at 20c. There were 17 packages of creamery butter sold at 23c.

AT FULTON.

Nearly the usual number of factories were represented at the market here last Monday evening and 800 boxes of cheese were sold at 9½ cents.

Young Men's Christian Association.

The lecture given by Prof. J. S. Riggs D. D. on last Friday evening under our auspices was well attended and appreciated. The next on our course is the lecture on "Napoleon Bonaparte" by Dr. C. J. Little of Syracuse, on the evening of the 22nd of this month.

Preparations are well under way for the special services of this coming Sabbath and following three days in connection with the week of prayer for young men. Instead of our regular Sunday afternoon meeting we intend holding a mass meeting, to which every person in Fulton, Oswego Falls and neighborhood is invited. It will be held in the Opera House at 3 o'clock, for the purpose of presenting the work of the Associations in America, and will be made specially attractive by solo and quartet singing, accompanied by cornets, violins, and piano. We wish it understood that this meeting is not limited to men, but open to the public in general.

The meetings to be held in our rooms on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings will be led by the pastors of the Presbyterian, Baptist and Methodist churches. These will be for men only.

The convention of our district, No. 5, will be held the 15th to 17th of this month at Carthage. We expect to be represented by five or six of our members, and two or three of these have consented to prepare papers on different phases of the work, to be read there.

There is still room for more names on our Boarding House and Employment registers. Two or three young men have applied to us lately to help them in securing positions. We would be pleased if employers who are in need at any time of one or more hands, would call or send us word, and thereby help us materially in this department of our work.

The attendants on the gymnasium classes show much interest, and are taking hold of this new departure with vim and enthusiasm.

The Universalist revival meetings have been somewhat a matter of surprise to many. At least the residents of Fulton know what a revival in the Universalist denomination means. Certainly many of the members of the Orthodox churches, who were in attendance, are ready to concede a high degree of spiritual religious interest pervaded these meetings so earnestly carried on by Stanford Mitchell, the singer and preacher, and the very earnest worker, Rev. B. Brunning, the resident pastor. One member joined the church last Sunday, and quite a number of others, the pastor informs us, are to come in soon. The perfect singing of Mr. Mitchell will be long remembered.

Despite the fact that the clothing and gents' furnishing goods trade is well represented in Fulton there is always room for one more. We make this startling announcement as a new representative in the person of H. J. Peebles Jr. has arrived in town. He was born last Sunday.

M. Takaki, a Japanese student of Syracuse University, gave an address on Life and Customs in Japan at the M. E. church Sunday evening. It was the semi-annual meeting of the S. S. Missionary Society. $50. was the amount that had been collected for the missionary cause.

Secretary Carson of the Fulton Y. M. C. A., attended the annual convention of the Seventh District Association at Norwich, Saturday and Sunday. The Fulton Association is in the Fifth District and their annual convention will be held at Carthage on Nov. 15 and 16.

Considerable excitement was manifested here the latter part of last week. A child was born Thursday to an unmarried woman named Sarah Garrett, who has been employed for several weeks as a chamber-maid in the Lewis House. Suspicion that a criminal offense had been committed brought Coroner Vowinkel here from Oswego. After an investigation he satisfied himself that the child had been born dead, and decided that an inquest was not necessary. Miss Garrett attributes her misfortune to a young man of Kingston, Ont., where she lived last summer.

The opening night of what Mr. Green terms pleasant evenings was held at Grace Mission, Monday night and was well attended. The introductory remarks were made by Rev. W. D. Chase, a selection was read by Miss Roxie Snow and Mr. F. E. Bacon gave an hours talk on the west. The singing for the occasion was under the charge of Mr. F. E. Goodjon. The next entertainment will be next Monday at 7:30 when Mrs. G. V. Emens will read. Singing under charge of Prof. Cooper and talks on Andersonville Prison by R. B. The Kellogg Concert.

Mr. Kellogg who is to appear at the M. E. church next Friday evening, comes most highly recommended.

The following are but two of the many favorable press comments that we have before us:

Mr. Kellogg never fails to please with his whistling and warbling solos. —Syracuse Journal.

The whistling of Mr. Charles D. Kellogg has never been equaled in Cortland. The sweet, clear and, at the same time, powerful notes, at times filling the whole opera house with music seemed wonderful to all, and the audience seemed determined never to be satisfied.—Cortland Daily Standard.

In addition to this artist William Grant Egbert, an able violinist, Lewis Phillips an accomplished boy pianist and Van Eric Kilpatrick, humorist and impersonator, will appear.

Just received a new line of Newmarkets at Rosenbloom's

Oswego the Banner County.

From the tabulated returns just compiled in the office of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction at Albany, it has been ascertained that the total number of trees planted on Arbor Day in the school districts throughout the State outside of the cities, was 24,166. These were all planted on school grounds. The banner county was Oswego, where 1,061 were planted. The four next in order were: Chautauqua, 992; Chenango, 880; St Lawrence, 794; Cattaragus, 772. The banner school district was the first district of Chenango, where under the direction of Commissioner L. C. Hayes, 581 trees were planted. Pressing close upon the record of the first Chenango district was the third Oswego district, presided over by Miss Ida L. Griffin. In this district 528 young and thrifty trees were set out.

The Catholic Temperance League.

The Father Mathew Temperance Society of this village which became so well known for its work during the past few years disbanded some time since for reasons best known to its members, and another society of a similar character was organized on Sunday last under the name of the "Catholic Temperance League." The following were elected its officers: President, F. Laporte; first vice-president, E. Cavanaugh; second vice-president, John White; recording secretary, William Lalonde; financial secretary E. Doyle; corresponding secretary, J. Fox; chairman, W. Hogan; janitor, T. Wark; treasurer, Frank Dunn; truntees, M. Crahan, Frank Dunn, Edward Laporte; spiritual adviser, Rev. Father Earley.

H. & A. Rosenbloom are daily adding to their present large line of Overcoats and ulsters.

The Merchant

Who keeps his name and business constantly before the public eye is bound to realize the beneficial effect of so doing. People will feel, in one sense, acquainted with him, and his name will naturally occur to them when they need his wares. In these busy times people do not care to hunt up the man who has goods for sale; they prefer, rather, to go where their attention is called, and then if they find the goods as represented the foundation of their future patronage is laid. So says Printer's Ink.

The Kellogg Warbling Concert at the M. E. church next Friday evening. Admission 25 cents. Children under 12 years 15 cents.

There will be given in the parlors of the Congregational church, Friday November 15th, a "clothes-pin social" under the auspices Y. P. S. C. E.

The Regents will hereafter hold only two examinations a year, and those for the present school year will occur Jan. 20-24, and June 9-13.

Mead, Stranahan & Spencer have leased the rooms in the Kenyon block formerly occupied by Piper & Van Wagenen and have moved their law office there.

The fine piano used at the Universalist church through the revival meetings, was one one of Meher's finest uprights and was furnished free by Mrs. Gertrude Church.

Great progress has been made on the new Catholic church during the past few weeks. The rafters for the roof are now in position and the church will soon be enclosed.

The first annual Chrysantheum Exhibition and Flower Show of the Central New York Horticultural Society will be held at Greyhound Hall, Syracuse, on Thursday and Friday of this week.

Miss Julia Kimball has resigned her position as teacher in one of the primary departments of Fulton Union School, the resignation to take effect at the close of the present term. Need we mention why Miss Kimball resigns?

Guy Bros. Minstrels gave a good old fashioned minstrel performance to a fair house Monday evening. The Guy brothers are all good while Cooper the contortionist and Scofield the juggler were wonderful in their specialties.

I. H. Brounstein the enterprising and wide awake Syracuse Clothier and Merchant Tailor has children's day Friday and Saturday at his stores, 13 and 15 North Salina Street, Syracuse. See his "ad" in another column.

A reproduction of a District School of the olden time will be given in the in the parlors of the Presbyterian church on the evening of Friday, November 15th. This entertainment is for the benefit of the Y. P. S. C. E. Please bear in mind the date.

The boys were out in large numbers last Thursday night and did lively work. Many felt like kicking the ears off from two or three of them, but recalled the time when they were boys themselves. So Hallowe'en passed without serious damage being done.

Waugh Bros.' paper mill across the river is receiving the finishing touches. Pure Asbestos roofing from the H. W. Johns' Mfg. Co. is being put on by J. W. Roche of Oswego. He also will put it on the foundry to the gun works and the new addition which is being built to the pulp mill at the upper falls.

The indictment against Alfred M. Crotty, the Brooklyn drummer charged with inducing Lida E. Bennett of Oswego, to elope with him on promise of marriage was set aside by Justice Kennedy in Special Term, Saturday. An order was however entered holding Crotty for the next grand jury, his bail being fixed at $3,000.

Miss Kittie Lang, daughter of the furniture dealer, J. C. Lang, started on Wednesday last for Walton Junction, Iowa, where her sister, Mrs. Joseph B. Hall now resides. On Sunday next she will be married to Mr. William Perine, formerly of this village, now of Cold Springs, where Mr. Perine has a position as bookkeeper for a large mercantile house. The well wishes of a host of Fulton friends go out to the couple.

Several officials of the New York Ontario & Western railroad were in town Thursday looking over their newly acquired property on Broadway, and with a view to make improvements on Second street, which they agreed to do when certain privileges were granted them by the village board some time since. The company intends making some needed improvements in Second street. The party consisted of John Burton, general manager; E. Canfield, chief engineer; C. W. Lamphere, superintendent of transportation; M. Finnegan and D. Laden, roadmasters; A. Damanos, superintendent of bridges and buildings, and P. W. Cullinan and G. A. Marsden, attorneys.

[illegible] Assembly.

[illegible] Returns of Oswego County.

Returns from nearly every part of the State show that [illegible] Democratic by from 12,000 to 20,000 majority. The legislature however is safely Republican, and it is even thought that they will have a two thirds majority. N. N. Stranahan the popular young lawyer of Fulton made a gallant fight and comes out with a majority of 176. A very heavy fight was made against him, the liquor element writhing to secure his defeat and it is understood put up large monies for that purpose. In view of this fact his victory is especially gratifying.

That Little Tickling

In your throat, which makes you cough once in a while and keeps you constantly clearing your throat, arises from catarrh, and as catarrh is a constitutional disease the ordinary cough medicines all fail to hit the spot. What you need is a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla. Many people who have taken this medicine for scrofula, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, and other troubles, have been surprised that it should cure this troublesome cough. But to know the actual cause of the cough is to solve the mystery. Many cases of consumption can be traced back to the neglect of some such slight affection as this. Consumption can be controlled in its early stages, and the effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla in purifying the blood, building up the general health, and expelling the scrofulous taint which is the cause of catarrh and consumption, has restored to perfect health many persons on whom this dreaded disease seemed to have a firm hold.

A good supply of dry road dust, to be used in the poultry house dusting boxes through the Winter, will be found very convenient.

The general condition of oats, according to the report of the National department, is 90; of rye, 91.6; of barley, 88.9; of buckwheat, 93.1; of tobacco, 78.8.

It is to be hoped that farmers throughout the country will heed the request of Census Commissioner Porter that they keep accurate accounts of the product of their farms this year so that trustworthy information may be given when the census-taker calls.

Bone dust, says an American Agriculturist writer, should not be mixed with the chicken feed. It is too stimulating and is liable to cause enlargement of the liver in hens that are not laying. Put it where the hens can get it, and those that want it and need it can then eat just what they care for and no more.

E. Williams, the veteran fruit culturist, says in Rural New Yorker that he cannot tell any one how to pack grapes for Winter use till he succeeds in doing it satisfactorily himself. He thinks a cool, dry cellar or fruit-house has more of the elements of success than the mode of packing; but with ordinary appliances he has yet to learn the art of keeping any of his grapes much beyond the first of November.

Cheese making is an art, says Colonel F. D. Curtis in the Country Gentleman, with the emphasis of italics, and suggests that dairy schools are needed in this country to multiply the corps of teachers of cheese-making. There are a few instructors doing good missionary work among the cheese factories, showing manufacturers how to make a cheese that is both palatable and wholesome; but their number needs to be largely increased.

THE PROPER THING.

The empire styles remain in favor.

Basque bodies have been left almost entirely to tailor gowns.

The collar is high for street gowns but lower and either round or pointed for house dresses.

Coarsely woven camel's hair, with corner pieces and borders of contrasting colors, makes very effective dresses.

The fronts of waists are as fully draped as heretofore and in many elegant dresses are round while the back is pointed.

The antique bodices, half high with great falling ruffs of lace and long sleeves reaching to the wrists are quaint and picturesque.

Black cloth dresses have gold palm leaves braided up each side of the pleated skirt, with smaller palms on the collar, vest and cuffs of the habit-basque.

The directoire styles have served the purpose of introducing the long princesse coats and modest princesse dresses which will prevail the coming winter.

A new coat sleeve has a simple round empire puff at the top and row after row of velvet ribbon or passementerie passing around the sleeve below, making a long arm look shorter and a thin arm fuller.

The Boston Journal of Commerce prints the following "About Yourself."

The average number of teeth is 32.

The weight of the circulating blood is 28 pounds.

The average weight of an adult is 150 pounds and 6 ounces.

The brain of a man exceeds twice that of any other animal.

A man brethes about 18 pints of air in minute, or upwards of 7 hogsheads a day.

The average weight of the brain of a man is 3½ pounds; of a woman 2 pounds 11 ounces.

Five hundred and forty pounds, or 1 hogshead and 11 pints of blood, pass through the heart in one hour.

The average height of an Englishman is 5 feet 9 inches; of a Frenchman 5 feet 4 inches; of a Belgian 5 feet 6¾ inches.

The heart sends nearly 10 pounds of blood through the veins and arteries at one beat and makes four beats while we breathe once.

One hundred and seventy-five million cells are in the lungs, which would cover a surface of thirty times greater than the human body.

The average of the pulse in infancy is 120 per minute; in manhood 80; at 60 years 60. The pulse of females is more frequent than that of males.

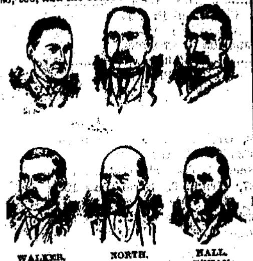
CULVER. PIERSON. DIX. ALLISON. BOUTECOU. CORKE.

First of the chosen twelve is John Culver, a Chicago real estate man, 40 years old, a Methodist, a [illegible] temperance man and a native American. The second is James A. Pierson, a farmer living near Glenwood. He is 30 years old, an American of "Pennsylvania Dutch" extraction, and an "unattached Protestant"—a phrase invented during this trial to signify a man of Protestant parentage and sympathy, but not a member of any church. John L. Hall is a draughtsman, of Chicago, 32 years old, formerly a country school teacher, a native American, a Methodist, and pronounced temperance man.

Charles C. Dix is a clerk, and at present cashier at an insurance office, quite a young man, unmarried, an "unattached Protestant," but regular attendant on the Episcopal service. Henry D. Walker is 38 years old, a native American, a Chicago upholsterer and "unattached Protestant." Frank Allison is 30 years old, a Chicago machinist, native American and Presbyterian. Charles L. Corke, of Evanston, is a drug clerk, 30 years old, a Methodist and native American. On question Mr. Corke stated that he had a prejudice against the Clan-na-Gael, but could lay it aside for this trial. The defense challenged him for cause, the court overruled it, and the attorney for Beggs withdrew objection on behalf of his client. William S. North, of Chicago, is a manufacturer of sewing machines, 43 years old, a native American and a Presbyterian. Charles F. Marlor, of Chicago, is a drug clerk, quite a young man, a native of New York, of American parentage and an Episcopalian. He acknowledged a general prejudice against the Clan-na-Gael, and was accepted by the attorney for Beggs, though objected to by other attorneys for the defense.

Elijah Boutecou is a dry goods salesman of Chicago, a young man, native of New York, "unattached Protestant" and member of several secret societies. Edward S. Bryan lives at Maywood, near Chicago, is a salesman and young looking man, native of New Jersey, "of a family American for several generations," and a Congregationalist. He was examined at great length, admitting that he had read "all the papers said on the case" (he must have given up all other business), and had a prejudice against the Clan-na-Gael. Nevertheless he thought he could do justice. The attorney for one of the prisoners thought so, too, and the court accepted Mr. Bryan.



WALKER. MARLOR. NORTH. CLARKE. HALL. BRYAN.

Finally, and after rather the warmest struggle of all, Benjamin F. Clarke, real estate man of Chicago, was admitted as the twelfth juror. He had read much about the case, had a prejudice against the Clan-na-Gael, doubted his ability to believe a member of that order in such a trial as this, and had some more rather decided views. Nevertheless he could throw prejudice aside, and "assuredly would not find any prisoner guilty unless the prosecution proved a clear case;" so the defense withdrew its objection.

The Late Lawyer Bowman.

The wildly sensational career of Frank J. Bowman, lawyer, duelist, bigamist and adventurer, came suddenly to a sensational end the other day when B. M. Chambers, ex-banker and bankrupt, fired a load of buckshot into his heart. For years Bowman had pursued Chambers, through the courts, trying to force him to surrender an annuity he held from his deceased wife's estate, to satisfy an old judgment. At last Bowman got a favorable decision and went in person to seize Chambers' furniture, receiving instead a sudden death.

Bowman was about fifty years old, and for twenty-five years had been a notorious character in St. Louis. Once he was disbarred for betraying clients, there being nineteen charges against him. During the life of his first wife he took a young girl to Chicago and lived with her, and after his wife's death persuaded her that any form of ceremony was a common law marriage. Disregarding that he married another woman in Brooklyn. His second wife succeeded in getting a divorce and alimony on her common law marriage, but he appealed successively to higher courts and the case was pending at his death. He had many personal encounters, challenged various parties to duels and openly threatened death to his enemies. He was employed to collect desperate claims, and in one case earned a contingent fee of $70,000. To poor debtors he was merciless, and by the hand of one, a feeble old man, he met his death. Since Aaron Burr and Monroe Edwards the west has not seen his equal.

FRANK J. BOWMAN.

Then Don't Go.

If so, you should know that only one person in thirteen can drink milk in any quantity without becoming bilious, and only one in eleven can eat honey without having a touch of the colic. Jap Miller.

BY JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

Jap Miller down at Martinsville's the blamiest fellow yit;
When he starts a talkin', other folks is apt to quit—
'Pears like that mouth o' his'n wuzn't made fur nothin' else
But jus' to argify 'em down and gather in their pelts.
He'll talk you down on tariff, er he'll talk you down on tax,
And prove the pore man pays 'em all—and them's about the facts!
Religen, law, er politics, prize fighting er base ball—
Jes' tetch Jap up a little and he'll post you 'bout 'um all.

And the comicalest feller ever tilted back a cheer
And tuck a chaw tobacker kind o' like he didnt' keer;
There's where the feller's strength lays—he's so common-like and plain,
They ain't no dude about old Jap, you bet you, nary grain!
They 'lected him to council, and it never turned his head,
And didn't make no difference what anybody said—
He didn't dress no finer, ner rag out in fancy clothes;
But his voice in council meetn's is a turror to his foes.
He's fer the pore man ever' time! and in the last campaign,
He stumped old Morgan county through the sun shine and the rain,
And helt the banner up'ards from a-trailin' in dust,
And cut loose on monopolies and cussed and cussed, and cussed!
He'd tell some funny story ever' now and then, you know,
Tel, blame it! it wuz better'n a jack-o'-lantern show!
And I'd go furder yit, to-day, to hear old Jap norate
Than any high-toned orator 'at ever stumped the State.
W'y, that air blame Jap Miller, with his keen, sarcastic fun,
Has got more friends than any candidate 'at ever run;
Don't matter what his views is, when he states the same to you,
They allus coincide with your'n the same as two and two.
You can't take issue with him—or at least they hain't no sense
In startin' in to down him, so you better not commence—
The best way's jes' to listen, like yer humble servant does,
And jes' concede Jap Miller is the best man ever wuz.

THE PROPER THING.

Round muffs are slightly larger, with fancy linings, but no trimming of bows.

Heavy twilled English cloths are made up into handsome, fur trimmed garments.

Fitch skins are again in favor for capes, on account of their stylish yellow brown hues.

Carriage wraps and evening cloaks are now almost the only fur-lined garments worn.

In many of the new dress mantles the wrap and sleeves are of entirely different material.

The simplest shape for long seal garments is the slender ulster, tight-fitting and single-breasted.

Shoulder capes, called also pelerines, are the fashionable small pieces of fur at present. Plain seal skin capes with high wired collar are the popular choice.

Seal skin sacques have come to be very stylish coats, as they are more closely fitted than formerly, and are cut less full in the back, with reference to dispensing with bustles.

The fur cravatte is a pretty little novelty for wrapping the neck around the high collar of the gown or cloak, and is made of the whole skin of a single animal, with its stuffed head and legs and tail left on.

Newspaper Editor — Eh? What's the matter? Don't you consider my paper a good advertising medium?

Oh, yes, the paper is all right; but I don't care to attract attention to those lots for a while now. We are nearing the season of the year when that land is generally under water.—N. Y. Weekly.

Easterner—Do you get very good crops out here? Nebraska Farmer—Stranger, this here is the most fertilest soil in the world. This fall I ploughed up seven gold watches all in a bunch over in that patch of ground behind the barn. Eastener—Hidden by some robber, I suppose. Farmer—No, siree! It was where my boy had dropped his Waterbury the spring before, an' it'd got plowed under.—Terre Haute Express.

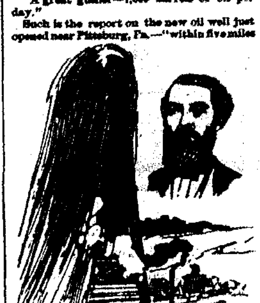
LIGHT FROM THE ROCKS.

"THE ROCKS POURED ME OUT RIVERS OF OIL."—JOB.

Thousands of Barrels Per Day—Startling Facts in the Production, Sale and Transport of Oil—Ancient Methods—E. L. Drake the First to "Strike Oil" by Boring.

"A great gusher—1,000 barrels of oil per day."

Such is the report on the new oil well just opened near Pittsburg, Pa.—"within five miles of the court house." Only thirty years ago was the first oil well in America or the world opened, and twice already has the business declined till men said it was at an end, and revived again only to be greater than ever. In these thirty years at least $450,000,000 have been invested in it, at least 40,000 wells have been bored at a cost of $190,000,000, and the cash receipts for the products have slightly exceeded $600,000,000! Verily a great American industry.

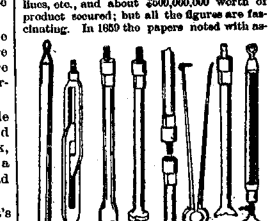


THE LATEST WELL. COL. DRAKE.

But it is far from being exclusively American. Indeed, the idea of using the oil of the rocks first came from Asia, and the greatest oil basin in the world is thought to be in one of Russia's late acquisitions. And the greatest strike in oil annals was by a Russian company at Baku, where a well was opened last year which spouted a column 225 feet high and yielded 11,000 tons per day for some time. In America, even at the lowest prices yet known, it would make millionaires; in Asia it bankrupted the projectors. The rates for transportation did not justify their shipping the crude petroleum, they had no facilities for refining it and had to pay heavy damages to adjacent land owners.

The phenomena attendant on the Baku spouter exceeded all previously known in the business. The Russian official speaks of the preliminary birth throes of the monster, in which stones were hurled to a great distance. Then came the roar of the escaping gas, which could be heard several miles and rendered the atmosphere almost insupportable, and after that the fine sand and then the oil. Sand and dust continued to be produced during all the gusher's vigorous period, and, drifting into neighboring dwellings and gardens, did much damage. The oil formed great lakes sufficient to float large vessels, but for reasons given above the product was almost a total loss. For want of a pipe line to the Black sea uncounted millions of gallons sunk into the soil, but the owners at last managed to place an immense cap on the mouth of the well, and its further gushing awaits a more favorable season.

As was stated above, $450,000,000 or more have been invested in American wells, pipe lines, etc., and about $500,000,000 worth of product secured; but all the figures are fascinating. In 1859 the papers noted with astonishment that 82,000 barrels had been produced—all in a little district of Pennsylvania. In 1876 the yield was 9,000,000 barrels. Then the great Bradford field was opened, and the next year the yield was 13,000,000 barrels. Thence the increase was about 5,000,000 a year, and in 1882 America astonished the world with a total yield of 31,789,190 barrels.



DRILLING TOOLS.

Beginning at the left the tools shown are: Sand pump, jarr, drill, round reamer, drill stem, pipe tongs, reamer, temper screw.

What wild freaks did fortune play in those years in many a home. What must have been the sudden elevations when Titusville sprang at one bound from a country hamlet to a city of 10,000 or more, when Oil City sprang up in the wilderness, and when thousands of acres, worth scarcely three years taxes, suddenly became of immense value. What lavish display by the suddenly rich; what gorgeous plumage and gaudy jewelry; what "ho-turr," as we say in Paris (Illinois), by ladies who had been "fetch up" in a cabin and hoed corn barefooted, but must now "make the tower of Yurrup, 'cos pa had struck oil." And how fast the satirists and caricaturists and slang makers followed the movements of the newly rich. Our language was adorned with many new and striking phrases; but why enlarge when one man has summarized the whole thing in his own person. The mere name of "Coal Oil Johnnie" has a volume in it. It means everything possible in the line of reckless extravagance, the folly of a youth with suddenly acquired wealth, and a wild passion to illustrate how "the fool and his money are soon parted."

The variations of price were wonderful. "Pacific Mail" stock was a dead level compared to petroleum. The oil has actually sold as low as ten cents a barrel and as high as $20, though the average has been about $4. At first it was shipped by barges down the Allegheny, and by team and in cans and barrels by rail. Then came the once noted and greatly dreaded tank cars, and soon after the pipe lines which are now connected with some 21,000 wells and receive from them anywhere from 50,000 to 65,000 barrels daily. In addition they hold in storage tanks from 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 barrels, and this is the consideration which gives the speculator pause. It is not in the power of any combination yet formed to greatly "bull" an article of which so much is ready any hour for the market. There are about 5,000 miles of pipe lines and over 1,000 large iron tanks, and from Olean to New York city flow 18,000 or 20,000 barrels daily.

The export trade has far outgrown (by percentage) that in any other product. In the campaign of [illegible] the people learned with [illegible] [illegible]

The first vein of oil struck by boring was at Titusville, Pa., on Aug. 25, 1859, and the man who did the work, who inaugurated this great industry, was an unsung hero, Col. E. L. Drake. He read of the ancient methods of collecting rock oil in Persia and other lands of the orient, saw the American method of digging pits for it to seep into, and after long study of the subject concluded that its storage place was in the rocks and that it must be bored or dug for. He did it, made a success and established a new and peculiarly American industry—for this he deserves, and oil men say shall have, a monument.

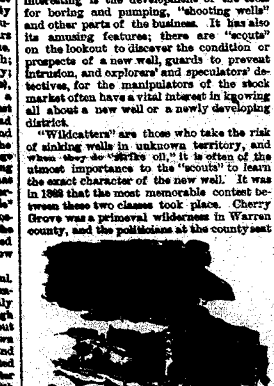
Edwin L. Drake was born March 29, 1819, in Greenville, Green county, N. J. In early manhood he located near Ann Arbor, Mich., on a farm, but later became a dry goods clerk in New York city. The ill health of his wife drove him to change his residence, and he followed various pursuits, till in 1856 he became manager for a little oil company. He found the people using the "Seneca oil," as they called it, for a medicine, and after many discouragements he succeeded, on the 23d day of March, 1858, in organizing what was called the "Seneca Oil company." He was their local agent with a salary of $1,000 a year and commenced drilling. The painful details of his discouragements need not be set forth. Again and again the company declared they would do no more; but again he persuaded them to resume.

On the 25th of August, 1859, they "struck oil;" on the 28th they withdrew the drills, and the next day they drew up a tin pipe section full of oil. There was an "excitement." On the last day of August Mr. Drake was recognized in Titusville as a success, for it was known that early that the well would yield at least twenty barrels a day. It soon rose to twenty-five, then gradually declined; but the problem was solved, "boring for oil" was soon to be a rage. Like most great discoverers, Mr. Drake got no benefit from it. In 1869 he was so poor that the oil operators made up for him a purse of $4,200. Like James Marshall, who discovered gold in Capt. Sutter's mill race in California, he was long forgotten. In 1873 the legislature of Pennsylvania granted a pension of $1,500 a year to Mr. Drake and wife during the life of either. In 1870 he located in Bethlehem, Penn., where, on the 9th of November, 1881, he died.

A SCOUT.

Many columns like this would be required to trace the development of the new industry, to relate how the "Seneca oil for rheumatism" became the great illuminator, how lamps were invented to suit it, and how kindly the people took to it until, in three or four years, "star candles" became obsolete and a tallow one was exhibited as a specimen of the "light of other days." Equally interesting is the development of the tools for boring and pumping, "shooting wells" and other parts of the business. It has also its amusing features; there are "scouts" on the lookout to discover the condition or prospects of a new well, guards to prevent intrusion, and explorers' and speculators' detectives, for the manipulators of the stock market often have a vital interest in knowing all about a new well or a newly developing district.

"Wildcatters" are those who take the risk of sinking wells in unknown territory, and when they do "strike oil," it is often of the utmost importance to the "scouts" to learn the exact character of the new well. It was in 1882 that the most memorable contest between these two classes took place. Cherry Grove was a primeval wilderness in Warren county, and the politicians at the county seat always knew without waiting for the returns just how the township had gone, for it contained but fourteen voters. Four men early in 1882 set up a derrick in that wilderness and began to bore, and most alarming reports reached those who were "long of oil stocks"—that is, those who held much oil and therefore wanted the price to go up. So the woods were soon full of "scouts."



AN OIL FIRE.

The owners surrounded the derrick with a high board fence and had armed guards, [illegible] of all employers, for they "went short," and in a few days prices fell so greatly as to involve a total loss of $[illegible] to the holders. It was "Black Friday" to the "bulls," and no wonder, for "Number 646" yielded 4,000 barrels a day from the start, and what was more, it proved that a new field was to be opened, and that hundreds of new wells would soon be flowing. Crude petroleum, which had been selling at eighty-five cents a barrel, declined rapidly to forty-nine cents—a figure which, for a time, stopped production on all but the big flowing wells.

"Shooting a well," or "torpedoing" is a ticklish business. The nitro-glycerine—enough of it to blow up a regiment—must be poured into a canister which looks like a section of a water spout, and the same lowered very gently to the bottom of the well, so fixed with a trigger attachment that it will in due time explode. This blows out the loose sand and loosens the sand rock in which is the petroleum, and so the oil flows again. But if anything sets off the nitro-glycerine prematurely, either in the hands of the "shooter" or before he can get away from the mouth of the well, then "Good-by, John!" Cases have occurred in which a single finger was the only remnant ever found. And at least one case in which a teamster, wagon and two mules, transporting the pesky stuff, were suddenly obliterated—atomized, so to speak, for not a trace of either was ever found, not even a splinter of the wagon. It was supposed that the man drove too hard against a big stone—there was a terrific explosion, a cloud of dust, a hole in the ground and nothing more.

A blazing well is a sublime, an awful sight. Of course there are many ways in which so inflammable a substance may take fire, and formerly such a calamity was irremediable; but Yankee ingenuity has found remedies. Quite recently some brilliant triumphs over the fire are reported, the operators having rigged immense derricks and swung a mammoth "cap" over the mouth of the well, then lowered it and smothered out the fire.

Thirty years of practical work and daily experience with the fluid have not destroyed, have scarcely lessened, the romance of oil. Still it excites the liveliest interest, still it inflames the imagination; and now the development and control of natural gas have come to heighten the wonder of man's triumph over nature. That puny man should bore deep into the earth for hidden powers and harness the infernal elements to the car of progress is indeed a matter to swell the heart with pride and hope, to add proof to the theory that mind will eventually control all matter and strengthen faith in the divine origin of the intellect and the immortality of the soul. The cut of the Pittsburg well is from Frank Leslie's.

THE BIG RAILROAD COMBINE.

Map Showing the Extent of the Vanderbilt-Union Pacific Chain.

"Consolidation" is the order of the day. Each succeeding combination of capital strikes the public with astonishment as exceeding all that have gone before it, and now there is a combination of combinations in railroad management which utterly dwarfs everything ever known in corporate power, and makes such affairs as the British East India company, the Oriental and the greatest French enterprises seem more "bucket shop" business in comparison.

This new aggregation has been named "the Pacific Vanderbilt Chain." Of the first details given out some points have since been denied, but as the final consummation is certain the public may soon contemplate a corporate entity, a national company, or a colossal "trust"—call it what you will—which owns and controls 27,000 miles of railroad and $1,186,642,000 in debts and capital! Nearly twelve hundred million dollars! The mere words and figures dazzle the eye of a common capitalist. The germ of this consolidation, so to speak, was in the New York Central, but while it was adding line after line to its western connections, two other combinations were forming in the west—now all are consolidated and the figures stand as follows. In the columns giving the bonded

The Alton men do not at this writing concede that the consolidation is complete as to them, but admit that it is to be. The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul also stands upon a somewhat separate footing, but as the Drexel-Morgan-Vanderbilt party virtually control its management, it will in no way antagonize the combination, and may, therefore, be included. Some minor lines are yet to be annexed; so the total capital will be very near $600,000,000 and the debts nearly as much.

J. Pierpont Morgan is credited with having engineered this great deal, and this is but the crowning act of his experience in organizing and consolidation. The actual cash paid is reported at $12,000,000, much of the stock, of course, remaining in the hands of the present holders. Of this cash the Vanderbilts furnished the larger part from their "private means"—that is, without sale of other stocks or drawing on their corporation treasury. In short, it was simply some little means they had laid by out of their private incomes. The rest comes from Boston men, who own stock in the Union Pacific.

They Are Much Talked Of.

The portraits given here are of two people who have been talked and written of a good deal of late—Prince Murat, who was to have married Miss Mary Gwendoline Caldwell, and Miss Huntington, nee Prentice, who did marry Prince Hatzfeldt. Prince Murat is credited with having broken off the marriage with Miss Caldwell because she would allow him as her husband but a beggarly $10,000 a year. It is painful to hear that the marriage may be arranged later on after all.

THE MARITIME CONGRESS.

Some Points Regarding Its Work and Its Members.

The members of the Maritime conference now in session at Washington, for the purpose of fixing a code of action for vessels meeting on the high seas, have no unimportant task before them. The multiplication of vessels of different kinds and sizes during the present century has rendered a code necessary, as perfect as it can be made. Since fifty years the application of steam has compelled a course for steamers differing largely from that of sailers, besides largely adding to the number of vessels. It is quite evident, therefore, that the very limited action which has been heretofore taken, and confined mostly to England and America, is now insufficient, and a well developed code for the ships of all nations has become indispensable.

VERNEY. VERBRUGGHE. BISBEE.
CHEN NGEN TAO. SIEVEKING.

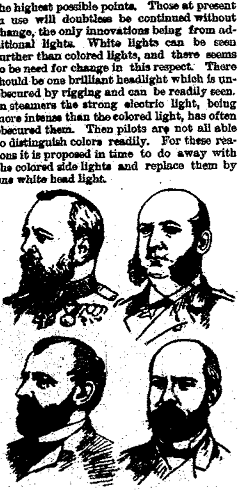
Among the members of the commission are: Baron de Spaun, representing Austria; a man well read in international law and experienced in maritime affairs; Frederick W. Verney, representing Siam, is attached to the Siamese legation at London; Lieut. Cottman, of the United States navy, is secretary of the United States delegation; Capt. F. S. Malmberg, of Sweden, is chief of the nautical meteorological bureau of Norway; Capt. P. T. Salveson, a Norwegian, is a member of the Swedish navy; Capt. A. M. Bisbee, a delegate from China, is an American who has been in the service of the Chinese government for many years. The other members of the delegation are Chinamen, one of whom is Commander Chen Ngen Tao, of the Chinese navy. Then there is Dr. F. Sieveking, of Germany, and Theodore Verbrugghe, of Belgium, both prominent members of the commission.

The older and simpler maritime code referred, of course, especially to sailers. It has always been essential, where two ships meet at sea, that there should be some rule to guide them to prevent collisions. These rules naturally took cognizance of the wind, and the direction of the ships meeting. Steamers have a universal rule to pass to the starboard. When two steamers are about to cross each other's track, the one having the other on her starboard must give way. When one ship is following another, she must keep away from the ship she follows. There is an old fashioned rule which works badly. It is that all steamers must give way to all sailing vessels. Such a rule requires all payment to be made by the steamer in case of accident, and instances may arise where it would be to the interest of a sailer to be wrecked by a steamer.

On the other hand, the steamer in a fog has a great advantage over a sailer, since she is nearly always longer and heavier. It is well known that some of the captains of the ocean greyhounds prefer to run at full speed in a fog, so that in case of collision the chances of damage shall be in her favor and against the sailer. Doubtless the commission will attempt to make these advantages more equal, and it is probable that the exclusive right of way will be taken from sailers, and the speed of steamers in a fog will be limited.

Lights and fog horns must necessarily be taken up and disposed of. The light question is very important, and the penalty fixed for any vessel not carrying lights at night should be very severe. There has been a good deal of inattention in this respect by sailors who either neglect to put lights out, or to keep them burning, thus endangering their lives and the lives of others. Fog horns are said to be inefficient. Those used on sailers cannot be heard for more than half a mile, and on steamers the sound of machinery and other causes seriously interfere with that of their fog horns. The Chinese use a gong, which is considered more efficient, having three times the range of the fish horn and ten times its life. It is not improbable that the commission may adopt gongs for the world.

Then attention is required as to the position of the lights of vessels lying in harbor or at sea. It is essential that lights be carried at the highest possible points. Those at present in use will doubtless be continued without change, the only innovations being from additional lights. White lights can be seen further than colored lights, and there seems to be need for change in this respect. There should be one brilliant headlight which is unobscured by rigging and can be readily seen. In steamers the strong electric light, being more intense than the colored light, has often obscured them. Then pilots are not all able to distinguish colors readily. For these reasons it is proposed in time to do away with the colored side lights and replace them by one white head light.



DE SPAUN. SALVESON.
MALMBERG. COTTMAN.

From these few instances it is apparent that there is plenty of points for discussion by the commission. Since the advent of steam the character of vessels has become much diversified, especially as to size. There is still the little fishing vessel, as in the early day, when vessels of about the same size were all that were seen on the ocean. But since then the ocean leviathan, such as the City of Paris, has come, and where 100 years ago there was one vessel on the sea there are doubtless ten today. More than this, the nations heretofore making little pretense to maritime importance, like Germany and Russia, are striving to make themselves felt on the ocean. It is quite probable that the work of the commission may in future be noted as one of the chief events of the country.

THE PROHIBITORY SENTIMENT

Pervading the country is due in a great measure to the large amount of spurious Whiskey that is being sold. Imposed upon by irresponsible dealers who doctor and color up spirits to represent Whiskey, consumers are retaliating by voting to wipe out the entire business. To aid in checking this sentiment by supplying consumers with a pure Whiskey, I am now placing my celebrated "I W. HARPER OLD NELSON COUNTY, KY. WHISKEY" direct to them from distillery warehouse.

This whiskey is made from selected rye and corn and barley malt at my distillery in Nelson County, Ky., and represents the highest type of distillation.

As a stimulant or tonic it is prescribed by the leading physicians.

As a beverage it will recommend itself to the most exacting connoisseur. Repectfully

JOSEPH JEFFERSON.

"The Century Magazine" in 1890—Joseph Jefferson's Autobiography—Novels by Frank R. Stockton, Amelia E. Barr, and others—A Capital Program.

During 1890 The Century Magazine (whose recent successes have included the famous "War Papers," the Lincoln History and George Kennan's series on "Siberia and the Exile System") will publish the long-looked-for Autobiography of Joseph Jefferson, whose "Rip Van Winkle" has made his name a household word. No more interesting record of a life upon the stage could be laid before the public. Mr. Jefferson is the fourth in a generation of actors among the Jeffersons. His story of the early days of the American stage, when as a boy, traveling in his father's company, he would settle down for a season in a Western town, playing in their own extemporised theatre,—the particulars of his famous "Rip Van Winkle," how he acted "Ticket-of-Leave-Man" before an audience of that class in Australia, etc.,—all this, enriched with illustrations and portraits of contemporary actors and actresses, and with anecdotes, will form one of the most delightful serials The Century has ever printed.

Amelia E. Barr, Frank R. Stockton, Mark Twain, H. H. Boyesen, and many other well known writers will furnish the fiction for the new volume, which is to be unusually strong in including several novels, illustrated novelettes, and short stories. "The Women of the French Salons" are to be described in a brilliant series of illustrated papers. The important discoveries made with the great Lick Telescope (of San Francisco) (the largest telescope in the world) and the latest explorations relating to the prehistoric America (including the famous Serpent Mound, of Ohio) are to be chronicled in The Century.

Prof. George P. Fisher of Yale University is to write a series on "The Nature and Method of Revelation," which will attract every Bible student. Bishop Potter of New York will be one of several prominent writers who are to contribute a series of "Present-Day Papers" on living topics, and there will be art papers, timely articles, etc., and the choicest pictures, [illegible] The Century Co., of New York. 1st,

The Cosmopolitan needs no recommendation to those that are familiar with it under its new management. The well edited magazine becomes an educating influence in the family circle, whose importance cannot be over estimated. The Cosmopolitan is published at a price ($2.40) hitherto deemed impossible for such a splendidly illustrated periodical, and we consider that we are doing our readers a positive benefit if we are instrumental in placing such a publication within their reach. Just think of what the combination means! You obtain THE TIMES—your home paper—and a magazine which gives you, in a year, nearly fourteen hundred pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including six hundred pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution. Will it not pay you to send a subscription to this office for THE TIMES and the Cosmopolitan immediately? Remember only $2.40 for the two.

Special arrangements with the publishers of the New England Fireside enables us to make our readers a combination price which makes this offer an unusual inducement. The New England Fireside has been selected by us as one that cannot help but please all. Send a postal card to the New England Fireside Co., 177 Fort Hill Sq., Boston, Mass., for a sample copy or call at THE TIMES office and examine one and you will at once be convinced of its many excellent qualities. The subscription price of this magazine is $2.00 per year and its special departments embrace short stories, illustrated children's department, choice poetry, current events, book reviews, latest fashions, art needlework, decorative art, housekeeping receipts, music, farm and garden notes, &c. What we are prepared to do is to furnish you with this excellent $2.00 magazine one year and THE TIMES one year for $1.50. Think of it, both for $1.50.

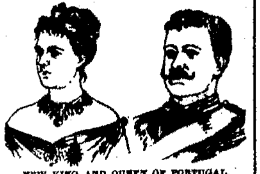
CONSTANTINE AND SOPHIE.

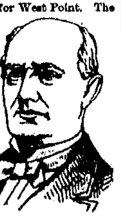
While all the merry making incident to this royal marriage was going on in Greece, there was grief, or at least there should have been, in Portugal, where King Luis lay dead. He is succeeded by his eldest son, who ascends the throne as Carlos I. He is described as an amiable man, who in marrying the daughter of the Count of Paris, took to wife one of the tallest women in Europe, though himself of very moderate stature.



NEW KING AND QUEEN OF PORTUGAL.

Oliver Garrison.

Oliver Garrison, a prominent St. Louisian, who killed himself recently in that city, was born in 1812 at Garrison's landing on the Hudson river, which is the station of the Hudson River railroad for West Point. The place received its name from Mr. Garrison's family instead of being derived from some army source, as many have long supposed. Oliver Garrison commanded a line of vessels running between New York and West Point. In 1843 he went to St. Louis, where, with his brother, he entered the iron trade. In 1850 he went to San Francisco, representing his brother, C. K. Garrison, and took charge of the Pacific Mail Steamship company's affairs. He also engaged in railroading, becoming receiver of the Missouri Pacific and afterwards vice president of the company upon its reorganization, a position he held when Jay Gould took the road.

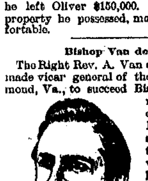


OLIVER GARRISON.

Mr. Garrison was a brother of the late Commodore Garrison, and when the commodore some years ago became involved financially Oliver went to him and straightened out his affairs. When the commodore died he left Oliver $150,000. This, with other property he possessed, made him very comfortable.

Bishop Van de Vyver.

The Right Rev. A. Van de Vyver, recently made vicar general of the diocese of Richmond, Va., to succeed Bishop Janssen, has now been consecrated as Bishop of Richmond. The scene of consecration and induction was unusually sublime, and among the prominent persons present were Governor Fitzhugh Lee and wife, Mayor Ellison, Commander Curly and wife, City Engineer Cutshaw, President of Common Council Campbell and Rabbi A. Harris, of the Israelite synagogue. Admissions were by card only, and the presence of so many dignitaries of other faiths is a pleasing index of the liberality of the place and age.



BISHOP VAN DE VYVER.

The ceremonies took place in St. Peter's cathedral, and His Eminence Cardinal Gibbons was the consecrator, assisted by Bishop Kain of Wheeling and Bishop Haid, the Benedictine of North Carolina.

Coupling Pins.

The loss of coupling pins is a mystery to railroad men. Where they all go to no one appears to be able to conjecture. Even in yards where the same cars that come in go out again additional coupling pins are called for constantly. At the West Albany railroad yard the Central-Hudson railroad uses a car load of new coupling pins a month. It is safe to say that 1,000,000 pins are supplied the West Albany yard in a year.—Albany Journal.

An Old Ironclad.

The popular belief that ironclad men-of-war are an invention of the last half of the Nineteenth century is evidently not founded upon fact. Divers have recently been at work in the harbor of Trieste and have brought up portions of the French frigate Danae, a fifty-six gun frigate which was wrecked seventy-eight years ago. The wreck had sunk so deeply in the sand as to be well preserved, and it has been found that the hull was of wood and was heavily plated with iron.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The Village Attorney presented for consideration, by the Board, preamble and ordinance as to the laying out and opening a new street in the Village of Fulton, which on motion of Mr. Johnson was adopted as follows.

Whereas, at a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Village of Fulton, N. Y., held at the rooms of the Trustees in said Village, July 17th, 1889, an application was presented to said Board signed by John W. Pratt, Geo. B. Parker, Charity Sisson, Robert Dunn, Helen M. Wilson and others for the laying out of a new street in said Village of Fulton, specifically described as follows, viz:

"Beginning at the east end of Broadway as the same is laid down on the official map of said Village, and running thence southeasterly along the northerly line of Harper's location, to a point where said proposed new street will intersect the highway leading southerly from the Emory road past the school house in the Emory district, to the Fay road," and that thereafter in accordance with the provisions and requirements of the Charter of said Village, notice of said application was published for two successive weeks in the official paper of said Village, subscribed by the President of said Village, stating the time and place where said application would be considered and requesting all persons interested to appear at said appointed time and place and show cause, if any existed, against said application. That the time of said hearing was fixed by said Board, at the aforesaid meeting, held July 17th, 1889, for the 7th day of August, 1889, at 8 o'clock p. m., at the office of said Trustees, and said application was signed by a majority of the persons who owned lots fronting on said proposed new street, and who were also the owners of more than one-half the land to be taken for said proposed street. That on the said 7th day of August, 1889, the time appointed for said hearing said application was considered by said Board of Trustees, and all parties appearing, heard thereon, and the further consideration of said application was postponed to August 10th, 1889, at which adjourned meeting of said Board, the following ordinances and resolutions were duly adopted.

Be it ordained, that a new street be laid out in the Village of Fulton, as follows: Begining at the east end of Broadway as the same is laid down on the official map of said Village, running thence southeasterly along the northerly line of Harper's location to where the same intersects the highway leading southerly from the school house in the Emory district. Said new street to be three rods in width and the foregoing description to be the center line thereof.

Be it further ordained, that the damages sustained by the owner of any lot injured by the laying out of said new street be estimated and assessed on all the lots or on the owners of lots in the vicinity manifestly benefitted by such laying out, and in proportion to the benefit which the owners respectively shall be deemed to receive thereby.

RESOLVED, That the Village Attorney be and is hereby directed to procure the appointment of Commissioners to make such assessment as provided in the Charter of the Village.

And, that whereas it appears that the Attorney of said Village, by direction of said Board, caused notices to be published in the official paper of said Village, that application would be made by the Trustees to the County Judge of Oswego County for the appointment of three Commissioners to estimate and assess damages occasioned by the laying out and opening of said new street and it further appearing by proof of service duly filed with the Clerk of said Village, that notice of said application for the appointment of said Commissioners was duly served on all persons entitled thereto, and that on the 27th day of August, 1889, by an order of the County Judge of the county of Oswego, an order was duly made appointing Norman E. Burdick, Frank Dilts and Henry E. Nichols, Esquires, residents and freeholders of said Village of Fulton, Commissioners to estimate and assess damages sustained in the opening of said new street; that on the 4th day of October, 1889, said Commissioners did each take and subscribe the oath provided and required by the Charter of said Village, and that on the 14th day of October, 1889, at the Trustees' rooms in said Village, under appointment of time and place, made by the Board of Trustees, held their first meeting for the determination and assessment of damages sustained by any and all persons in the opening of said new street.

That notice of the time and place of said first meeting of said Commissioners was served on all persons entitled thereto as appears by proof of service, filed in the Clerk's office of said Village, and surveys and a map were caused to be made by the Trustees in accordance with the requirements of the Village charter.

And, whereas, it appears by the written report of said Commissioners filed with the Clerk of said Village, that at the time and place appointed by the Trustees, they met, and heard all persons appearing before them to be heard on the questions to be determined by them, and that on the 25th day of October, 1889, at a regular meeting of said Board of Trustees and within ten days after the first meeting of said Commissioners, their said report was filed with the Clerk of said Village, to which said report and all proceedings relating to the laying out and opening of said street, reference is made to the records of the Clerk of the Village of Fulton.

Therefore, Be it ordained, That said proposed new street, viz:

"Beginning at the east end of Broadway as the same is laid down on the official map of the Village of Fulton, and running thence south easterly along the northerly line of Harper's location to where the same intersects the highway leading southerly from the Emory road, past the school house in the Emory district to the Fay road, be and the same is hereby declared a public street of the Village of Fulton, to be known as a part of and continuation of Broadway; said new street to be three rods in width and the northerly line of Harper's location to be the center line therof, and that said new street be used as a public street of said Village, for public travel only as the same is opened, improved and declared to be subject to use and travel as a public street by the Board of Trustees of said Village."

Board adjourned.

Board of Trustees' Proceedings

FULTON, N. Y., 6th, 1889.

Board met pursuant to adjournment.

Present, President Wilson and Trustees Rice, Wolever and Kellogg

The minutes of the meeting of Oct. 23th, 1889 and the special meeting of Oct. 29th, were read and approved.

The committee appointed to examine the boiler of Steamer No. 1, reported they had examined the same and in their judgment in conjunction with the engineers of department the same was unsafe and recommended the purchase of a new boiler.

Trustee Nichols came in.

The following bills were reported correct by the finance committee and clerk directed to draw orders for the same on proper funds.

Citizens Electric Co. arc lights, ...	$1149 43
Charles Whitaker, room rent, ...	$95 00

On motion of Trustee Rice the Clerk was directed to draw an order in favor of W. J. Lovejoy, Treasurer of the Fire Department for $400.

Complaint having been made of the bad and unsafe condition of the cross-walks on Cayuga street in front of the Opera House, the Clerk was directed to notify J. J. Stephens or his agent to repair or remove the same.

Complaint was also made of the condition of driveway on the north side of Cayuga street, between the Lewis House and H. C. Gleason's drug store. Clerk was directed to notify Mr. T. D. Lewis, to repair the same.

D. E. Mason appeared before the board and complained of the condition of the gutter on east side of First st. adjacent to his pail factory.

On motion Trustee Wolever was instructed to look after the matter and act if necessary.

On motion the Board adjourned to Wednesday evening Nov. 20th, [illegible] at 8 o'clock p. m.

[illegible] Among [illegible] such [illegible] tinguess, there are nothing but long faces. Of course, it is natural to say that a defeat of the administration party in an off year is due to the personal unpopularity of the President, but that excuse cannot fully account for the result of last Tuesday. One must look further to discover the true reason.

Corporal Tanner, erstwhile Commissioner of Pensions, with characteristic modesty, ventures the opinion that the result in Ohio is to be attributed to the rage of ex-soldiers at the way he has been treated by the administration, a reason most comforting to that gentleman. Assistant Postmaster General Clarkson believes that fraud ruled in Virginia and radical laws had disgusted the people in Iowa and Ohio. He believes that Foraker's popularity is matchless and that he made a superb fight. All those who care to talk, and they are not many, say that the failure to divide all the spoils has had a great influence upon the rank and file of Republican party workers.

Ex-President Cleveland, who arrived Wednesday night to attend the Bayard-Clymer wedding and who is accompanied by his wife, as beautiful as ever, is delighted with the result, and regards it as all the other politicians do from a personal standpoint. Blind to all the surrounding circumstances, he attributes it all to the tariff question. He says, "It is evident that the leaven of tariff reform has leavened the whole mass. The West, suffering from the unjust burden of tariff taxation, has awakened. The work goes on and the people have given their verdict against the robber tariff.

The mob is no respector of persons. On Tuesday night a vast crowd surged about the Post building awaiting the returns, which were at that hour all in favor of Foraker. To relieve the monotony, the stereoptican man displayed the pictures of well known public men. When the crowd recognized Grant there were deafening cheers, which only increased when Garfield's picture appeared on the canvass. When Cleveland's features were displayed the cheesing became deafening. This continued when the pleasant face of Vice President Morton was viewed. The operator had saved President Harrison's picture for the last and when it flashed upon the transparancy, a low murmur ran through the crowd. A few spasmotic cheers here and there in the crowd were heard, mingled with hisses. Can it be that President Harrison is not the God of the common people?

The Republicans of Virginia, of whom it may be said that a greater number are fed at the public trough than are thus surported among the members of the party in other states, are not cast down by their defeat, but rather go about the public places telling of the "splendid fight" they made. Exactly what splendor is to be attached to a fight in which one is defeated by an increased majority is hardly visible to the naked eye. The truth is that the voters of Virginia are tired of William Mahone. A boss who has nothing to offer but the chance for spoils, cannot hold a large party together because it is not possible for him to keep his promises. For nine years Mahone, during the Repulican administration, has been filling the executive department with such political renegades as he could find in Virginia who cared to turn their coats for a political appointment. The only error he has made is one of judgment. There is not enough offices to go around.

The belief that the Ohio legislature on joint ballot will be Democratic, is welcomed with joy by the friends of Senator Payne. Mr. Payne has never expressed himself definitely as to the probability of his being a candidate for re-election in the event that the legislature should be Democratic, but little doubt is felt as to his course in such an event. He would undoubtedly seek the vindication that re-election would assure. Col. Oliver Payne contributed a vast sum to the Ohio campaign with probably no other view than to secure Senator Payne's seat to him for another term.

An Indianapolis acquisition to the White House staff is a gentleman of unusal gravity and zeal of purpose, aided and abetted by a magnificent ignorance of everything outside that enterprising city. A month or so ago there was a reception to the diplomatic corps, and toward the wind-up a dazzling diplomat in a wealth of gold lace asked our Indiana friend to call his carriage. "Who is his whiskers with the green pants?" he asked of a fellow messenger. "Oh, the green pants?" responded the other, "That is the Irish Minister," and without further ceremony the Hoosier stepped out to the line of carriages and cried aloud "The Irish Minister's carriage this way!," There was a laugh of surprise among the coachmen, while some one down the line yelled "Somebody stole it."

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen:—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours Truly,

ST. NICHOLAS.

The Century Co's Magazine for Young Folks Enlarged and Printed in New Type.

SINCE 1873, when, under the editorial management of Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, the publication of St. Nicholas for Young Folks was begun, it has led all magazines for girls and boys. Nothing like it was known before, and to-day, as the Chicago Inter-Ocean recently said, "it is the model and ideal juvenile magazine of the world." Through its pages the greatest writers of our time are speaking to the youth of America and England, and the best artists and engravers are training the eyes of the boys and girls to appreciate highest in art. Nobody knows how many readers St. Nicholas has. In the third largest public library in America,—that in Indianapolis, —more than 3,000 people read each month's number.

Since the first issue Mrs. Dodge has remained as editor. Early in its history other young people's magazines, "Our Young Folks," "The Little Corporal," "Riverside," etc., were consolidated with it, and its history has been one of growth from the first. Tennyson, Bryant, Longfellow, Whittier, Miss Alcott, Mrs. Burnett, Charles Dudley Warner, W. D. Howells, and almost every well-known writer of our time have contributed to its pages. There is only one way in which its conductors can make it better, and that is by making more of it, and so they announce that with the beginning of the seventeenth volume (November, 1889,) St. Nicholas will be enlarged by the addition of eight, and sometimes sixteen, extra pages in each number. This enlargement is absolutely required to make room for the rich store of new material which has been secured for the benefit of St. Nicholas readers. The use of new and clearer type will be begun with the November number.

During the coming year there are to be four important serial stories by four well known American authors. Athletics and outdoor sports will be a special feature (contributed by Walter Camp, of Yale, and others), and there will be stories of character and adventure, sketches of information and travel, outdoor papers, articles of special literary interest, suggestive talks on natural history, other scientific subjects, and the march of events. Both the December and January numbers are to be holiday issues.

The price will be the same as heretofore, $3.00 a year, 25 cents a number, and all dealers and the publishers (The Century Co., New York) take subscriptions. New subscribers should begin with November.

As there isn't any patent on good clothing, doesn't it seem somewhat strange that there shouldn't be more of it! It strikes us as rather queer that the poor clothing should predominate to such an unconscionable extent as it does; for, though less at the time money is made out of the good than out of the poor, yet the come-again customers much more than strikes the balance in favor of the good. There are, of course, other manipulators of the good besides ourselves; but we must admit that the great bulk of the Ready-made is very far from being "up to the mark." And such being the case, it's a sad commentary on humanity's intelligence that folk's should ever be silly enough to buy any clothing of the "sloppy" kind that is advertised so extensively nowadays.

Rev. Charles Hudson Smith Again Disappears.

The sudden and mysterious disappearance last March of Rev. C. H. Smith, of the Pilgrim Church, Dorchester, and his discovery four months later in San Francisco, were written up in all the newspapers between the two oceans. Mr. Smith has disappeared again as mysteriously as before. When he vanished from the sight of his friends in March the finding of his hat on the railing along the Charles river embankment led to the belief that he had committed suicide or had met with foul play. Several weeks afterward a dispatch was received from the San Francisco Police Department locating him on the staff of one of the newspapers there.

A relative succeeded in bringing him back to his home, though somewhat against his will. From the time he left Boston until he found himself wandering aimlessly about the city of San Francisco, his mind, he said, was a blank. He had undoubtedly been suffering from mental aberation, but on his return here he recovered his normal powers, and went back to his pulpit, receiving the warm welcome of his parishioners. His mental weakness seems to have returned again, brought on, it is suspected, by overwork. He has not been seen since Friday noon, and a general alarm has been sent to all the police stations.—N. Y. World.

The New York Press of Monday contains a Fall River item which says that a passenger on an outgoing steamer from Boston, who is supposed to have jumped overboard during Saturday night, is probably the Rev. Charles Hudson Smith.

Dr. Talmage Again an Editor.

Beginning with January 1st next, the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., will become one of the editors of The Ladies' Home Journal, of Philadelphia. The famous preacher will have a regular department each month, written by himself, with the title "Under My Study Lamp." His first contribution will appear in the January number of the Journal. Dr. Talmages salary is said to be one of the largest ever paid for editorial work.

"My Uncle's Will" and "Prygmalion and Galatea" is the bill for the opera house to-morrow evening.

There will be a Clothes Pin Social at the Congregational church, Oswego Falls, on Friday evening under the auspices of the Young People's Society.

Mrs. Maynard Spencer, who lived at Hinmanville, committed suicide Monday by hanging herself to a bedstead with a handkerchief. Cause insanity.

The secretary of the Fulton market reports fifteen hundred boxes of cheese sold here on Monday night at 9 and 9½ cents, leaving a balance of 6,000 boxes unsold.

The gymnasium class which was to have met Tuesday evening in the Y. M. C. A. rooms and was postponed on account of the prayer meeting, will be held tomorrow (Thursday) evening at 9 o'clock.

Cox and Harrington will sell at public auction on their premises, two miles east of Fulton on the Gilberts Mills road, Friday, Nov. 22d, a half blood Norman Stallion, two fillies and three mares.

The Woman's Relief Corps will serve a fine 10c supper in the G. A. R. rooms Saturday evening, Nov. 16th, from five to nine o'clock. Go and take all your friends. It is cheaper than you can eat at home, besides it helps a good cause.

A special meeting of the Pathfinder Boat Club will be held at the office of Mead, Stranahan & Spencer, in the Church block, to-morrow evening, Nov. 14th, at 8 o'clock. Business of importance will be brought before the meeting and members are urgently requested to be present.

The Universalist Society is going to have a two night's fair at Universalist Church parlors Monday and Tuesday evenings Nov. 25 and 26. There will be an apron and fancy goods sale, refreshments, music, etc., on both evenings. On the first night admission will be free. On the second night there will be in addition a dramatic and literary entertainment and a small admission fee will be charged.

The speed in the Hunter-Comstock Arms Co's works was started Saturday for the first and work commenced by the Tuerk Water Motor Co. and the Acme Burnishing Company. The machinery of these companies was moved here from Syracuse. Work in the gun works proper has been delayed by dampness in the lower floor caused by water from the canal breaking in there. Operations are expected to begin there in a few days. The speed is furnished by a 190 horse power "Success" water-wheel manufactured at York, Pa.

The Fulton Paper Co. have their pulp mill at Lower Oswego Falls nearly completed. Seven large water wheels "The Success" from York, Pa., are here and being placed. The manufacture of pulp will soon commence. In the spring the company will commence the construction of a paper mill, the capacity of which when completed will be ten tons of paper per day. G. C. Webb will be manager of the company and will soon go on a trip to the North Woods to buy wood to be made into pulp.

The annual convention of the Young Men's Christian Association in the fifth district, which embraces the counties of Oswego, Jefferson, Lewis and St. Lawrence, and has associations in Fulton, Oswego, Pulaski, Lowville, Watertown and Ogdensburg, will be held at Carthage on November 15, 16 and 17. The program includes an address "Suggestions as to Financial Management" by F. E. Bacon and "The Importance of Bible and Training Classes in our Associations" by A. T. Carson of this village. J. J. Coit also of this village will have charge of the singing.

Mass Meeting of the Y. M. C. A.

The mass meeting at the opera house last Sunday afternoon under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. was well attended. Every seat in the body of the hall being occupied and a number were seated in the gallery. This opened the week of prayer for young men. President F. E. Bacon presided and made appropriate remarks. Prayer was offered by Dr. D. M. Rankin, and addresses on subjects assigned and pertaining to the work of the association were made by H. E. Nichols, J. L. Dixon, E. R. Redhead, and Mr. Carson, the General Secretary. Music for the occasion was furnished by a double male quartet of our best local talent. Orchestral music (seven pieces) rendered the accompaniment. N. H. Gilbert sang a solo with Mrs. Gilbert as accompanist. Rev. J. C. Breaker pronounced the benediction which closed the successful meeting.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Lydia Chase died at the M. E. parsonage early Saturday evening, Nov. 9, 1889, at the age of 83 years. Mrs. Chase was the widow of Rev. Square Chase, a former missionary to Africa, who died nearly fifty years ago. With her children, Mrs. Chase came here to Fulton that they might attend Falley Seminary, and for many years her home was on Buffalo near Third street. Several years ago when her son Rev. W. Dempster Chase came here to act as pastor of the Methodist church Mrs. Chase came here with him and passed the few remaining years of her life in the village she loved so well. Her surviving children are the Rev. W. Dempster Chase, Mrs. Julia Townsend of Washington, Miss Maria Chase, and her foster-daughter Mrs. Dayan, wife of the Rev. J. F. Dayan of Thousand Island Park.

Funeral services were held at the house at 3 o'clock this afternoon, conducted by Rev. James Erwin, the same that conducted the funeral services of her husband fifty years ago. A large floral piece, The Gates Ajar, from the church, a beautiful piece from the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, and one from Mr. Chase's Bible Class, were among the beautiful floral offerings at the funeral.

Helen M. wife of John W. Cornell of Granby Centre died of cancer, on Saturday, Nov. 9, 1889, at the age of 58 years. Funeral was held at 1:30 yesterday at the house conducted by Elder Danforth. Burial at Mt. Adnah.

M. F. Stephens will soon move into Jas. Langdon's house on First street, Lower Oswego Falls. Editor Bradt will move onto the place he recently purchased and that will be vacated by Mr. Stephens.

The Adele Frost Company are to be at the opera house every evening this week. They opened Monday evening, presenting the drama "A Celebrated Case" and fast evening "Ingomar the Barbarian." The company derserve a liberal patronage.

The lumber firm of J. K. Post & Co. of Oswego, have gone to the wall. Sheriff VanBuren took possession of their property Monday on two judgments amounting to over $28,000. It is said that their liabilities will reach nearly $200,000.

Gilbert Jennings, proprietor of the Palermo Centre House, will give a grand Thanksgiving Party on Thursday evening, Nov. 28. Shears' full band will be in attendance. Floor managers will be Charles Hopkins and M. M. Saterlee. Tickets $1.50.

Marcus Crahan is painting another house on Second street belonging to Mrs. Peets and one on Broadway belonging to C. H. David. Both have previously tested the Asbestos paint which is used and want no other. This paint is certainly excellent and many fine residences in town have used it this season. Among others may be mentioned the residences of J. H. Case, C. H. David, M. V. Connell, N. H. Gilbert and John Bogue.

A short time since Rev. Warren C. Hubbard of Brooklyn was presented with a beautiful 33 degree jewel by Aurora Grata Council of Princes, New York. Mr. Hubbard was elected to receive the thirty-third and last degree by the Supreme Council N. M. J. at its session in Boston in 1888, and the degree was conferred upon him in New York city Sept. 17 of this year. Fulton friends, and especially masonic brethren, will be pleased to learn of this high masonic honor conferred upon a most worthy brother.

The Kellogg Warbling Concert given at the Methodist church last Friday evening under the auspices of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor gave most excellent satisfaction. The warbling and whistling of Mr. Kellogg surpassed anything of the kind that probably was ever heard by anyone in the audience. The impression made was evinced by the hearty applause that every one of his efforts produced. The others that took part in the entertainment also gave the best of satisfaction.

A crowded house was at Grace Mission Chapel Monday evening and listened to R. B. McCully and Peter Youngs talk on Andersonville Prison. The music was furnished by a male quartet under charge of Prof. Cooper. Two selections "Andersonville" and "The Drummer Boy of Missionary Ridge" were given by Mrs. G. V. Emens. The next evening in the course will be "Talks on Army Life" by George Ward and James Printy next Monday night. Mable Lester will also give recitations and the singing will be under the leadership of N. H. Gilbert.

The N. Y. O. & W. railroad Co. is busily engaged grading their switch track which has been laid from Second street across the lot which they recently purchased over First street to the Oswego Falls Pulp Works. They are also about to put down a stone sidewalk on First street from Broadway to State street. In the Spring they will build a large freight depot near the corner of Broadway and First streets. According to agreement with the village trustees the railroad company is also to pave or run sewer pipes down Second street from Broadway.

To Be Given Under the Auspices of The Pathfinder Boat Club.

The Pathfinder Boat Club have made arrangements to give the people of Fulton and vicinity a novel musical entertainment on the evenings of Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 27 and 28 and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gross, under whose direction this carnival will be given, are already in town and will soon begin active preparations. From two to three hundred persons, representing the best local talent that can be secured will take part.

Mr. and Mrs. Gross have given similar carnivals in many places in the State and come to Fulton with the most unqualified recommendations as to their ability, the character of the entertainment and the approval of the public generally, as well as those under whose auspices they have been laboring. The program will include selected gems from fifteen to eighteen operas such as Ill Troveture, Bohemian Girl, Mikado, Little Tycoon and the latest New York successes, The Drum Major and The Brigands, all given in brilliant costumes and dramatized in proper manner. There will also be beautiful fancy dances, with Gypsy, Indian, Holland, peasant and milkmaids' bands, presenting effective and beautiful scenes. Mrs. Gross has a fine, highly cultivated soprano voice and her singing has delighted the audiences wherever the musical carnival has been given. From a large number of flattering press notices we copy the following in regard to the entertainment given recently in Waverly:

> Rarely if ever does the curtain rise on a brighter, prettier or more interesting scene than that which met the eye at the opera house Tuesday evening—the first evening of the grand musical carnival. Sixty little children, "just out of school," lads and lasses sweet-faced and bright-eyed, arranged artistically on the stage in swings, on see-saws, mounted on step-ladders or standing in groups, singing "See-saw" in their sweet childish tones—they presented a picture never surpassed outside of fairyland. It was the most effective and pleasing scene of the evening—and this is saying much, for the entire entertainment was a continual feast both to the eye and to the ear. Every scene was a picture, every character a study and every song a gem.

The following letter speaks for itself:

CORTLAND, N. Y., Oct. 7th, 1889.

The Young Men's Christian Association of Cortland desire to express their satisfaction, both for the success financially and the delightful entertainment derived from the "Musical Carnival" given under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gross."

The Carnival which was given under our auspices at the opera house on the 4th and 5th of Oct., was greeted by crowded houses, it being the largest sale of reserved seats ever made in this opera house. From every quarter we hear expressions of unqualified praise and admiration of the style and character of the entertainment. The entire program of 2½ hours in length was listened to with delight and we have no hesitation in saying that no entertainment ever held in Cortland has given more downright satisfaction. We cannot here enumerate the elements which contributed to the success of the carnival. The success can be attributed largely however to Mr. and Mrs. F. Gross for the fine management both in rehearsals and on the stage. There was nothing in the program at all objectionable to the most critical or to church people generally. As members of the Board of Directors of the Young Men's Christian Assocsation we most heartily commend Mr. and Mrs. Fred Goss to any society or association who desire a first class entertainment.

On the subject of seed potatoes, Gardener's Chronicle says: "The gist of the matter seems to be that whole sets should be planted, and these should be denuded of all eyes but a few of those at the crown, and the plants allowed ample space, so that the roots may have a large feeding area, and then the potato crop will be far greater than we are accustomed to have, and the number of sets required fewer."

How to Identify a Diamond.

A diamond expert has made public a ready way of identifying one of those jewels: Prick a needle hole through a card, and look at it through the doubtful stone. If it is spurious, two holes will be seen distinctly on the card; if it is a diamond only one hole will be visible, for there is no other stone at all resembling the diamond but that gives a double reflection. This property is also made use of for determining an uncertain stone. If the finger is placed behind it, and looked at through the stone with a magnifier, the grain of the skin will be plainly visible if the stone is not a diamond, but otherwise it will not be distinguished at all. A diamond in a solid setting may be distinguished in the same way; if genuine, the setting at the back cannot be distinguished, but if a false stone, either the foil or the setting may be plainly seen.

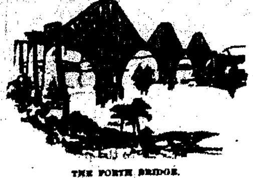
Nearly every camel clearing from [illegible], Cal., nowadays carries [illegible] tons of honey.

[illegible] THE MODERN WORLD.

[illegible]

England is about to astonish the world with a cantilever bridge over the Firth of Forth at Queensferry, which from its size and construction as well as the principle applied, [illegible] of engineers in every country. All readers will readily recall the awful disaster of ten years ago at Tay bridge, by which an entire train load of passengers were hurled to death, the viaduct having been wrecked by a sudden storm. With such energy did company and engineers work that in less than eight years another bridge, then claimed to be the most complete in the world, spanned the Tay.



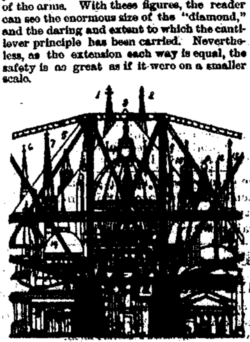
THE FORTH BRIDGE.

Sir Thomas Bouch had taken in hand the job of spanning the Firth of Forth, had planned a huge suspension bridge and had considerable work done on it when the Tay disaster put an end to the project at once and forever. In the natural reaction of horror there was a general protest against any bridge, and a very extensive feeling that no safe one could be built. In due time, however, the question was submitted to three eminent engineers, Messrs. John Fowler, W. H. Barlow and T. E. Harrison. After careful inquiry they decided upon a cantilever of a plan jointly devised by Mr. Fowler and Mr. Barker, and the bridge thus arranged for is now rapidly nearing completion.

By a glance at the annexed engravings and the following figures the reader will see what enormous difficulties they had to overcome; and but for the rocky little Isle of Inchgarvie, in the middle of the Firth, the new bridge would have been an impossibility. That island is but a mere point of stone, but it is enough. On each side of it the channel is nearly 1,700 feet wide, the water is over 200 feet deep, and yet the railway track, on a level with the approaches on each side, is 253 feet above average tide. To span such a chasm with a bridge sufficient to support the heaviest trains and proof against the greatest wind tension ever known in Scotland, was indeed a task for engineers. Yet all inspectors and scientific visitors admit that they have accomplished it.

The structure is briefly classified as a "cantilever truss double span bridge, all steel, and the largest of its kind in the world." The material used is tested for an ultimate resistance of thirty tons per square inch in tension and thirty-four tons in compression; it will, therefore, sustain four times the combined strain of a wind pressure of fifty-six pounds to the square foot and a maximum running load of two tons to the foot or 3,400 tons to the span. It might be well for the North British Railway company to have cards printed with engineers' certificates to these facts, and have one handed to each passenger on the line just before the train reaches the bridge, as passengers will certainly feel the need of such an assurance of safety if they see the structure they are about to pass over.

The cantilever has the shape of an elongated diamond, and there are four masonry piers supporting the four gigantic "legs" on which are poised the balancing arms, and these extend out 675 feet on each side of the base. The old "parlor magic" trick of sticking two down-slanting forks into a cork to make it balance and dance on a string, gives some faint idea of the necessity for such immense balancing arms. The middle cantilever is longer than the other two, its base being 270 feet long, while theirs are 155 feet. The greatest height of the bridge above the piers is 330 feet, and the ends of the cantilever beams are still 350 feet apart, so they are joined by lattice girders resting on the ends of the arms. With these figures, the reader can see the enormous size of the "diamond," and the daring and extent to which the cantilever principle has been carried. Nevertheless, as the extension each way is equal, the safety is as great as if it were on a smaller scale.



BRIDGE AND BUILDINGS COMPARED.

1. Cologne cathedral. 2. Old St. Paul's, London. 3. Great Pyramid. 4. St. Peter's, Rome. 5. Pyramid Gheezeh. 6. Chartres cathedral. 7. St. Stephen's cathedral, Vienna. 8. Strasbourg cathedral. 9. Church of St. Martin. 10. Antwerp cathedral. 11. Florence cathedral. 12. Hotel de Ville, Brussels. 13. Salisbury cathedral. 14. Hotel des Invalides, Paris. 15. St. Paul's, London. 16. Bell Harry Tower, Canterbury. 17. The Monument, London. 18. Temple of the Giants, Agrigentum. 19. The Baptistry, Pisa. 20. Pantheon, Rome.

Like all big things which are symmetrical, the Forth bridge does not at first view seem near as big as it is, yet, when one compares its height with that of other noted structures, the result is amazing. The great pyramid of Cheops is considered a big thing, as it is 460 feet high, yet it barely exceeds the great diamond of this bridge by a few feet. St. Peter's, at Rome, which is 448 feet high, might stand just under the higher central span of the "diamond." Cleopatra's Needle would scarcely be noticed alongside of one of the lower piers, and the noted Porcelain tower at Nankin, China, would terminate fifty-two feet below the railroad track. But the Washington monument would still overtop all the foregoing, as well as the bridge; old St. Paul's, London, would go near fifty feet above the center, while from the top of the Eiffel tower one could look down on the "diamond" at such an acute angle that only the head and shoulders of a man on it would be visible.

One of the engineers of the Forth bridge has devised a simple but most ingenious method of illustrating the principle of a cantilever bridge. Two men sit in adjacent chairs, their outstretched arms on each side grasping beams which pass under them. The downward slope of their arms and the upward slope of the beams make the diamond, [illegible] London. When the bridge is done [illegible] will be so much nearer in time to London.

It is a curious fact that Sir Thomas Bouch, after long study, had decided to adopt the American system of suspension bridge, and had provided for two towers 600 feet high for the Forth bridge, just about the time American engineers began to favor the cantilever system, and that the Tay disaster in December, 1879 should have settled the matter so completely. A novel and interesting feature of the new bridge is in the bases of the minor towers—these consisting of four cylindrical masses of concrete and masonry, so placed as to have the strength of a solid mass as wide as their combined width. Taken as a whole, the Forth bridge must rank as one of the great wonders of the world.

Bright's Disease.

A Ten-Year-Old Child Saved After the Failure of Four Physicians.

My little girl, ten years of age, was taken sick in March, 188[illegible], with scarlet fever. When recovering she took a severe cold, which developed Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. Her ankles, feet and eyes were terribly swollen, she had a burning fever, and all the symptoms of an aggravated case of Bright's Disease. A MARVELOUS RECOVERY.

[illegible]

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and we ask you to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. It strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. The peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation of the vegetable remedies used give to Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar curative powers. No other medicine has such a record of wonderful cures. If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other instead. It is a Peculiar Medicine, and is worthy your confidence.

Peculiar To Itself

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., Feb. 18, 1888.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.
Gentlemen:—I have used your Kendall's Spavin Cure for Curbs and Scratches and I can say I never saw its equal. I have cured some of the worst cases of Corns that a horse could be subject to. I have been having such good success with your liniment that I would almost as soon a horse would have Curbs as not. I have recommended it to several with like success. I had a large Pacer with a white hoof forward and had Corns in both quarters as large as fifty-cent pieces. I cured him in three weeks, so when I sold him to an expert horseman he never knew the horse ever had a Corn. I will give $100.00 for the worst case of Corns that I can't cure with your Kendall's Spavin Cure.

If [illegible]
How thankful we should be.
Would [illegible] away,
How thankful we should be.
If [illegible] condescend to choke
The joker with his ancient joke
And the croaker with his chronic croak,
How thankful we should be.

If tongues were all attached to brains,
How thankful we should be.
If "hogs" were barred from railway trains
How thankful we should be.
If fads and fables were tabooed,
If gum were not by ladies chewed,
If death would kindly steal the dude,
How thankful we should be.

But let us be to fate resigned,
How thankful we should be,
For Providence is good and kind,
How thankful we should be.
There're many things that we regret
And wish were otherwise, and yet
If we a nice, fat turkey get,
How thankful we should be.

Mirage.

"Behold, behold the palms!" we cried;
Our lips were parched as though by fire;
Forward we spurred with swinging stride,
In madness of desire.

"There will be water cool!" we said,
"And shade to shield from blazing heat;
What bliss to bathe the burning head,
And, O, the rest, how sweet!"

But suddenly,—the palms were gone!
A scorching breeze our swart brows fanned;
Before us still stretched on and on
A blinding waste of sand.

FASHION NOTES.

Many redingote skirts are seen among the new gowns.

Plain bodices are often seen braided to simulate a zouave jacket.

The empire long coats are stylish garments that are much worn.

Many stylish cashmere dresses are made up in the empire fashion.

There is a mania for braiding dresses and nearly every other article of wear.

The princess gowns now so fashionable are a special boon to women with stout figures.

New ulsters and traveling cloaks are made of tan livery cloth and are long enough to cover the gown.

Women who have slender, graceful figures will be quite willing to adopt the revived fashion of lacing the corsage at the back.

Cloth jackets in ecru or green shades are made very dressy by being striped with black astrakhan fur applied in lengthwise bands from the collar to the end of the coat.

The white cape collar called the "Kendall" collar, very much after the style of those worn by children, but made of very rich laces, is found so dressy and becoming that it is worn by ladies with simple afternoon costumes, with deep cuffs to match.

The newest belt buckles of silver or gold are curved inward to follow the figure, and are eight inches long; the material of the bodice is drawn down from the shoulders and side seams to meet in the buckle under the bust, a becoming fashion, and especially suitable for soft fabrics of silk, crepe and net.

If you are costive, don't wait until costiveness becomes constipation, but take Laxador at once, regularly and persistently until you are cured.

Do not poison your little ones with paregoric, laudanum etc., but use Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup it contains nothing injurious to the infant system.

Legal Don'ts.

Don't rent property except on written lease.

dous" and all the old words in the dictionary which have served this purpose have become tame. The designs have increased in size, each succeeding one, over its predecessor, till they are now so great that all previous structures on the earth's surface, including the Eiffel and the Babel towers and the pyramids of Egypt, have become mere pigmies in comparison.

Mr. George W. Cooley, of Minneapolis, is the last candidate, with a design which eclipses all former ones. He proposes a massive stone pyramid of granite, each side of whose base is to be 1,320 feet long, 509 feet wide, 1,000 feet high and 100 feet square at the summit, where is to stand a statue of Liberty 200 feet high, giving a total elevation of 1,200 feet.

"In the center of the pyramid," says The Minneapolis Tribune, "will be a circular chamber 500 feet in diameter, the sides to be of polished granite and rising in the form of a Gothic arch to the apex, which is 700 feet from the pavement. Leading to this central chamber are four passageways or corridors, with an arched roof, the keystone of the arch being 100 feet above the surface level. The entrances to these corridors will be on the middle of each side of the pyramid, and will be constructed with a view to ornament as well as utility. About midway between the extremities of each corridor will be an octagonal chamber somewhat higher than the corridor itself. At each outer corner of the pyramid is a square tower 100 feet in height, to be surmounted by a statue. Two statues only have been decided upon by Mr. Cooley, those of Columbus and Washington. The others will probably be those of the president of the United States and some other prominent character in the nation's history."

Some pretty big pieces of work for the fair have been laid out, but nothing that compares with this. Its base will cover 160 acres, or a quarter section of land. The time required to build it is a serious item. There are but two years for this purpose, and we must remember that it required ten years to build a causeway and inclined plane on which to carry up the blocks for the great pyramid of Cheops, and 100,000 men were twenty years building the pyramid. But the designer thinks that his structure can be completed within the time, an opinion which reflects upon the skill and energy of the builders of the Cheops affair. He admits, however, that it must be built near a granite quarry.

There is to be a special railroad running around the pile by which material will be delivered to within 100 feet of the top, after which it will be raised by derricks. The road will have more than one track, and will be [illegible] in a tunnel as fast as the structure rises. When complete it will be between fifteen and twenty miles long. Doubtless it is intended to serve for the ascent of visitors after the fair has been opened. It is the longest ride yet proposed. A plan for a tower with a circular driveway three and a half miles was recently published, which seemed to be a long distance, but the route over which one will ascend to the apex of this great pyramid will be a good day's march for soldiers in the field on a level road. Even in a train, considering the incline, it will probably require two hours to make the ascent.

The estimated cost of this work is in proportion to its immense size. It will cost $172,000,000. Where the money is to come from its originator does not indicate, except that it would necessarily be under government control and consequently the government would have to pay for it [illegible]

MASSACRED IN AFRICA.

DR. CARL PETERS AND HIS COMMAND CUT OFF BY SOMAULEES.

The Tropical Prize for Which Arab, Englishman and German Are Contending—Beauties and Terrors of Zanzibar—Progress in Redeeming the Black Continent.

Details of another awful massacre must now be added to the horror laden annals of African travel and development. Dr. Carl Peters, the noted German explorer, organizer and diplomat of East Africa, has been killed with all his party, amounting to some hundreds of natives, Europeans and volunteers from the mixed population of the Zanzibar coast. It adds not a little to the dark features of the case that this massacre is largely due to international jealousies between Englishmen and Germans, and the struggle between them for the monopoly of the east coast trade. Dr. Peters was nominally leading an independent expedition for the relief of Emin Bey, but, as his object was really to develop a new line of trade, he took a short route on a northern line, through an unexplored region, and the result has been his destruction by the Somali, or Somaulees.

The country for which England, Germany and the Arabs are contending is at once fertile, valuable and deadly. Zanzibar as a real sovereignty extends for 13 degrees along the coast, from 2 deg. 30m. N. to 10 deg. 45m. S., and has no determined boundary in the interior. On the island and coast of the mainland the authority of the seyid or sultan of Zanzibar is complete, and there is ample protection for traders of all nations; but inland there is no government beyond the walled towns held by the seyid's troops, and he who cannot protect himself with the strong hand is not protected at all. On the coast the climate is of course hot and enervating; inland the country rises rapidly to splendid plateaus, heavily wooded mountains and valleys of surpassing loveliness. The air is comparatively pure, the natural wealth great, and "every prospect pleases, while only man is vile."

To give an idea of the valuable prize for which the rivals are contending, it is only necessary to state that, in spite of savage war and defective communications, the trade has already made Zanzibar—the capital, on the west side of the island—a city of nearly or quite 100,000 people. Although the Arabs are the ruling race and still form the mass of the population, all races enjoy equal freedom, and the trade is largely in the hands of Europeans and Hindoos. The adjacent mainland as well as the island abound in valuable woods and furnish sugar, cotton, coffee, cocoa, cloves, nutmegs, cinnamon, pepper, sesame, indigo, and some other tropical productions. Rice has lately been produced in large quantities, and the inner valleys, wherever cultivated, yield abundantly of maize, millet and other productions of warm temperate lands. Further inland the elephant, rhinoceros, hippopotamus, crocodile and many kinds of antelope abound, and the rivers are well stocked with fish. The exports already exceed $3,000,000, nearly one-third being of ivory.

Into this land at a date far beyond the beginning of history went the daring Hamites of southern Arabia, and after them the Phenicians, Persians, Jews and Asiatic Greeks. As early as the times of Solomon and the later Hebrew prophets, the products of the region were exported, but during the so called "Dark Ages," it was a land of mystery to the people of Europe—a land in which they located all their accounts of [illegible]

[illegible] Emin Pasha and "establish an English protectorate at the back of the German sphere of action in east Africa."

In this condition of affairs, it being known at that time on the east coast, but not published to the world, that Emin Pasha was safe, Admiral Fremantle seized the steamer Neara, with all of Dr. Peters' supplies on board, alleging that he had violated the general understanding. English and Germans were at that time maintaining a joint blockade to suppress the slave trade. Bismarck conceded the rightfulness of the seizure, but the German papers assailed the English furiously. The British rejoined that the overbearing policy of the Germans had estranged the natives, and that they should exclude even private expeditions. The matter was arranged, but Dr. Peters entered the country with British suspicion and influence against him, and there are dark hints of evil counsel to the natives and various charges too vague to be traced and confirmed or disproved at this writing.

THE CRUISER SAN FRANCISCO.

She Is the Latest Launched Addition to Uncle Sam's Navy.

There was great hilarity and many triumphant congratulations, all in the midst of rain and mud, the other day at San Francisco, when the new cruiser named for the city was successfully launched. It was a new thing for San Francisco to get a good government contract of that size, and when the Scott Bros. obtained it, one might almost say that all California prayed for their success. So far they are ahead of the stipulated time, with every promise of success in all respects.

The dimensions of the San Francisco are as follows: Length over all, 326 feet; length on water line, 300 feet 9¾ inches; breadth of beam, 49 feet 1¾ inches; depth of hold, 21 feet; displacement, 4,083 tons. She is expected to develop 10,500 horse power. According to contract, she must steam nineteen knots per hour; for every quarter of a knot in excess of that the government will pay a premium of $50,000 and exact a penalty of like amount for every quarter of a knot she falls below it. The contract price was $1,428,000.

Quick work has been done on the San Francisco. The contract was dated Oct. 26, 1887, and she is required to be wholly completed by April, 1890; and five months' delay was caused by some material changes in the engines and boilers directed by the navy department. Consequently the construction may be said to have been begun April 1, 1888. The Philadelphia, a sister cruiser to the San Francisco, launched two months before, was begun Oct. 27, 1887. All the newly invented appliances for increasing the steam generating capacity, ventilating the hull and protecting the locomotive machinery are provided for.

The San Francisco is yet officially known as "Cruiser No. 5," and her main battery will consist of twelve 6-inch breech loading rifles, mounted on central pivot carriages, supporting segmental shields, two inches in thickness, for the purpose of protecting the gun's crew as well as the mechanism of the gun carriages from machine gun fire. Two guns forward are mounted on the forecastle deck, one on each side, and train from 65 to 115 degs. It is only the forced draught that is calculated to reach 10,500 horse power, the natural draught being 7,500. The rig is that of a three masted schooner, without head boom, the sail being a mere auxiliary motive power.

The protective deck extends the length of the vessel, and amidships is twenty-one inches above the water line. This is a feature of modern cruisers designed to protect the boilers and machinery from stray shots which may penetrate the sides or openings; for it is now a recognized fact that no cruiser, intended as vessel for general service, can be protected as a whole. No armor of practicable application can protect a vessel against guns already in use. All that can be done is to protect her "vitals," and leave the rest to the chances of war.

A worse day for the launching could scarcely have been devised, yet it was a perfect success, and was attended by all the naval dignitaries in the port, all the officials of San Francisco and a very large concourse of ladies and gentlemen. Just as the signal was given, "I christen thee San Fran- [illegible]

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

[illegible] He was defeated in his first candidacy and made a tour of the United States, lecturing on English questions. In 1880 he was elected to parliament for Northampton, and refused to take the oath, but offered to affirm. A furious controversy followed, extending through all parties and ranks of society, and even affecting some circles in the United States. The house of commons refused to let him affirm, on the ground that such exemption was only provided for Quakers and other Christians of like faith. The Gladstone government attempted to have the law amended to include agnostics, but failed, this being the first defeat for them.

The seat was declared vacant, Mr. Bradlaugh was again elected, and this time offered to take the oath, having declared to his constituents that he had changed his mind, and now looked upon the oath as a mere form of words, of no significance. But the house had changed its mind, too, and refused to let him take the oath at all. He insisted on entering the house and pronouncing the oath, and was removed by a policeman. This was repeated several times. But parliament had gone too far, asserting in effect that no man should take the oath unless they knew him to be a believer. There was a popular protest, and, at the opening of parliament in 1886, Mr. Bradlaugh took the oath without opposition and entered parliament, where he soon proved himself a useful member.

He suffered somewhat in public estimation by his political alliance with Mrs. Annie Besant, a woman of extraordinary capacities and radically "advanced" views. She was prosecuted for publishing a book on the sexual relations and caused a sensation almost equal to that produced by Mr. Bradlaugh. Soon after, he published his "Impeachment of the House of Brunswick"—in one respect a most extraordinary composition. It is a triumph of skill in presenting most revolting facts and relations of the most obscene nature, without a word on which a prosecution could be based. This was his last notable performance. The rest of his career as "Iconoclast"—a title he assumed—has been comparatively tame.

THE OLDEST RAILROAD PRESIDENT.

Hon. Bonum Nye, Who Has Lived Under All the Administrations.

North Brookfield, Mass., points with pride to the fact that the Hon. Bonum Nye, one of her most honored citizens, is the oldest railroad president alive, the oldest man in Massachusetts, and has lived under all the administrations of the United States government. Mr. Nye's history is an interesting one. He was born Sept. 18, 1795, on a farm, in what was then known as the north parish of Brookfield.

In his 21st year he went to Monson academy for a short time, and then taught school during the winters. He learned land surveying of Percy Hale in 1814, which occupation he has followed more or less ever since. He served in the Massachusetts militia in 1820, gaining the title of captain.

Capt. Nye has occupied nearly every office in his native town. In 1830 he was elected [illegible] for about fifteen years at different times; and as selectman, overseer of the poor and school committee for the [illegible] period. In [illegible] from 1860 to 1864 [illegible]

THE PROHIBITORY SENTIMENT

Pervading the country is due in a great measure to the large amount of spurious Whiskey that is being sold. Imposed upon by irresponsible dealers who doctor and color up spirits to represent Whiskey, consumers are retaliating by voting to wipe out the entire business. To aid in checking this sentiment by supplying consumers with a pure Whiskey, I am now placing my celebrated "I. W. HARPER OLD NELSON COUNTY, KY. WHISKEY" direct to them from distillery warehouse.

This whiskey is made from selected rye and corn and barley malt at my distillery in Nelson County, Ky., and represents the highest type of distillation.

As a stimulant or tonic it is prescribed by the leading physicians.

As a beverage it will recommend itself to the most exacting connoisseur. Respectfully

I. W. HARPER.

Rev. C. H. Smith's Disappearance.

All in this vicinity who were acquainted with Rev. Charles Hudson Smith while he was pastor of the Presbyterian church were grieved to learn of his second disappearance from his church at Dorchester, Mass. It was thought that his mind had become settled and that his friends need no longer be apprehensive of his safety. It is now however believed that he is dead as is shown in the following which appeared in the New York Tribune of Saturday:

BOSTON, Nov. 15 (Special).—A letter written by the Rev. C. Hudson Smith, who is believed to have committed suicide in the Sound recently, was read this evening to the congregation of the Pilgrim Congregational Church of Dorchester. The opening sentence spoke of the sentence of condemnation as passed by God upon the writer, and of the utter hopelessness of trying to live and work with such darkness upon his soul. Then followed most loving and tender messages to the congregation. Once more, the letter went on, God had spoken in condemnation, and nothing was left but to end a useless and hopeless life. Mr. Smith's family believe that he is dead.

To Our Subscribers.

The SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT which appeared in our columns some time since, announcing a special arrangement with Dr. B. J. KENDALL Co., of Enosburgh Falls, Vt., publishers of "A Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases," whereby our subscribers were enabled to obtain a copy of that valuable work FREE by sending their address to B. J. KENDALL & Co., (and enclosing two-cent stamp for mailing same) is renewed for a limited period. We trust all will avail themselves of the opportunity of obtaining this valuable work. To every lover of the Horse it is indispensable, as it treats in a simple manner all the diseases which afflict this noble animal. Its phenomenal sale throughout the United States and Canada makes it standard authority. Mention this paper when sending for [illegible]

[illegible] majority of the families; to make out a list of the voters who would request the excise board not to grant the landlord a license and if the license were granted to watch the place every Sunday and have the proprietor arrested and punished as often as possible for violation of the law. My advice was of no practical use and, as I announced it, here comes another rum shop and very soon you will have liquor and music to your hearts content. Saloon No. 1 did more business after hours and on Sunday than at any other time. Saloon No. 2 will do likewise. If the men and voters of that village had one half the stamina and christian zeal of the ladies, we would have less evils to deplore. The men are influenced by fear, by policy, by politics, by false friendship, by false shame of doing good, while earnest ladies find in difficulties and obstacles an incentive to greater activity.

Now, afflicted people of Oswego Falls, I am willing at any time to meet in any hall or house of your village those of your citizens who are in earnest about this matter and there adopt a practical means of removing not only the new-born-baby saloon but the little white beer cabin in the lane. You will have whatever you deserve—if you work you will be successful—if you sleep, the enemy will gain ground and overpower you as he does in Fulton and upper Oswego Falls. If you are afraid of these loafers who sell adulterated liquors at all hours, to minors and drunkards and on Sunday, I am not. All they can do is to kill us and then our only regret would be that our death was caused by such unworthy hands.

In conclusion I simply say:

1st. Let some of the women of Lower Oswego Falls stop "rushing the growler."

2d. Let mothers take their boys out of saloon No. 1 next Sunday night.

3rd. Call a public meeting.

4th. Do not wait until it becomes too late. Talk very little, pray a little more and act without fear.

MRS. BURROWS. MRS. REED.

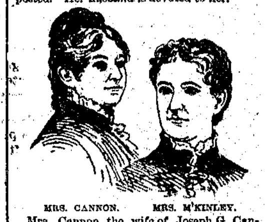
ters in New England. In 1870 Susan Merrill married Mr. Reed in Portland, and they afterwards resided there. Mrs. Reed is described as being a cultivated and refined woman, who would well fill the prominent social position falling to the wife of the speaker of the United States house of representatives. As to personal appearance Mrs. Reed is of medium height, with dark hair and eyes. She has a daughter, who, since she is but 13 years old, would scarcely be able to assist her mother in a position of social prominence.

Mrs. J. C. Burrows, of Michigan, was a girl at the Kalamazoo academy, where Mr. Burrows was a teacher. She was Mary Peck, her father being one of the early settlers of Michigan when it was a territory. When the civil war broke out Mr. Burrows left his young lady pupils for sterner duties. He went away to the war, but seems to have carried with him the heart of Mary Peck. When peace came he returned to Michigan and began to practice law. He was made prosecuting attorney in 1865, and in the same year was married to Miss Peck.

Mrs. Burrows entered Washington society when her husband went to congress in 1873. She at once became very popular. She is very accomplished, being skillful with the artist's brush, and has given a great deal of her work to be sold for charitable purposes. Her "drawing rooms," which she holds weekly, are extremely popular, the hostess being regarded one of the highest women in conversation at the capital.

Mrs. Burrows is tall and slender, with a wealth of hair, bright eyes and a brunette in complexion.

The popular Maj. McKinley, of Ohio, after coming out of the civil war at 21 years of age, went to Canton, O., where he studied law. There he met Ida Saxton. She was the granddaughter of John Saxton, editor of The Ohio Repository, a position he occupied for sixty years. It was a matter of pride with him that he announced the battle of Waterloo in 1815, which overthrew Napoleon I, and the defeat at Sedan in 1870, which overthrew Napoleon III. Ida Saxton's father was prominent in politics and as a business man. The young men of those days who returned from the war had it all their own way with the girls, and young Maj. McKinley won Miss Saxton for his wife. The pair suffered a misfortune in the loss of two children, which inflicted a great shock on the delicate physique and sensitive nature of Mrs. McKinley. Her health was seriously affected, and she has since been a confirmed invalid. She does not go into society, but takes a great interest in the topics of the day, on which she is well posted. Her husband is devoted to her.



MRS. CANNON. MRS. M'KINLEY.

Mrs. Cannon, the wife of Joseph G. Cannon, of Illinois, was born in Canfield, O., her father having gone there in the early days with a colony of settlers from Hartford. Her maiden name was Mary Reed. In 1862 she was married to Mr. Cannon, who was then the state's attorney in Illinois. He met her while she was visiting relatives in that state.

In 1873 Mr. Cannon went to Washington as representative of the Champaign district, and his wife went with him. Since that time she has been prominent in Washington social circles. She is fortunate in possessing two daughters who have been "out," respectively, one and three years.

Our Two Combination Offers.

1st,

The Cosmopolitan needs no recommendation to those that are familiar with it under its new management. The well edited magazine becomes an educating influence in the family circle, whose importance cannot be over estimated. The Cosmopolitan is published at a price ($2.40) hitherto deemed impossible for such a splendidly illustrated periodical, and we consider that we are doing our readers a positive benefit if we are instrumental in placing such a publication within their reach. Just think of what the combination means! You obtain THE TIMES—your home paper—and a magazine which gives you, in a year, nearly fourteen hundred pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including six hundred pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution. Will it not pay you to send a subscription to this office for THE TIMES and the Cosmopolitan immediately? Remember only $2.40 for the two.

2nd,

Special arrangements with the publishers of the New England Fireside enables us to make our readers a combination price which makes this offer an unusual inducement. The New England Fireside has been selected by us as one that cannot help but please all. Send a postal card to the New England Fireside Co., 177 Fort Hill Sq., Boston, Mass., for a sample copy or call at THE TIMES office and examine one and you will at once be convinced of its many excellent qualities. The subscription price of this magazine is $2.00 per year and its special departments [illegible]

[illegible] Cardinal Gibbons, in his robes of [illegible], heading a long procession of distinguished prelates, [illegible] blessed the building, sprinkling holy water on the "Miserere." The ceremony seemed interminable.

At the conclusion of the dedicatory services, the dignitaries of the church and invited guests to the number of three hundred, repaired to the athletic hall beneath the chapel. The two Cardinals sat side by side. To their right sat Rev. Mgr. Satelli, swarthy, slow, dignified; the Papal envoy. To their left smiled the familiar face of Secretary Blaine, Secretaries Windom, Noble, Tracy, Rusk and Proctor and Attorney-General Miller. Postmaster General Wanamaker's absence was conspicious. The first toast was "His Holiness Pope Leo XIII." Mgr. Satelli responded in Latin, which of course only the clergy understood well enough to appreciate.

A wild burst of applause greeted Mr. Blaine when he arose to respond to the toast of "Our Country and the President." The speech was very carefully prepared and the speaker took care to avoid any strong eulogy of the Roman Catholic church. It was an endorsement in a general way of morality and education and religious liberty. Very clever Mr. Blaine.

While Cardinal Taschereau was speaking in French of "Sister Universities," President Harrison entered the hall and was greeted with immense cheers. He was followed by Vice-President Morton and Mrs. Morton. The President bore the expression that is generally attributed to a feline in a strange garret. The Audience insisted upon a speech and in a few short halting sentences Mr. Harrison thanked them for their warm reception. It was a characteristic, speech, spoken only in a sense of deep duty and fell on the enthusiasm of the crowd like a wet sponge. A child might have known that tempest seas of old prejudice surged between the speaker and his hearers.

After an immense deal of painting plastering and remodeling and furnishing, the old Seward mansion is again occupied and once more by a Secretary of State. Mr. Blaine and his family moved in last week. The decidedly old fashioned exterior has only been changed by enlarging the windows. Inside changes necessary for extensive entertaining have been effected. The furniture is magnificent. The house is full of ghosts. From its windows, when it was a club house, Barton S. Key often signalled Mrs. Gen. Sickles and almost in front of it Sickles waited for Key to emerge and shot him to death. In the very room now occupied by the Secretary of State came the assassin Payne to kill Seward, who lay ill in bed and who came so near meeting his death that fateful April night nearly three decades ago.

The International American Association excursion party steam into the Pennsylvannia Station Wednesday evening after an absence of forty-two days. The same train and locomotive accomplished the entire journey of over 6,000 miles, ending the most extensive trip ever accomplished by a solid train.

During his visit here this week Congressman McKinley refused to be interviewed as to his chances of obtaining the speakership. His friends claim that he is the second choice of over 150 members, and these gentlemen insist that he has the written assurance of the support of a score of men confidently counted on by Mr. Reed for himself. It is stated that the Western members have combined to beat Mr. Reed with McKinley or any one else.

Cheese Market Report

AT UTICA.

UTICA, Nov. 18.

The greater animation displayed on the cheese market to-day did not result in any better prices, although a more hopeful tone was apparent among buyers, who thought that possibly they might make a little something on their purchases. The [illegible] was [illegible] small sized stock, while the stock sold above that price was full cream Octobers and Septembers. The third week of October is now about gone and a few factories that do not go into the skimming business closed out their whole stock for the season. More money than anything that was paid was offered for two or three lots of Septembers, but was refused. Home trade took the bulk of the best stock, and some of it went directly to western houses. It is believed that home trade is not as well stocked as usual this fall. Sales of the day were as follows:

Lots	Boxes	Price.
14	830	9¼
1	50	9⅜
7	800	9¼
28	2,099	9½
1	125	9⅝
2	235	9¾
4	306	p. t.
98	6,640
	1,514	Com.
Total	8,154

Ruling 9c. Transactions one year ago 5,670 boxes, ruling 9¾c. Two years ago 7,868 boxes ruling 10½c.

It was resolved at a formal meeting of the board that three more markets should be held after to-day. This will bring the last market of the season on December 9.

LITTLE FALLS, Nov. 18.

Cheese—Our market was more brisk to-day and a stronger tone was apparent. Prices are advanced fully ¼c. per pound. The stock sold was wholly Octobers, and to-day's transactions leaves factories on the average, with cheese on hand from about October 20. The home trade took the bulk of stock. White and colored cheese have changed places, and colored are now in best demand. The sales are in excess of last week's doubtless due to the better prices. The transactions are:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
1	48	8
17	1,830	9¼
36	2,269	9½
1	65	9⅝
29	2,205	9¾
7	377	Com.
91	6,284
Farm dairies	624
Total	6,908

Farm dairies—There were 624 boxes farm cheese sold. There was a sharp competition for some of the finest lots, which commanded extreme prices. The range was 9¼@10½c. the bulk going at 10c.

Butter—Sales of 39 packages of farm dairy butter were made at 18@21c., the ruling price being 20c.

AT FULTON.

One thousand five hundred boxes of cheese are reported by the secretary to have been sold at this market Monday night. Skims brought 9 cents, the state brand 10 cents.

Rev. C. H. Smith's Disappearance.

All in this vicinity who were acquainted with Rev. Charles Hudson Smith while he was pastor of the Presbyterian church were grieved to learn of his second disappearance from his church at Dorchester, Mass. It was thought that his mind had become settled and that his friends need no longer be apprehensive of his safety. It is now however believed that he is dead as is shown in the following which appeared in the New York Tribune of Saturday:

BOSTON, Nov. 15 (Special).—A letter written by the Rev. C. Hudson Smith, who is believed to have committed suicide in the Sound recently, was read this evening to the congregation of the Pilgrim Congregational Church of Dorchester. The opening sentence spoke of the sentence of condemnation as passed by God upon the writer, and of the utter hopelessness of trying to live and work with such darkness upon his soul. Then followed most loving and tender messages to the congregation. Once more, the letter went on, God had spoken in condemnation, and nothing was left but to end a useless and hopeless life. Mr. Smith's family believe that he is dead.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of Cutting Teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. [illegible]

[illegible] Lower Oswego Falls.

Editor Fulton Times:

The people of Lower Oswego Falls are complaining bitterly about the presence in their quiet neighborhood of saloon No. 2. Several months ago their first grog shop camped in their midst and has held undisputed possession of the fort since that time. My advice, on that occasion, to the people was to protest in writing against the barefaced enemy of peace and happiness; to obtain the signature of all the members of the majority of the families; to make out a list of the voters who would request the excise board not to grant the landlord a license and if the license were granted to watch the place every Sunday and have the proprietor arrested and punished as often as possible for violation of the law. My advice was of no practical use and, as I announced it, here comes another rum shop and very soon you will have liquor and music to your hearts content. Saloon No. 1 did more business after hours and on Sunday than at any other time. Saloon No. 2 will do likewise. If the men and voters of that village had one half the stamina and christian zeal of the ladies, we would have less evils to deplore. The men are influenced by fear, by policy, by politics, by false friendship, by false shame of doing good, while earnest ladies find in difficulties and obstacles an incentive to greater activity.

Now, afflicted people of Oswego Falls, I am willing at any time to meet in any hall or house of your village those of your citizens who are in earnest about this matter and there adopt a practical means of removing not only the new-born-baby saloon but the little white beer cabin in the lane. You will have whatever you deserve—if you work you will be successful—if you sleep, the enemy will gain ground and overpower you as he does in Fulton and upper Oswego Falls. If you are afraid of these loafers who sell adulterated liquors at all hours, to minors and drunkards and on Sunday, I am not. All they can do is to kill us and then our only regret would be that our death was caused by such unworthy hands.

In conclusion I simply say:

1st. Let some of the women of Lower Oswego Falls stop "rushing the growler."

2d. Let mothers take their boys out of saloon No. 1 next Sunday night.

3rd. Call a public meeting.

4th. Do not wait until it becomes too late. Talk very little, pray a little more and act without fear.

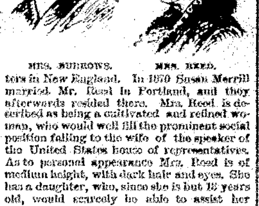
Gossip About Four Ladies, Each of Whom Is Sure in Any Event to Be a Social Factor—To One Will Come a Prize of Great Magnitude.

The contest over the speakership of the house of representatives, which will soon begin at Washington, naturally draws attention to the wives of those men who are prominent as candidates. Mrs. Reed, the wife of Thomas B. Reed, of Maine, is well known in fashionable circles at the capital. For twelve years while her husband has been in congress she has passed her winters in Washington. She is the daughter of the Rev. S. H. Merrill, one of the most eloquent Congregational ministers in New England. In 1870 Susan Merrill married Mr. Reed in Portland, and they afterwards resided there. Mrs. Reed is described as being a cultivated and refined woman, who would well fill the prominent social position falling to the wife of the speaker of the United States house of representatives. As to personal appearance Mrs. Reed is of medium height, with dark hair and eyes. She has a daughter, who, since she is but 18 years old, would scarcely be able to assist her mother in a position of social prominence.



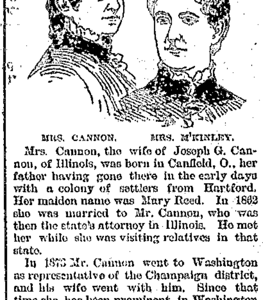
MRS. BURROWS. MRS. REED.

Mrs. J. C. Burrows, of Michigan, was a girl at the Kalamazoo academy, where Mr. Burrows was a teacher. She was Mary Peck, her father being one of the early settlers of Michigan when it was a territory. When the civil war broke out Mr. Burrows left his young lady pupils for sterner duties. He went away to the war, but seems to have carried with him the heart of Mary Peck. When peace came he returned to Michigan and began to practice law. He was made prosecuting attorney in 1865, and in the same year was married to Miss Peck.

Mrs. Burrows entered Washington society when her husband went to congress in 1873. She at once became very popular. She is very accomplished, being skillful with the artist's brush, and has given a great deal of her work to be sold for charitable purposes. Her "drawing rooms," which she holds weekly, are extremely popular, the hostess being regarded one of the highest women in conversation at the capital.

Mrs. Burrows is tall and slender, with a wealth of hair, bright eyes and a brunette in complexion.

The popular Maj. McKinley, of Ohio, after coming out of the civil war at 21 years of age, went to Canton, O., where he studied law. There he met Ida Saxton. She was the granddaughter of John Saxton, editor of The Ohio Repository, a position he occupied for sixty years. It was a matter of pride with him that he announced the battle of Waterloo in 1815, which overthrew Napoleon I, and the defeat at Sedan in 1870, which overthrew Napoleon III. Ida Saxton's father was prominent in politics and as a business man. The young men of those days who returned from the war had it all their own way with the girls, and young Maj. McKinley won Miss Saxton for his wife. The pair suffered a misfortune in the loss of two children, which inflicted a great shock on the delicate physique and sensitive nature of Mrs. McKinley. Her health was seriously affected, and she has since been a confirmed invalid. She does not go into society, but takes a great interest in the topics of the day, on which she is well posted. Her husband is devoted to her.



MRS. CANNON. MRS. M'KINLEY.

Mrs. Cannon, the wife of Joseph G. Cannon, of Illinois, was born in Canfield, O., her father having gone there in the early days with a colony of settlers from Hartford. Her maiden name was Mary Reed. In 1862 she was married to Mr. Cannon, who was then the state's attorney in Illinois. He met her while she was visiting relatives in that state.

In 1873 Mr. Cannon went to Washington as representative of the Champaign district, and his wife went with him. Since that time she has been prominent in Washington social circles. She is fortunate in possessing two daughters who have been "out," respectively, one and three years.

Our Two Combination Offers.

1st,

The Cosmopolitan needs no recommendation to those that are familiar with it under its new management. The well edited magazine becomes an educating influence in the family circle, whose importance cannot be over estimated. The Cosmopolitan is published at a price ($2.40) hitherto deemed impossible for such a splendidly illustrated periodical, and we consider that we are doing our readers a positive benefit if we are instrumental in placing such a publication within their reach. Just think of what the combination means! You obtain THE TIMES—your home paper—and a magazine which gives you, in a year, nearly fourteen hundred pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including six hundred pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution. Will it not pay you to send a subscription to this office for THE TIMES and the Cosmopolitan immediately? Remember only $2.40 for the two.

2nd,

Special arrangements with the publishers of the New England Fireside enables us to make our readers a combination price which makes this offer an unusual inducement. The New England Fireside has been selected by us as one that cannot help but please all. Send a postal card to the New England Fireside Co., 177 Fort Hill Sq., Boston, Mass., for a sample copy or call at THE TIMES office and examine one and you will at once be convinced of its many excellent qualities. The subscription price of this magazine is $2.00 per year and its special departments embrace short stories, illustrated children's department, choice poetry, current events, book reviews, latest fashions, art needlework, decorative art, house keeping receipts, music, farm and garden notes, &c. What we are prepared to do is to furnish you with this excellent $2.00 magazine one year and THE TIMES one year for $1.50. Think of it, both for $1.50.

☞ Money must accompany all orders.

☞ 10cts. extra every time when THE TIMES is sent out of Oswego county. tf.

WASHINGTON, Nov. [illegible]

With the rain falling a steady [illegible] and the wind sobbing through the naked branches of the trees, in the presence of one of the most imposing assemblages of ecclesiastical and civic dignitaries ever gathered in this country, the Catholic University of America was dedicated on Wednesday. The ambitious program of outdoor exercises had been abandoned, but the interior ceremonies lasted all day. The crush was tremendous.

At 10:30 o'clock Cardinals Gibbons and Taschereau and a large retinue of priests arrived by special train and shortly afterward began the exercises.

Cardinal Gibbons, in his robes of scarlet, heading a long procession of distinguished prelates, first blessed the building, sprinkling holy water on the "Miserere." The ceremony seemed interminable.

At the conclusion of the dedicatory services, the dignitaries of the church and invited guests to the number of three hundred, repaired to the athletic hall beneath the chapel. The two Cardinals sat side by side. To their right sat Rev. Mgr. Satelli, swathy, slow, dignified; the Papal envoy. To their left smiled the familiar face of Secretary Blaine, Secretaries Windom, Noble, Tracy, Rusk and Proctor and Attorney-General Miller, Postmaster General Wanamaker's absence was conspicuous. The first toast was "His Holiness Pope Leo XIII." Mgr. Satelli responded in Latin, which of course only the clergy understood well enough to appreciate.

A wild burst of applause greeted Mr. Blaine when he arose to respond to the toast of "Our Country and the President." The speech was very carefully prepared and the speaker took care to avoid any strong eulogy of the Roman Catholic church. It was an endorsement in a general way of morality and education and religious liberty. Very clever Mr. Blaine.

While Cardinal Taschereau was speaking in French of "Sister Universities," President Harrison entered the hall and was greeted with immense cheers. He was followed by Vice-President Morton and Mrs. Morton. The President bore the expression that is generally attributed to a feline in a strange garret. The Audience insisted upon a speech and in a few short halting sentences Mr. Harrison thanked them for their warm reception. It was a characteristic, speech, spoken only in a sense of deep duty and fell on the enthusiasm of the crowd like a wet sponge. A child might have known that tempest seas of old prejudice surged between the speaker and his hearers.

After an immense deal of painting plastering and remodeling and furnishing, the old Seward mansion is again occupied and once more by a Secretary of State. Mr. Blaine and his family moved in last week. The decidedly old fashioned exterior has only been changed by enlarging the windows. Inside changes necessary for extensive entertaining have been effected. The furniture is magnificent. The house is full of ghosts. From its windows, when it was a club house, Barton S. Key often signalled Mrs. Gen. Sickles and almost in front of it Sickles waited for Key to emerge and shot him to death. In the very room now occupied by the Secretary of State came the assassin Payne to kill Seward, who lay ill in bed and who came so near meeting his death that fateful April night nearly three decades ago.

The International American Association excursion party steam into the Pennsylvania Station Wednesday evening after an absence of forty-two days. The same train and locomotive accomplished the entire journey of over 6,000 miles, ending the most extensive trip ever accomplished by a solid train.

During his visit here this week Congressman McKinley refused to be interviewed as to his chances of obtaining the speakership. His friends claim that he is the second choice of over 150 members, and these gentlemen insist that he has the written assurance of the support of a score of men confidently counted on by Mr. Reed for himself. It is stated that the Western members have combined to beat Mr. Reed with McKinley or any one else.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen:—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Cheese Market Report

(From the Utica Herald.)

AT UTICA.

Utica, Nov. 18.

The greater animation displayed on the cheese market to-day did not result in any better prices, although a more hopeful tone was apparent among buyers, who thought that possibly they might make a little something on their purchases. The cheese sold at 9½c. was chiefly small sized skims, while the stock sold above that price was full cream Octobers and Septembers. The third week of October is now about gone and a few factories that do not go into the skimming business closed out their whole stock for the season. More money than anything that was paid was offered for two or three lots of Septembers, but was refused. Home trade took the bulk of the best stock, and some of it went directly to western houses. It is believed that home trade is not as well stocked as usual this fall. Sales of the day were as follows:

14	330	9¼
1	50	9⅜
7	500	9½
23	2,029	9⅝
1	125	9⅝
3	225	9¾
4	300	p. t.
63	6,640
	1,514	Com.
Total	8,154

Ruling 9c. Transactions one year ago 5,670 boxes, ruling 9¾c. Two years ago 7,680 boxes ruling 10½c.

It was resolved at a formal meeting of the board that three more markets should be held after to-day. This will bring the last market of the season on December 9.

LITTLE FALLS, Nov. 18.

Cheese—Our market was more brisk to-day and a stronger tone was apparent. Prices are advanced fully ¼c. per pound. The stock sold was wholly Octobers, and to-day's transactions leaves factories on the average, with cheese on hand from about October 29. The home trade took the bulk of stock. White and colored cheese have changed places, and colored are now in best demand. The sales are in excess of last week's doubtless due to the better prices. The transactions are:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
1	48	9
17	1,320	9⅜
36	2,239	9½
1	65	9⅝
29	2,003	9¾
7	377	Com.
91	6,234
Farm dairies	624
Total	6,003

Farm dairies—There were 624 boxes farm cheese sold. There was a sharp competition for some of the finest lots, which commanded extreme prices. The range was 9¼@10½c. the bulk going at 10c.

Butter—Sales of 59 packages of farm dairy butter were made at 18@21c., the ruling price being 20c.

AT FULTON.

One thousand five hundred boxes of cheese are reported by the secretary to have been sold at this market Monday night. Skims brought 9 cents, the state brand 10 cents.

[illegible] CLOTHING.

As there isn't any patent on good clothing, doesn't it seem somewhat strange that there shouldn't be more of it? It strikes us as rather queer that the poor clothing should predominate to such an unconscionable extent as it does; for, though less at-the-time money is made out of the good than out of the poor, yet the come-again customers much more than strikes the balance in favor of the good. There are, of course, other manipulators of the good besides ourselves; but we must admit that the great bulk of the Ready-made is very far from being "up to the mark." And such being the case, it's a sad commentary on humanity's intelligence that folk's should ever be silly enough to buy any clothing of the "sloppy" kind that is advertised so extensively nowadays.

The authorities of the town of Hannibal presented a bill of $1,073.97 to the Board of Supervisors of Onondaga county for expenses incurred in the care and management of small pox patients, suppressing the disease and taking measures to prevent its spread. The disease, it will be remembered, was brought into town by Eugene Goodroe, a convict discharged from the Onondaga Penitentiary, and who was infected with the disease while in that institution and discharged before having recovered. No action was taken by the Board in regard to the matter.

Under Sheriff Van Buren was shot at and slightly wounded by Brad. Montague, captain of the canal boat "Teddy Milvin," at Lighton's Lock on the Oswego canal near Syracuse last week. Van Buren was after Bert Snyder who had escaped from the county jail and who he had learned was on Montague's boat. Snyder had left the boat at Liverpool. Montague was arrested charged with assault in the first degree with intent to kill. When asked his plea in the police court Monday he said that he wished to plead not guilty to the charge of an "intent to kill," stating that he did not know Van Buren was an officer, but thought him a tough who wanted to attack him. "When I fired the revolver I only wanted to scare him away," said he. Montague waived examination and will await the action of the grand jury.

Universalist Fair and Entertainment Postponed.

In consequence of unforeseen circumstances beyond the control of the society, the Universalist Annual Fair has been postponed from Nov. There is much discussion going on in both secular and religious journals concerning the fact of a personal-spiritual Devil, so at the request of friends Rev. B. On Tuesday evening Nov. 26th Prof. S. M. Spedon of New York will give his popular entertainment at the opera house. He draws very rapidly and in the presence of the audience all manner of characters, talking and drawing at the same time. No such entertainment has been given in Fulton in many years, and by reason of its novelty will draw a full house. He is both witty and instructive. These "chalk talks" have proven immensely popular where ever given, and have delighted vast audiences. Reserved seats can be procured on and after Saturday morning the 23d inst. at Watson's. Single admission 50 cents, balance of course 75 cents.

Burglary in the Third Degree.

Joseph LaRock a young man was arrested Saturday forenoon for attempting to break into E. E. Hart's safe at his coal yard office. The young man was in Hart's employ and had made previous attempts to secure money from the office. About a week ago Mr. Hart discovered that a pane of glass had been removed from the north side of the office the window fastenings turned and the window raised. The money drawer had been broken open but there was no money in it. Saturday forenoon LaRock was discovered by Ed. Briggs another employe endeavoring to open the money drawer in the safe. A warrant was sworn out for his arrest on the charge of burglary in the third degree and given to Deputy Sheriff Poole. LaRock was arraigned before Police Justice Sharpe and pleaded not guilty. He was held to await the action of the grand jury and sent to the county jail on failing to secure $500 bail.

Searching for Stolen Property.

FULTON, Nov. 19.—Numerous complaints have been made lately of petty thieves who are in the habit of cutting clothes lines and stealing clothes that are hung out to dry. The latest victim of these midnight depredators is Mrs. Logan Nelson who, on Saturday, swore out a search warrant which was placed in the hands of officers Byron Clark and Edward Carvey for the purpose of searching the premises of Mrs. John DeLong and a family named LaRock in the lower part of the village, but without finding any trace of the missing clothing. These officers then searched the premises of Fred Reynolds, it is alleged without legal authority. Reynold's wife who is about to become a mother was thrown into hysterics by the officers who ransacked the bureau drawers, etc., but did not find the stolen property. The facts becoming known, Reynolds, by attorneys Mead, Stranahan & Spencer, served a supreme writ on the officers yesterday through Deputy Sheriff Poole. The Reynolds claim damages in the sum of $1,000 each.—Oswego Times.

Fulton's Hardest Roast.

One of the toughest roasts ever perpetrated on the Fulton public was what was advertised to be a "Spiritualists' Seance" last Sunday evening. The opera house was hired and the village was flooded with well worded bills announcing the great seance and the wonderful manifestations and communications that would come from the spirit land on that evening. The hall was well filled by persons who had paid 25 cents to be gulled as they never had been before. The small admission fee was advertised to merely cover expenses, but we are creditably informed that when the mediums (?) skinned out of the back door after the seance (?) they were some $70 ahead. "I don't propose to answer questions this evening and do not guarantee that the communications that I receive will come from the spirit land" said the grand mogul in the start. There was hardly need, however, of making this statement, everyone was convinced of the fact long before the close. We will not enter into the subject further suffice to say that a few slight-of-hand tricks were somewhat clumsily performed, chestnutty cabinet tricks carried through and Sunday evening sadly desecrated.

The representation of the old district school given at the Presbyterian church parlors on Friday evening last was well carried out. There was every conceivable make up to represent teacher, trustees, visitors and scholars, while classes in reading, spelling, &c rendered abundance of opportunity to get in fine and amusing work as well as local hits which the scholars were not slow in taking advantage of. The church parlors were crowded with an audience that was more than pleased with the entertainment. Refreshments were served after "school was out." Over $50 were taken in.

CARNIVAL.

THE PATHFINDER BOAT CLUB'S COMING ENTERTAINMENTS.

Mr. and Mrs. Gross Drilling the Participants Daily for the Great Event.

As one walks down First street they will hear strains of music, songs of musicians and the steps of dancers. The sounds come from Church's Hall where Mr. and Mrs. Gross, at all hours of the day and evening, are drilling those that are to take part in the great Carnival which is to be given at the Opera House on Thanksgiving eve and Thanksgiving night under the auspicies of the Pathfinder Boat Club.

What is the Carnival? You may ask. It is an entertainment in which some 200 persons will take part consisting of the best musical talent, vocal and instrumental, that can be secured in Fulton and vicinity. A large number of the younger married people, young gentlemen and ladies, and school children take part in the dances and drills which form an essential part of the two evenings entertainments.

The Carnival will take two and one-half hours for its presentation and one-half of it is very similar to the Kirmess which made such a great hit in Oswego last winter. In addition to this are operatic selections—gems from the leading operas. The dances and operas are blended together and with the tableaux that are woven in the whole has a spectacular effect. The following are some of the operas that will be presented in part:

The Mascot, the Mikado, Patience, the Beggar Student, the Bohemian Girl, Girofle—Girofla, Yeoman of the Guard, Nadjy, the Haymakers, the Brigands, the Drum Major, Chimes of Normandy, and Erminie. All of the local musical talent that could be secured have been assigned parts in the selections from these operas. The important dances in the Carnival are the Gypsy dance consisting of a plot and dance in which thirty-five take part. The scene is in front of a camp—all being dressed in native costumes. The Gypsy dance proper will be given by fourteen ladies.

The Indian dance has eighteen in it, half wild indians and the other half squaws. It is weird and blood curdling enough to satisfy the most fastidious.

The Holland dance by sixteen young ladies in the native costume of the Hollanders cannot fail to please. Sixteen dancers take part in this.

The Flower dance is another in which eleven young ladies take part. A special feature of this is the fact that 3,000 roses are worn by the young dancers.

The Flowers and Bees dance in which forty school children between the ages of six and twelve years take part and when seen, all will consider it appropriately named.

The Drum Major drill has in it thirty-two young people, half boys and half girls between the ages of fourteen and eighteen. It is the drill that has made such a success in the opera of the Drum Major which is now running at the Casino in New York.

There are thirty different features in this Carnival nearly every feature presented by different people in different costumes. The Fulton Band have kindly consented to render music on the two evenings outside the hall and inside before the curtain rises. The Oswego Falls band will probably give their services.

OBITUARY.

Died at Oak Park, Ia., Nov. 18th 1889, Hannah M., wife of Manly W Ketcham and daughter of the late Dr. Robert Scott of Oswego.

This estimable lady was well known in this village and at one time attended Falley Seminary. She was much beloved by all who knew her. She leaves a husband, daughter and two brothers. Her body was to arrive at Oswego to-day at 1:15 p. m. for burial.

"She is not dead.

In that great cloister's stillness and seclusion,
By guardian angels led,
Safe from temptation, safe from sin's pollution
She lives, who we call dead."

L. Earl Hewitt died at the home of Mr. Upson, in Plainville, Onondaga county, where he was taken after he had the apopletic stroke which terminated fatally, on Wednesday, Nov. 13, 1889. He was 63 years of age. The remains were brought to the home of his son-in-law, S. B. Mead where funeral services, conducted by Rev. Dr. D. M. Rankin, were held on Saturday. The following gentlemen acted as bearers. W. G. Gage, O. J. Jennings, Russell Carter, Hugh McKiernan, James Bailey and J. C. Wells.

Peebles & Co.

Oswego County Sunday School Workers in Convention.

Notwithstanding the stormy weather about sixty plucky Sunday School workers assembled Tuesday afternoon from the various parts of the county.

The meeting was called to order by the President, Hon. O. J. Harmon, who conducted the devotional exercises in his usual impressive manner.

A discussion of the Work of the S. S. Superintendent was opened by Supt. F. E. Bacon of Fulton. The remarks were like the speaker, practical, energetic, earnest. The Superintendent should be an organizer; he should know the needs of his pupils and the powers of his teachers. He should be able to mass his forces and strike decisive blows. He should realize and make his teachers realize that the work of the school is saving souls. All work should be done with this in mind; all energies should be bent in this direction.

The discussion was continued by Com. W. A. Baldwin, Rev. W. H. Palmer, Rev. J. C. Breaker, Supt. J. J. Coit.

LAST EVENING.

The evening services opened as per program with a service of song conducted by Mr. J. J. Coit followed by devotional exercises conducted by the president.

After a fine rendering of an appropriate selection by Messrs Coit, Gilbert and Buck, the president in a few fitting words introduced the speaker of the evening Rev. W. H. Palmer, E. Bp. Ch., Oswego. He said in substance as follows:

The subject "What shall the Teacher teach?" will better be understood if we first understand the results to be attained. The speaker knowing the time, place and subject, came ready to talk on that subject whereas if he had been given only a vague idea of time, place and subject he could not have made definite preparations and might have taken a train another way or on another day.

The work of the teacher is to build up the pupils in the holy faith. The means for bringing the pupils to Christ and building them up in Christian character should not be considered. The means must be the Word of God.

We are "quickened through thy truth" not by science, geography nor stories. So all through the bible we learn that by God's word of truth the soul is saved.

PREACH THE WORD.

Then we are to preach the scripture, not literature, geography nor human philosopoy, more specifically teach the central truth of each detached passage of scripture as it occurs in the lesson.

The lesson having been gained by the teacher must be adapted by him to his class, giving to each pupil "his portion of meat in due season." Teach the scriptures as inspired by the Holy Spirit and be sure that the pupils understand what you teach.

Discussion on the above paper was very ably opened by Rev. J. C. Breaker, Fulton. He spoke earnestly of the need of Christ on the part of the children.

The Rev. Mr. Johnson of New Haven said that in connection with the truth to be presented came the thought of how to present and how to prepare to present the truth.

The Rev. Thomas Higgins said the teacher should know what he is to teach, should study the word and keep studying. Mr. Samuel Green would lead the children to have confidence in the bible. He would give practical lessons concerning the pitfalls of life which are in the way. Mr. J. J. Coit said the teacher should teach what he has felt, as only that which he has felt can he make another feel. The president emphasized this last point.

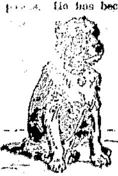
On these occasions, however, he would usually stop over and go about in the surrounding country, [illegible] seeking.

Jack never requires a [illegible]; indeed, he disdains even to carry [illegible]. He has become so thoroughly identified with railroads that no conductor would think of putting him off for non-payment of fare, though sometimes he rides a considerable distance, not from station to station, as he often travels, but to the great cities of the west and east.



RAILROAD JACK.

Jack was once kidnapped. Fortunately those who carried him off were a band of Italian railroad laborers, and they tied the dog beside the tracks, and Jack was enabled to hail his friends as they passed on the trains by howls with which they had been long familiar. Finally he was noticed by a trainman on an express train, who telegraphed back to the boys aboard an accommodation train which followed.

When the slow train came to the laborers' camp a sally was made by Jack's admirers and a rescue was effected. Jack was the happiest dog in America. It is hoped that the intelligent animal will learn to write some day, when he can publish a novel based on his own experience and make himself the hero. "Railroad Jack, or Trainmen to the Rescue," would [illegible] good title.

Jack [illegible] figured at quite a number of dog shows, [illegible] being accustomed to the road he gets nervous when absent from it. After these shows he usually takes a long trip. When the show at Toronto closed recently he proceeded at once to the station, and instead of taking an Albany train took a drawing room car for Chicago. There he remained long enough to look over the proposed sites for the World's fair and then took a train for home. But Jack didn't wish it to be known among his friends in the baggage room at Albany that he was putting on airs in drawing room cars, so he hopped into a baggage car and contented himself to return in the station in which he had been brought up. During the ride a coffin with a weighty corpse inside dropped on his toe and amputated it without the aid of a surgeon. If the officers of Jack's road don't put him on the retired list after this and take good care of him for the rest of his life, they will simply display the ingratitude of corporations.

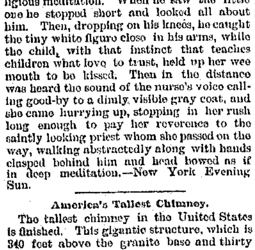
A Touch of Nature.

Yesterday I was out in the park while the babies, with their white capped gossiping nurses, were still there. By and by I came upon one little toddler who had strayed out of the sight of her heedless nurse. She was trotting unsteadily on, talking away to herself in her soft baby voice. Suddenly she stopped and looked about her. She was all alone. It was getting dusk. The pink lips quivered and the blue eyes filled with tears. She had half a mind to cry.

Just at that instant there came around a turn in the walk a tall figure with the brown robe and hemp girdle of the monastic. His head was bowed and he seemed wrapt in religious meditation. When he saw the little one he stopped short and looked all about him. Then, dropping on his knees, he caught the tiny white figure close in his arms, while the child, with that instinct that teaches children what love to trust, held up her wee mouth to be kissed. Then in the distance was heard the sound of the nurse's voice calling good-by to a dimly visible gray coat, and she came hurrying up, stopping in her rush long enough to pay her reverence to the saintly looking priest whom she passed on the way, walking abstractedly along with hands clasped behind him and head bowed as if in deep meditation.—New York Evening Sun.

America's Tallest Chimney.

The tallest chimney in the United States is finished. This gigantic structure, which is 340 feet above the granite base and thirty feet square at the bottom, is situated on the grounds of the Fall River (Mass.) Iron works. Previous to the completion of this chimney, the Clark Thread Works chimney at Kearney, N. J., bore off the palm, being 335 feet in height, 28 feet broad at the base, and cost the snug sum of $25,000. The Fall River's chimney will furnish draught for four new factories. It is claimed by the owners that it is "the tallest chimney in the world designed solely for making a draught for boilers." Building a chimney is a very delicate job and requires much more skill than most people give the workmen credit for.



FALL RIVER IRON WORKS CHIMNEY.

The slightest deviation of fixed rules as to the production of its diameter, which lessens at the rate of one inch in eighty inches rise, or the failure to construct the cores, which extend from the base to its top, would result in a complete demolition of the structure.

Besides these two smokestacks mentioned, there are others in various parts of the world worthy of especial mention. The tallest in the world is the one at Paisley, Scotland, which is over 500 feet high. Glasgow is next on the list, with one of 468 feet in height.

Providence has one on the Knight factory which is 185 feet high, and Boston has another 200 feet high.

Bright's Disease.

A Two-Year-Old Child Saved After the Failure of Four Physicians.

My little girl, two years of age, was taken sick in March, 188[illegible], with scarlet fever. When recovering she took a severe cold, which developed Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. Her ankles, feet and eyes were terribly swollen; she had a burning fever, and all the symptoms of an aggravated case of Bright's Disease. Four of our best physicians attended her, but without success, and Peculiar in [illegible] and economy. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." [illegible] Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered."

Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. Read proof below.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., Feb. 18, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gentlemen:—I have used your Kendall's Spavin Cure for Corns and Scratches and I can say I never saw its equal. I have cured some of the worst cases of Corns that a horse could be subject to. I have been having such good success with your liniment that I would almost as soon a horse would have Corns as not. I have recommended it to several with like success. I had a large Pacer with a white hoof forward and had Corns in both quarters as large as fifty-cent pieces. I cured him in three weeks, so when I sold him to an expert horseman he never knew the horse ever had a Corn. I will give $100.00 for the worst case of Corns that I can't cure with your Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Respectfully yours, PETER MALONEY.

BULL'S HEAD, N. Y., June 8, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gents:—I think it my duty to say to you that I have thoroughly tried your Kendall's Spavin Cure and have done wonders for myself in removing hard Callouses from horses' limbs. I think it one of the best liniments I ever used.

Very respectfully yours, JOHN F. SHULTES, V. S.

MURRYSVILLE, PA., May 13, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gents:—I have been using Kendall's Spavin Cure for some time and have cured three or four Spavins. I think it is the best medicine for horse flesh that I have ever used and also for Corns on human flesh. It will remove Corns entirely without pain. Very respectfully yours, L. A. McWILLIAMS.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors.

Bells.

Poe parodied in Chicago Herald.

Hear the jingling of the bells—
Street-car bells!
What lots of going to and fro their clattering
foretells.
How they jingle, jingle, jingle
Up and down the busy streets—
Married folks and those who're single,
Every class and age commingle
In the closely crowded seats.
Some are standing, and there's some
Who are always chewing gum;
Others who are near you sitting
Make you nervous with their spitting.
While some mamma's guileless darling climbs upon the crowded seat,
And proceeds to paint your garments with its cunning, muddy feet,
And your teeth with anger chatter
As you think—it doesn't matter
So it goes.
No one knows
Where the stream of people flows.
Coming, going, always fickle,
Rather ride than save a nickle,
While the fare collector's pocket large and larger ever swells,
As we listen to the jingle of the bells, bells, bells,
To the constant five cent jingle of the bells.

Hear the ringing of the bells—
'Phoning bells!
What lots of talking back and forth their jingling
foretells.
How unceasingly their jangled
In our ears by day and night.
Often we've an hour wrangled
When found the lines were tangled
And we felt we'd like to fight
When the central operator
Would a half an hour later
With suppressed and girlish laughter
Say we weren't what she was after;
Then we'd quench the inward fire
Which when spoken melts the wire
And we'd thank her
While our rancor
With an effort we'd suppress
For we know there's no redress.
So it goes,
No one knows
Of our telephone woes.
Some one is forever talking,
Just to save a little walking;
And the quite discordant jingle
On our nervous hearing wells
As we listen to the jingle
Of the bells, bells, bells,
To the peace-distracting jingle of the bells

In November.

I.

The wintry days are coming fast,
The cheerful summer months are past,
Oh, dear!
A sudden shiver and a thrill
Informs us that the winter chill
Is here.

II.

The leaves fall whirling to the ground,
The landscape looks all dark, and browned,
And drear.
The whistling winds search out our bones,
And make our lives all monotones Appear.

III.

But why should you, young man, be blue?
Days cold and frosty, bright and new,
Will come;
And then, with brain all in a whirl,
You'll go out sleighing with your girl—
Yum! Yum!

THE PROPER THING.

Black is very fashionable in wool fabrics.

Small crotched ball buttons are again used.

Round waists with full gathered skirts are liked for house dresses.

Striped silks are effectively combined with wool in the new dresses.

Plaid silks are combined with cashmere for pretty dressy toilets.

Woolen materials were never so handsome or so universally worn as now.

Redingotes and dresses with princesse backs and jacket fronts remain in favor.

The heliotrope and grayish green reseda shades are very becoming to blondes.

Silk cord passementaries in points or flowers or in pendent balls are fashionable trimmings.

The favorite shape for large velvet sleeves is the mutton-leg, in wrinkles above the elbows and nearly tight below with six buttons and loops of braid on the inside seams of each wrist.

What I know about that standard remedy—Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup:—I know that a 25 cent bottle cured me of a bad cough in 12 hours. It is a fact.

Myraids of cases of rheumatism and neuralgia have already succumbed to that wonderful remedy Salvation Oil. Price only 25 cents per bottle.

BEVERLY FARMS.

A THANKSGIVING IN OLD VIRGINIA, BY FELIX G. DE FONTAINE.

[Copyright, 1889, by American Press Association.]

BEVERLY-ON-THE-ROANOKE is an old historical place that has long been famous in the annals of Virginia hospitality. Located in one of the most fertile sections of the mother state and comprising many hundreds of acres that under skillful tillage had become a model of their kind, remote from the whir of the railway and the din of traffic, yet with neighboring plantations that provided a wealth of sociability, and adjacent forests and streams that tempted the fox hunter and sportsman, there reigned throughout a sense of peacefulness and content that well comported with the brave and gentle character of the men and women who, generation after generation, had gone forth from the old family to grace with their influence the outside world.

Just before the war, the members of the household consisted of Col. Bainbridge, his son Will, cadet in the naval academy at Annapolis, and three daughters, Dorothy, the elder, upon whom by reason of the death of her mother devolved the care of the family, Margery and Clara—all of them belles of the neighborhood. Like most Virginia homes, this did not escape the afflictions of the time. Death laid upon it a heavy hand. Col. Bainbridge was killed in the valley while leading one of the regiments of Stonewall Jackson. Margery was left a widow at twenty-two, but had never laid aside her mourning, and always spoke of her husband as if he had died within the past year, her only consolation being that, instead of dying of his wounds amid the agonies of a battle field, he had been taken a prisoner and tenderly cared for by some Federal officer, she knew not whom.

Dorothy likewise was not without her grief. Before the breaking out of hostilities, she had found among the officers stationed at Fortress Monroe one who had promised to brighten her life, and to him had plighted her heart and hand. At the call of his state he went to the front, and a monument, around which Dorothy in her grave way every Sunday strews flowers, tells the story of his gallant death at Manassas. Clara, the youngest sister, after the close of the war, while visiting friends in the north was wooed and won by Col. Hartley, formerly of the Federal army, and at the time at which this story opens was living in New York among the surroundings of wealth, a daughter, Kate, being the only fruit of the union. Will was still following the sea and was the captain of a steamship on the Pacific.

To her aunts Kate was a comparative stranger, for they had not seen her since early childhood, and of her father they knew less. The wounds of the strife had not yet healed. Yet Dorothy had written time and again for her handsome northern niece to come down and spend a winter on the plantation only to be met with an excuse, for a visit to Old Roanoke and the two ancient relatives was suggestive of anything but pleasure to a young city girl who counted the figures on her dial plate chiefly as they scored the change from one scene of gayety to another. So, in her own words, "the evil day was put off as far as possible."

Finally, however, Miss Dorothy made such a point of it—Kate being, after her mother, "next of kin"—that further resistance became an offense, and the journey was made. At the outset it seemed like retirement into rural seclusion. We shall see.

On arriving at the station of the dilapidated little town that marked the end of her travel by rail, Kate found awaiting her Daddy Hercules, with the old fashioned cinnamon colored coach, swinging high up on its springs, the family coat of arms emblazoned on both door panels—an ancestral ark that had been a figure head in Roanoke for nigh on to a century—and it was with no little amusement that she ascended the flight of steps let down with an air of immense importance by Tony the footman, while Hercules informed her that "de basket on de front seat wur filled wid good tings by Miss Doroty to keep young missis comp'ny while he fotches her home." Then the old coachman went back to his perch on "the dickey seat," Tony mounted the trunk rest behind, seized the straps whereby he preserved a perpendicular, and they started for Beverly Farms.

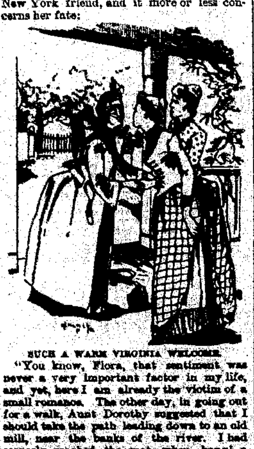
And right royal company did Kate find in that basket of fried chicken, hard boiled eggs, "beat biscuit" and home made cake, for she was ravenously hungry and the bouncing of the coach had speeded her appetite. It was a ride novel to the young city girl in other respects. The scenery was such as she had never looked upon or dreamed of. The road ran over a lovely landscape, smooth undulations, among wind mills, [illegible] and grass, beautiful fields and wild flowers, where the birds poured out their songs [illegible]

It did not take Kate long to find herself the queen and fairy of that household, with subjects, both white and black, for whom she had nothing but love. True, her kingdom at first looked prim, but in a little while every object had in her eyes acquired a golden tint. The dear old aunts in their ruffled caps, immaculate aprons and crossed neckerchiefs, seemed like ancient bits of history that had stepped out from their ancestral portrait gallery to make themselves agreeable. Perfect harmony reigned between the place and its occupants. Everything seemed to belong to the same age, and that a past age. Not an object had the vulgarity of newness about it. Stiff, high backed rockers confronted one another from each side of the old fashioned broad chimney, on the hearth of which stood the heavy brass andirons polished to mirror like brightness, that had kept watch and ward for generations, and it seemed a sacrilege to disturb their position. Bolt upright against the wall, with its full moon face and perpetual coo-coo, was the grandfather's clock, and among the traditions was one that the coo-coo never had failed to announce the time, save once—the day when Col. Bainbridge was killed in the valley.

The household preserved much of its antebellum characteristics, and to Kate these were also strange. The family servants had grown old in their duties. Daddy Hercules, the coachman, and Silas, the butler, had heads as white as cotton. Aunt Dilsey, the cook, was the tyrant of the place, allowing little interference from the "white folks," and no familiarity from "dem sleepy headed niggers dat warn't no 'count no how, 'cept in de co'n fiel'." With all her peculiarities, she was thoroughly respectful, and as tenacious of the rights of her old mistresses as "in de days when I wuz er slim nigger an' wuz ole miss's boddy servant an' Miss Madg'ry's nuss." Jerry, her grandson, whose mission it was to keep the wood pile well stocked, came in for a large share of Aunt Dilsey's maternal attention, especially when "de light'ood knots gin out," and his life was anything but a happy lot, for then "ole mammy," as he called her, made things lively for him.

Take it all in all, Beverly was a home amid whose quiet Kate began to feel she could be happy for the remainder of her life. She might not have been able to add to its beauty, but she infused into it the brightness of her fresh, young nature. Her songs mingled with those of the birds, and the influence of her cheery presence pervaded every nook and cranny on the place, from the solemn old parlors in the big house to the quarters of the "yard folks," where she romped with the piccaninnies or listened to the ghost stories of Mammy Angeliner.

After making herself acquainted with all the home surroundings, Kate started out one day on a journey of exploration through the neighboring country. And this is a part of the story that may best be told in her own words, for it is as she wrote it in a letter to a New York friend, and it more or less concerns her fate:



SUCH A WARM VIRGINIA WELCOME.

"You know, Flora, that sentiment was never a very important factor in my life, and yet, here I am already the victim of a small romance. The other day, in going out for a walk, Aunt Dorothy suggested that I should take the path leading down to an old mill, near the banks of the river. I had scarcely reached the spot, when—bang! a gun was fired and something flew by me as swift as the wind. Naturally frightened, I screamed as only a girl can scream who is sure she has been shot. In a minute or two the offending cause made his appearance in the person of a young gentleman in gray shooting jacket, high top boots, a game bag and a gun, followed by three or four dogs. Raising his hat, he apologized, but said that the sight of a deer had been a temptation too strong to resist, and merely added that he suspected the deer was suffering from the same cause as myself, namely, fright, rather than injury.

"The October wind had sufficiently disarranged his hair to make it fall carelessly about his head and shoulders, and he was as handsome as a picture. How glad I was that I screamed, for it [illegible] on faith, and now apt we are to silence our consciences in the matter of propriety.

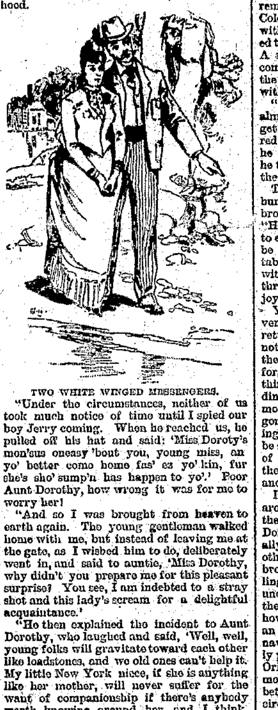
"Well, we walked and we talked, and we talked and we walked. He forgot that he had come out gunning, and I quite lost sight of the object of my own expedition. It seemed as if I had known him forever and a day. I wondered as I sat there, what Tom Waring or Henry Lawrence would say if they could see Kate Hartley in this rustic position, chatting as merrily with a perfect stranger as if I had known him from childhood.



TWO WHITE WINGED MESSENGERS.

"Under the circumstances, neither of us took much notice of time until I spied our boy Jerry coming. When he reached us, he pulled off his hat and said: 'Miss Doroty's mon'sus oneasy 'bout you, young miss, an yo' better come home fas' es yo' kin, fur she's sho' sump'n has happen to yo'.' Poor Aunt Dorothy, how wrong it was for me to worry her!

"And so I was brought from heaven to earth again. The young gentleman walked home with me, but instead of leaving me at the gate, as I wished him to do, deliberately went in, and said to auntie, 'Miss Dorothy, why didn't you prepare me for this pleasant surprise? You see, I am indebted to a stray shot and this lady's scream for a delightful acquaintance.'

"He then explained the incident to Aunt Dorothy, who laughed and said, 'Well, well, young folks will gravitate toward each other like loadstones, and we old ones can't help it. My little New York niece, if she is anything like her mother, will never suffer for the want of companionship if there's anybody worth knowing around her, and I think, Gerald, she's hit it right this time.'

"I was so glad to hear Aunt Dorothy say this; I loved her twice as much as I did before, because she appreciated Gerald. When he made his adieu, she told me it was a queer coincidence that the first person I met in old Roanoke should turn out to be the son of mother's old lover, Randolph Bruce. Then she added, with an odd smile, 'I wonder if the feeling will be inherited by the children!'"

After this occurrence it was not a difficult matter to induce Kate to prolong her visit at least until the holidays.

"Yes," said Aunt Margery, "Beverly farms shall this year, if never before, witness a genuine Thanksgiving, as well as a Christmas."

And so it was arranged that Aunt Dorothy, as the head of the family, should at once write to Col. and Mrs. Hartley, inviting them to the old Virginia home.

"And Uncle Robert, too," suggested Kate, "our old bachelor uncle, he must also come, for he lives with father and mother, and there could be no real thanksgiving with his dear kind face absent from the table." In a few days the mail brought a reply from Mrs. Hartley accepting the invitation.

During the month or more that elapsed Kate and Gerald were frequent companions. A graduate of the Virginia military institute and finely educated for a profession, he found in her own ready intellect a charmful sympathy that was greater than even her beauty. He never told his love, but the eyes of both were traitors. One day he invited her to a stroll, and the path led to the old mill where they first met. They had conversed long and pleasantly when he suddenly inquired, "Are you superstitious, Kate?"

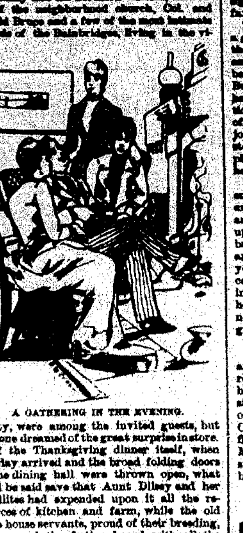
"No; why do you ask?"

"Because in a few weeks we shall probably part, not to meet again for a long time, and I want some pledge from you that our friendship shall remain unbroken. See," said Gerald, plucking two rose leaves from a flower she wore and throwing them into the river flowing at their feet, "if they float down the stream side by side, not drifting apart or sinking, they may indicate our possible future, but if"——

"What mockery!" quickly interrupted Kate, impulsively laying her hand upon his. "Don't throw our lives into the scale to be balanced by two rose leaves!" The words were spoken before she thought of their full significance.

"No, watch them—there they go!" And the two white winged messengers went out upon their mission. [illegible]

Preparations for Thanksgiving were on a [illegible] scale, [illegible] for a Virginia Christmas [illegible]. Kate's father and [illegible] Hartley arrived in due time, and had been duly installed in the great guest chambers, and what with holly, mistletoe and flowers, the old mansion took on a festive look it had not worn for a generation. Besides the immediate members of the family and the northern visitors, the rector of the neighborhood church, Col. and Gerald Bruce and a few of the most intimate friends of the Bainbridges, living in the vicinity, were among the invited guests, but not one dreamed of the great surprise in store.



A GATHERING IN THE EVENING.

Of the Thanksgiving dinner itself, when the day arrived and the broad folding doors of the dining hall were thrown open, what need be said save that Aunt Dilsey and her satellites had expended upon it all the resources of kitchen and farm, while the old time house servants, proud of their breeding, had graced the festive board with all the beauty they could command! It was a feast to provoke an appetite. There were rare dishes, sumptuously cooked and sumptuously served; the choicest fruits and wines of the long ago; marvels of workmanship and age in family plate, china and glass, and innumerable things delicious to the senses of taste, smell and sight—all insinuated into its composition. But it was a dinner long to be remembered in more than æsthetic or culinary respect.

Conversation was in its most eloquent and reminiscent stage, when suddenly the old Colonial knocker on the front door rang out with a sharp rat-tat-tat, as it had never sounded through the house before. What can it be? A momentary silence falls upon the little company while Uncle Ben hastens to answer the summons, but in a minute he returns with his black face fairly ablaze with light.

"Miss Doroty—Miss Madg'ry"—the words almost choke him in their joyful endeavor to get out—"Dere's a gem'lum outside wid er red face an' er big crap er whisker, who say he like ter cum in an' git sum ob dis dinner; he talk so bresh, I 'spec I better ax him," and the faithful old servant grins from ear to ear.

The words are scarcely spoken before the burly, broad shouldered figure of a sunbrowned man enters, and with a hearty "Home again—How d'ye all?" rushes forward to embrace Aunt Margery, who happens to be sitting nearest to him at the head of the table. "Brother Will! Brother Will!" and with a scream of delight the three sisters throw themselves into his arms weeping for joy.

Yes, after many years of absence and adventure, the sailor boy, now a captain, had returned to the old homestead, that he had not seen since the war. And what a time they had! How the gray headed servants, forgetting the grand dinner, forgetting everything in their affection, crowded into the dining room to see young "Mar's Will" once more! The whole plantation seemed to have gone mad with joy that the first Thanksgiving ever celebrated in Beverly Farms should be so blest. Indeed, for everybody the cup of happiness appeared to have been filled to the brim. But it was not so. There was yet another surprise in store.

In the evening there was such a gathering around the big fire in the chimney place as the old parlor never had witnessed. With Dorothy on one side, and Margery—her usually grave face brightened by love—on the other, each holding the brawny hand of their brother, and Kate in his lap, her eyes sparkling with delight at the possession of a new uncle, Will recounted his adventures during the preceding twenty years. He told them how, after the war, he had found service on an English steamship and, by reason of his naval training at Annapolis, had been rapidly promoted until he became a captain in the Oriental and Peninsular company, but that most of his time had been spent in voyages between far distant ports in the east under circumstances that did not permit him to take a sufficiently long furlough to visit home.

Besides, he knew from the letters of his sisters that their financial condition did not require his presence or the abandonment of a profession that was yielding him more than a competence. However, the longing had so grown upon him to return to the scenes of his boyhood, he at last had resigned his commission and determined that henceforth Beverly Farms should be his home. "And to think of it," he added, "that I have found on the night of my arrival a Thanksgiving party in Old Virginia a brother-in-law (turning to Col. Hartley) whom I have never seen and this lovely niece. Verily, we all have reason to be thankful."

"But what's this, Kate?" continued the captain, toying with a curiously wrought locket which dangled among other ornaments from a girdle around her waist.

"That's a trinket," replied Kate, "that belongs to Uncle Robert, yonder, and I wear it only by his permission. Tell the story, Uncle Bob, for I always love to hear it."

"It is an incident of the war," was the rejoinder, "and at a time like this one has no right to recall sad memories or speak of such a thing as battle and bloodshed." Urged by the others, however, Uncle Robert proceeded: "After the assault on Pickett's division at the battle of Gettysburg, among the prisoners who fell into the hands of my regiment was one in whom I became deeply interested. He was a large, handsome, brown eyed man, a native of this state, and, like myself, a major. Though desperately wounded, and with the chances of living all against him, not a murmur of regret, save for his family, escaped his lips. I often visited him, but each visit revealed the fact that his hours were numbered. One morning while seated by his bedside, he asked me to hand him his faded, gray uniform which hung at the foot of the cot. I did so, and taking from one of the pockets a knife, he requested me to rip a place in the left breast of his coat. There I found a bit of paper wrapped around a small hard substance, which on further examination proved to be a little star. 'This,' said he, looking at it lovingly, 'was cut from the coat of Gen. Stonewall Jackson, my noble leader. It was my fortune to be one of those who bore him to the rear when he fell at Chancellorsville, and when his coat was removed I cut this star from his collar and placed it where you have just now found it—where it would always be nearest my heart. I returned to the battlefield and fought as I never fought before. [illegible] was transferred to the Army of the West. When the war ended I had the two mementoes inclosed in the little casket that Kate now wears."

During this recital, more than one pair of eyes were moist, and the voice of the manly soldier himself, who recalled this episode, trembled as he reached forward and opening the locket said: "See, here is the star of Stonewall Jackson, and here the furlough signed by him permitting Maj. Albert Fairfax to visit home for thirty days."

"Oh, poor husband!" cried Margery, with a great sob, as she fell almost swooning in the arms of her brother. Dorothy and Clara assisted her from the room to her own chamber, where for a time grief held its sway. But Margery was made of stern stuff and had been too long the mistress of her emotions to let them interfere with the happiness of such an hour as that, and when she rejoined the company, the old calm was restored and there was not a trace in the sweet, placid features of the great heart ache she had undergone.

Approaching Major Hartley as she reentered the room, she laid her hand in his and said: "You have been my good angel, and God has sent you here that I might look upon the brave man who stood by that other brave man in his hour of need, whom I loved and have mourned by day and night. Thank you, major, or Uncle Robert, as I may now call you, and remember that this Thanksgiving of ours has broken down all barriers, and henceforth, in this house, there shall be no north, no south, no east, no west—only one grand union of hearts."

And they all said—amen!

It proved especially true in the case of Kate and Gerald, for when another anniversary rolled around they sat at the same festive board as husband and wife. Uncle Robert since that time has been a frequent member of the Beverly household, enjoying with Capt. Bainbridge the sports of the season, and finding charm in the quiet companionship of Margery, who never tires of listening to the story of Gettysburg and the heroism of her brave husband and his men.

THE PROHIBITORY SENTIMENT

Pervading the country is due in a great measure to the large amount of spurious Whiskey that is being sold. Imposed upon by irresponsible dealers who doctor and color up spirits to represent Whiskey, consumers are retaliating by voting to wipe out the entire business. To aid in checking this sentiment by supplying consumers with a pure Whiskey, I am now placing my celebrated "I W. HARPER OLD NELSON COUNTY, KY. WHISKEY" direct to them from distillery warehouse.

This whiskey is made from selected rye and corn and barley malt at my distillery in Nelson County, Ky., and represents the highest type of distillation.

As a stimulant or tonic it is prescribed by the leading physicians.

As a beverage it will recommend itself to the most exacting connoisseur. Respectfully

I. W. HARPER.

In the midst of a heap of waste iron in the store-house of Cree & Harris, lies the result of the life-study and labor of David Jennings. In these pieces of broken iron Jennings, not many months since, saw that which would make him a rich man, saw himself feted and honored as the one being possessed of a mind masterful enough to grapple with and solve the question of perpetual motion. And here, broken to bits and ready to be remelted, is the result of the labor of years, the dreams of a lifetime. David Jennings' perpetual motion machine was sold to Cree & Harris this week for old iron, and the many air-castles built by its inventor have fallen to the ground. It is claimed by many that the machine was kept in motion by a concealed and secret power. Perhaps this is true—perhaps not. But it was clearly demonstrated that the machine was not a success as shown to the public last winter.—Oneida Free Press.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22, 1889.

Rumors that the President or Secretary Blaine favor the candidacy of this, that or the other candidate for the Speakership of the House have been denied by both gentlemen, and a great deal of uncertainty is in the air. The later candidates in the field are making war in common against Mr. Reed. They say he has always been against Western interests; that he is opposed to extended silver coinage, etc. They add that his claim of title to the speakership because he was the banner bearer when the honor was an empty one, is absurd. They claim that the honor was only given him before at his earnest solicitation, as he believed it would help him to be elected to Congress. This talk comes mostly from the friend of candidates other than Mr. McKinley whose policy it is to be on good terms with Mr. Reed, so that in the event of the election of either, the other will have the best committee of the House. Trading for committeeships will be brisk for the next two weeks. While all the candidates talk confidently of their chances only three or four have any real faith in themselves.

Congressional visitors to the Executive Mansion complain bitterly of the difficulty of seeing the President. They say that he has no time to give anyone but his cabinet officers. As the these gentlemen have the entree at all hours, it would seem unjust that they monopolize the two hours given to other visitors. Almost every morning the carriages of two or three cabinet officers can be seen around the White House from 10 to 12 o'clock. A Congressman who calls with a constituent and is turned day after day naturally feels mortified. It humbles him and injures his strength at home.

The new Senators will begin their legislatiue careers by asking such Senators as have seen the shortest service to combine with them for a reorganization of the force of Senate employes. The civil service system has so restricted the number of offices available for rewarding followers that a new deal is demanded. Old Senators, like Edmunds, Allison, Sherman and Hoar have gobbled up all the offices in sigh and their followers have held them for a score of years. Senatorial courtesy in this matter as in others is bound to receive a rude shock. The present officers of the Senate are greatly exercised over the rumor.

The fight for the exposition of 1892 was opened yesterday by the arrival of Colonel Jonef and Governor Francis of Missouri, the missionaries who are to give their reasons for their faith in the merit of St. Louis. Their headquarters are at Willard's. The Chicago representatives have been here for some time. The interests of the windy city will be looked after by Ex-First Assistant Postmaster General Allen E. Stevenson. The executive committee of the Washington promoters met last night but no definite action was taken. It is intended to give a dinner to the delegates to the Pan—American Congress early in December, probably about the 10th, as on that date the governors of the states interested in the Philadelphia centenary will all be in Washington.

[illegible] our boys, which was appreciated by our [illegible] and I have since been requested to complete the work by addressing words of advice to the girls. The subject is important, the questions extremely delicate and the ladies exquisitively sensitive. To say the right things in the proper manner is a difficulty of some moment.

I know that human nature delights in praise and flattery; following our natural propensities we would cover with a mantle all our faults and imperfections and encourage a certain spirit of indifference which begets spiritual blindness. As christians we must acknowledge that we are what we are in the sight of God and nothmore, nothing less—with this conviction man's esteem will not elevate us nor man's censure debase us, God alone must be our judge. In spiritual matters, if we select our ideal of perfection on earth, our model of virtue, our standard of morality we will ever entertain a lofty opinion of ourselves because we are quite passable and acceptable when compared with many of our fellowmen; but when we establish a comparison between our Divine Master and our souls, we then understand how far we are from perfection and what constant efforts are required in order to become in some things like unto our heavenly model.

Young ladies know that the desire of Christ is their sanctification; that he loves the innocent and pure because of such is the Kingdom of Heaven; that he teaches us to avoid evil and do good, to pluck out the eye or to cut off the arm that scandalize us; that he who loves the danger shall perish in it and that the reward of virtue is exceedingly great in eternity.

Now, young girls having christian virtues to practice, encounter many difficulties, walk on dangerous ground, are subject to many temptations and are compelled to wage continual warfare against satan, the world and themselves in order to preserve virtue with peace of mind and heart. It is my conviction that in a village like Fulton, as a general rule, the standard of morality may be measured by the virtue and ordinary conduct of our young girls; if the ladies were better, the boys would not be as bad as they are; if young girls did not constitute themselves a continual occasion of sin for others, society would be better. Young ladies, read and be wise, behold the dangers from which you must preserve yourselves.

1st. Ir-religion. Ladies would not curse nor swear nor openly use obscene language, but they live without religious ideas, without religious principals, without religious motives, without piety. Our schools do not and cannot teach religion; our churches are not frequented as they should be; our Sunday schools do not gather in the very ones whose souls stand most in need of enlightenment and formation; our homes are not all sanctuaries of virtue and true religion, what can a young girl do? She must take interest in her own spiritual welfare, seek instruction and ask God's assistance; she must request the advice of wise and experienced persons, read good books and choose the best company.

2nd. Levity and Pride. Young girls are often placed in the balance of serious-mindedness and are found wanting; they see the bright side of their youthful days and imagine that roses without thorns will line their path through life; they leave serious thoughts for to-morrow but when to-morrow comes it is too late, they weep their folly. Young girls are too proud, haughty, conceited. There is a noble christian pride which lends dignity to every lady and gives tone to her conversation and manner, this pride is a part of religion, but that empty silly, presumptuous pride which moves to and fro on the street like the waves of the sea; which prompts nods of the head, evolutions and contortions all saying in their imbecile way: "Am I not just lovely." "How I attract attention." "Did you see him smile as I passed." All creation is but an atom in comparison with the proud young girl; her heart expands at one word of insincere flattery, one approving smile sends joy thrilling through her soul, she lives not for God but for her own dear little conceited self. What a world of misery if all the ladies were the slaves of that root of all evil, pride. In young girls we admire thoughtfulness and humility.

3rd. Novel Reading. Young girls inflame their imagination with the stories of adventure and love which abound in every city and village. They read not to be instructed but to become sentimental; they exult in sensations; they laugh at the mishaps of lovers, weep with an unfortunate heroine, applaud the chivalry of a gallant young man and fan the flame of passion by spending hours perusing or devouring the evil pages of the dangerous if not inquitous novel. Why do we find so many young girls useless at home, irritable in society, melancholy and displeased? Simply because they do not see the described happiness, depicted scenes of pleasure realized; they with their novels were journeying in an ideal world and their fancy can no longer be satisfied with this matter-of-fact home on earth. Woe to the young man who selects as a partner for life the novel reader; he will be his own housekeeper, sweep his own floor and wipe away superfluous tears because he is afflicted with a being he calls his wife who is neither useful nor ornamental. Boys, beware of the novel reader, she will make life a burden and death sweet to any man. Parents, burn dangerous novels and allow in the hands of your daughters nothing but good books and papers.

4th. Immodesty in Dress. Young [illegible] that the best [illegible] that by which she loses her dignity and deserves ridicule by donning the appearance of a dime fashion doll. Our kid glove society and leaders in high social circles have yet many things to learn before receiving a diploma for true christian modesty and ladylike demeanor. Young girls dress in such a way as to appear sensible and never sacrifice the health or strength of the body or the beauty of the soul to the artifices of fashion or the caprice of our stylish leaders.

Flirtation. America is par excellence the country of flirts and our young girls graduate very early in that school of flirtation. The meaning of the word flirt is "a foolish thing" "a piece of folly", "frivolity," "giddiness" and a young girl who flirts is all that and much more, unfortunately. See the flirt as she glides along the street; the toss of the head, the movement of the eyes, the waving of the hand, the sound of the feet the conventional language of the handkerchief or glove, all is the stage scene of every day life. All she desires to know is this: When to please, how to please, whom to please, where to please and how to catch the one she wishes to please. She flirts with everybody, and why? Just to pass the time; and what is generally the practical result: Home disgraced, virtue lost never to be recovered, honor wallowing in the mire and religion brought into discredit. Who is to blame? The girls and their mothers. A girl who leaves her home either during the daytime or in the evening and spends some time endeavoring to attract the attention of men on the street, whoever she may be, whether a hard-working girl or a member of a rich and aristocratic family, she is simply out advertising her virtue for sale and when we see these girls flirting we are justified in considering them as suspicious characters and as persons of shady reputation; if not already plunged in vice, they are on the verge of moral ruin and spiritual death; if by artificial means, they conceal their dishonor they cannot deceive God who sounds the deepest recesses of our hearts and marks every pulsation in the book of His remembrance for the day of judgment.

Girls who flirt should be discountenanced by respectable society; they flirt with strange men, with passing railroad employes, with gay drummers, uniformed knights or any being who has the appearance of a man. They do not care whether or not the man is married. He may have a half dozen wives somewhere but no matter he is "just too lovely for anything" and besides "it will make the other girls so jealous to see me with such a nice looking man." These men do not care for your beauty nor your family; they would not walk with you in a village where they are known; they are simply many of them varnished scoundrels, and the vilest of polished monsters. They come here with shows and the girls are all crazy. Wild, foolish flirts, it would be better for you to be a slave, a drudge all your lifetime; to earn your honest bread at the sweat of your brow than to expose your souls to the danger of destruction by your own indiscretion and imprudence. No girl is ever insulted but the one who by her manners or conversation induce others to believe that she is of easy virtue; those who are become well known exceptions and are not afraid to give the alarm immediately and protect themselves from danger. There are married women who practice flirtation. Of such I have simply to remark that the vilest wretch, the most despisable monster, the most disreputable being on the face of the earth is a faithless wife and mother and God pity the husband and home where the evil one has such power and influence.

Young girls flirt and parents are astonished, amazed, scandaliz ed when misfortune visits their family, why do parents not understand that their children are prone to evil and vigilance is required on their part to save their offspring from danger. It is easier to bring the dead back to life again than to preserve purity in the heart of a young girl who seeks the occasion of sin. We have plenty of instances in our daily papers. Oswego has had examples and I never remember reading a more sensible or serious editorial on the essence of true christian morality than one published in the Palladium at the time of the Crotty sensation. No moralist could have more clearly depicted the dangers besetting the life of young girls; the imprudence of indiscreet flirts; the blindness of mothers. The remedies suggested for that great evil of flirting were thoroughly practical and the entire article should have been republished in every paper in the county. The men are not entirely to blame but the girls who accompany them to hotels and on dark streets etc., they are the criminals. Some Oswego lady wrote a letter exonerating interested parties and defending the "innocent creature." That is all "gushing sentimentality" and "scribbler's bosh." A determined and habitual flirt who rambles about "mashing" is an impure well-dressed she-devil seeking whom she may devour cost what it may. I would prefer to have in a village one hundred inveterate drunkards, swearing, cussing, disgusting drunkards than one of those airy, deep-eyed, foul-hearted, gaudy and evil-minded flirts who are just too nice and too smart for anything. Good men and respectable boys never think of taking them as wives. No—let them spend their lives in the street and bear upon their brow the stamp of the abandoned, outcast, unfit for human society. And when I pen these words I do not address them to the lost ones of Fulton but to our young girls, school girls and poor laboring girls, rich and poor, learned and ignorant, who flirt on the streets of our villages. Let them take the warning and avoid the punishment.

Youthful courtships and street walking [illegible] busy [illegible] boys who are [illegible] who depend [illegible] for food and clothing [illegible] care and [illegible] the air they breathe [illegible] court the [illegible] they would [illegible] a loaf of bread to save their youthful husband from starvation. They walk together day after day; the presence of a third party is obnoxious; their silly, thrashy sentiments gushing forth in honeyed words which often make them blush for shame when read in a court room. The young man whispers volumes of sweet lies to her attentive ear and, infatuated creature, she believes him, he is so gentlemanly and polite. Those little children in long dresses should be taken home in the early evening by an officer or some kind friend and a sound thrashing would be a suitable prelude to a solid rest.

It used to be the belief that a lady would not be considered an elderly maiden or old maid until up in the thirties but now times and customs have changed and a lady who blushingly counts up her seventeen summers and has not kept "regular company" for at least three years is a rusty old maid and begins to despair. From these young, inconsiderate, ill-matched marriages spring quarrels, separations, divorces, scandals of every color. Parents, please remember the following truths:

1st. Our boys who are as yet unable to take care of one cannot hope to take good care of your daughters in the near future.

2nd. It is not christian love but passion which prompts them to keep company and prompts your daughters to seek their constant company.

3rd. No christian mother would confide the care of her daughter during any length of time out of her sight or without other company to any young man were he an angel in human form without the certainty that her child's virtue is protected.

4th. No mother will allow frequent visits in darkoned parlors or long walks on gloomy streets; she will not tolerate night walking without necessity nor listen to the plausible excuses and sugar coated pretexts alleged by her daughter's "lovely fellow."

5th. Young girls may meet earnest friends in this world but none so true to their interests as their mother and when a girl keeps in her heart secrets which she refuses to reveal to a good christian mother, she is not far from iniquity if not already advanced in the broad road to perdition; a mother is and always will be in many things, a daughter's most competent adviser.

6th. No young people should ever be allowed to keep constant company with any other view than matrimony and girls whose only object is to see how many they can catch and laugh at should be sent to a protectory. When a girl buys a dress or a hat she desires the very best material—when she wants a husband she does not seem to care what kind of goods she is purchasing, second-hand, mortgaged, gamblers, drunkards, anything in the shape of a man is acceptable.

7th. Let all mothers do more than instruct their daughters, let them educate them, train them, mould their character, bequeath to them a legacy of virtue, of good example, of christian energy and true womanly dignity.

I hope that the remarks I have made will be received in the same christian spirit in which they are written. We have plenty of most excellent christian young ladies in our towns who are exemplary in several respects and to those I simply say; Persevere unto the end and your reward will be great in heaven and your happiness will be even great on earth; to all others I say: If the shoe fits you put it on and wear it but do not take offence at the truth; do not become angry at the writer, but at your own faults, and centre all your indignation against them that we may be able to rely on the generations of truly noble christian women who are an honor to their country and the glory of religion. May the time soon come when we will hear of a law suit in which there will be "no woman in the case."

A THANKSGIVING ROMANCE.

'TWAS after dinner, on the day
Made famous by good living;
They broke the wish bone, half in play,
In honor of Thanksgiving.

Kind fate, that favors those who dare—
By Cupid never daunted—
Allotted him the larger share—
The part that she had wanted.

Her pretty lips set in a pout,
She sighed: "Ah me, I'm fated!
But tell me what you thought about?
Your wish you haven't stated."

"Alas!" he cried, "it's been declared
That when the bone is broken,
The winner's wish must not be shared,
It must remain unspoken.

"This fatal rule demands that I
The secret shall refuse you;
Yet if I'm mum (he heaved a sigh)
The chances are I'll lose you.

"Oh, cruel fate! what shall I do?
(His hand began to tremble.)
The fact is that—I—wished—for—you.
Why should I, love, dissemble?"

The maid replied, her head bowed low,
Half hiding Cupid's traces:
"Regarding rules, there are, you know,
Exceptions in all cases."

CLOTHING.

As there isn't any patent on good clothing, doesn't it seem somewhat strange that there shouldn't be more of it! It strikes us as rather queer that the poor clothing should predominate to such an unconscionable extent as it does; for, though less at the time money is made out of the good than out of the poor, yet the come-again customers much more than strikes the balance in favor of the good. There are, of course, other manipulators of the good besides ourselves; but we must admit that the great bulk of the Ready-made is very far from being "up to the mark." And such being the case, it's a sad commentary on humanity's intelligence that folk's should ever be silly enough to buy any clothing of the "sloppy" kind that is advertised so extensively nowadays.

He Still Lives.

We are nearly through speculating on whether the Rev. C. Hudson Smith formerly of Fulton is alive or dead, and are disposed to give our readers hereafter reports as they come over the associated press wires:

Boston, Nov. 20.—The Rev. F. Campbell, brother-in-law of the Rev. C. Hudson Smith, the missing pastor of the Pilgrim Baptist church, was seen to-day concerning the published dispatch from San Francisco saying that Mr. Smith was about to sail thence for China in company with Miss Williametto Carlisle. Mr. Campbell said that he had just brought himself to the point of believing that Mr. Smith was dead, when the story reached him. He was prepared to believe that it was only a newspaper report without any foundation; in fact, should it prove true, he should take steps to have Mr. Smith sent home and placed under the restraint befitting his irresponsible condition. Mr. Smith, if alive, is beyond a doubt insane. Mr. Smith was a high-minded, noble man, who adored his wife and had ever been a devoted and loving husband.

San Francisco, Nov. 21.—Rev. C. Hudson Smith is here in company with Miss Williametto Carlisle, a former inmate of a disreputable house. It was their intention to sail for China to-day, but Smith says his plans have been changed. He regrets having returned to Boston after his first visit here, and when he left the second time he says he turned his back on friends and church for good and will no longer be known as Charles Hudson Smith. He intends to leave the United States, but is undecided where he will go. He said he left home because his wife was too spiritual, his mother-in-law unconquerable and he felt that he was fitted for a more worldly calling than that of ministry. The woman with him is a pretty Mexican of 20 years. She says she loved Smith, would marry him and would go with him to the end of the world. The ex-minister has lavished nearly all his money and jewels on her. He now has about $500, and on this the pair will start off together. Chief Crowley will not interfere in the case. The Chief believes the man to be perfectly sane and says he will not detain him without a warrant.

Reduced Rates for California Excursion Tickets.

The New York, Ontario & Western Railway Co. announce that for the season of 1889-90 they will sell excursion tickets from all stations to San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego and Portland, Oregon, at greatly reduced rates from those quoted in former years.

These tickets will be good for six months from date of sale and will allow passengers to stop over at pleasure west of Kansas City, Omaha, etc.

Holders of tickets reading to California points can obtain return tickets via the Oregon Railway & Navigation Co's. steamer or Southern Pacific Co's. all rail route to Portland, thence via. the Northern Pacific, by the payment of a small additional sum.

The tickets issued on these reduced rates entitle passengers to all the accommodations and privileges of regular first class tickets.

We bought at a forced sale in New York a lot of Wm. Rogers & Son's Silver Plated Ware. Our customers shall have the benefit. 85c for Tea Spoons. Buy now before they are all gone. Mrs. J. C. Tucker & Co.

Connell & Patterson will pay 7cts. a knot for good quality Farmer's Yarn.

To Our Subscribers.

The special announcement which appeared in our columns some time since, announcing a special arrangement with Dr. B. J. Kendall Co., of Enosburgh Falls, Vt., publishers of "A Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases," whereby our subscribers were enabled to obtain a copy of that valuable work free by sending their address to B. J. Kendall & Co., (and enclosing two-cent stamp for mailing same) is renewed for a limited period. We trust all will avail themselves of the opportunity of obtaining this valuable work. To every lover of the Horse it is indispensable, as it treats in a simple manner all the diseases which afflict this noble animal. Its [illegible] sale throughout the United States and Canada [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] will [illegible]

Full cream cheese brought 10 cents and skims 8½c at the Fulton cheese market Monday night. The secretary in his report does not mention the number that were sold.

Dr. D. E. Lake will talk next Sunday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. rooms on "Social and Personal Purity." Young men are especially invited to attend.

The annual election of officers of the Woman's Relief Corps will occur next Monday evening. All members are earnestly requested to be present.
Mary E. Hancock, Pres.

Zion church social last Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Messenger was well attended. Refreshments were served, some novel sports entered into and a good time had generally.

Rev. W. Dempster Chase was under the doctor's care last week. Sunday morning he conducted the services in his church giving a short sermon. In the evening there were no services.

Iron for the new fire bell tower has been purchased, but owing to the lateness of the season it will not be put up until Spring. Capt. H. H. Kendrick has the contrret for constructing the same.

Next Sunday is Advent Sunday At Zion church appropriate services and discourses will be held. Also every Sunday morning and evening at usual hours and every Friday evening at 7:30.

It is seldom indeed that "scalpers" have an opportunity to get in their work at Fulton. We understand however that they are getting there on the Carnival, having purchased some desirable 50 cent seats which they are selling at 75 cents.

H. C. Tanner of Oswego has been made stenographer to the Pan-American Congress. By a system of his own he takes Spanish, although he is not a Spanish scholar. His first day's work with the Congress was a success. He will be paid $15,000 for his work.

The A. O. U. W. gave an interesting entertainment in their hall at Oswego Falls last Friday evening. Among the Fultonians that took part were a choir from the school, a quartet composed of Messrs. Gilbert, Cooper, Hoff and Highriter, and several recitations excellently given by Geo. P. Saunders.

Two hundred persons paid admission fees Sunday evening at East Syracuse to witness a seance. One of the mediums skipped away with the cash box and the other two were arrested after the audience had waited over an hour for the spiritualistic demonstrations. These were doubtless the same mediums that duped a Fulton audience the Sunday evening before.

Police Justice Sharp discovered that he had not tied the knot tight enough when he made his maiden effort and married Charles Worden, the farmer, and Emma Whipple, the school girl, Friday. Sunday he hunted up the couple and brought them to town where by Police Justice H. Hulett they were married a second time. A bold elopement, a stern but outwitted parent and two marriage ceremonies are the extent so far of the episode.

Through a misunderstanding in regard to date Dr. C. J. Little of Syracuse did not appear last Friday evening at the opera house to speak on "Napoleon Bonaparte." A large audience was there and they were dismissed by Mr. F. E. Bacon about 8:20 and their tickets returned. By a mistake somewhere Dr. Little had the date on his memorandum Friday Nov. 29. The lecture will be given later on, the exact date not yet having been decided upon.

Notice.

We understand that some persons have bought up a number of 50 cent reserved seat tickets for the Carnival and are reselling the same at 75 cents. If true we wish it understood that it is being done without authority or consent of the Pathfinder Boat Club.
Signed by Entertainment Com.

[illegible] lots also run to that owned by John Tyler. Some two years ago Beals, Tyler, and Ball who then owned the Poole property, jointly had it surveyed by the late Gordon Ball and a temporary fence placed where Ball decided the line was. This was never satisfactory to Mr. Beals who considered that the line should be some four feet south. There has been talk of making a new survey for some time, as Beals is satisfied in his own mind that he is right in his claims. None has been made, however, and the fence on the line decided by Ball being in a dilapidated condition Beals with two workmen started Thursday last to construct a new one on what he considered the proper line. Poole was notified by his wife of what the workmen were doing and went to the scene. He ejected one of the workmen from the place where he was digging and reached down to pull away the line that had been stretched. This enraged Beals who was standing by and he went for Poole with a hatchet which he had in his hand, striking him twice with it on the arm. Poole arrested him and took him down town. At the N. Y. O. & W. depot he turned him over to officer O'Brien. He then went to Police Justice Sharp and swore out a warrant charging Beals with assault with a deadly weapon. On Friday Beals, through his counsel S. B. Mead, waived examination and was held on $1,000 bail to await the action of the grand jury. Joel Palmer and Charles Wilkinson went on Mr. Beals' bond. The matter will probably be settled.

Another Boom for Fulton.

The Hunter-Comstock Arms Co., of this village on Saturday last purchased the Smith Gun Works, of Syracuse. All the machinery there used is being packed preparatory to moving to the factory here. All the mechanics employed—ninety in number, with their families, will move to Fulton at once. The L. C. Smith gun has a world-wide reputation and this being manufactured in connection with the Comstock guns will make one of the strongest combinations of any concern in the business. Mr. Smith who disposes of his gun business to the Hunter-Comstock Co. will concentrate all his business to the manufacture of the celebrated "Premier Type Writer" which has an exceedingly large sale and is one of the best in the market. Orders on hand for the guns which he manufactured but which will hereafter be manufactured here will take over three months to fill and they are constantly coming in. By the first of January guns will be turned out from the Works here.

On Thursday last Ernest George was taken to the insane asylum at Utica by Supt. H. V. Spencer. This step was taken under the advice of Dr. N. F. Hall, who discovered the mental condition of his patient and after an examination had been made in which other physicians were called in council. Mr. George contracted the morphine habit several years ago as nearly as can be ascertained and being in poor health he doubtless found that it alleviated pain and continued its use unknown to his friends until he was powerless to stop it. For some time past his actions have indicated that he was not in his right mind. When it was discovered that he was addicted to morphine eating his erratic and strange conduct was explained. It is hoped that in six months he will be cured of the terrible habit that has nearly wrecked his mental powers. The sympathy of all goes out to his widowed mother and the estimable young lady to whom he was to have been married two weeks ago.

John Coleman, an inmate of the Mexico insane asylum, has received a pension of $72 a month, and $11,000 back pay. He is reported too crazy to appreciate the fact that he has received so much "hard cash."

Some 125 employes were laid off at the R. & O. Mills last week. This indicates that there is no great rush at the factory just at present, but rumors that the factory is to shut down have no foundation, we are informed by officials.

A large number listened to S. M. Spedon's "Chalk Talks" last evening and witnessed the drawings of a very clever artist. The drawings that he made last evening will be placed one a day in the show window of F. E. Goodjon's store.

The lecture that was to have been given a week ago at Grace Mission Chapel was postponed on account of the storm. It will be given next Monday evening, when George Ward and James Printy will give addresses. N. H. Gilbert will sing and Miss Mable Lester will give a recitation.

Rev. B. Brunning is giving a series of Sunday evening sermons. Next Sunday evening Dec. 1st. He has announced to preach on the "Dual God" (double God) of the Old Testament and the Two-One God of the New Testament. The real question is "Did Man make God in his own Image, or Did God make Man in His?" Go and hear.

The ladies of the Baptist church will have a sale of work, a week from to-day, Wednesday, December 4th. The sale to be during the afternoon and evening, in the rooms above Rosenbloom's clothing store—the rooms lately occupied by Mead, Stranahan & Spencer. Supper will be served from five o'clock until late in the evening. Supper 25 cents. The bill of fare to include chicken pie, oysters, turkey and other dainties. Come and bring your friends with you.

Kabo, Kabo, Kabo—that sounds like an African name.

It means a corset "bone" that can't be broken—if it can't be broken, it doesn't stick into you—so it means a "bone" of comfort, not of contention.

It means a corset "bone" that doesn't kink—if it doesn't kink, the corset can't roll up in the middle as corsets are apt to do—so it means a "bone" that stays where you put it.

It isn't a "bone" at all, but Kabo, Kabo, Kabo; and Kabo means a corset you wear a week or two or three, till you make up your mind about it, and then come back to us and get your money, if you'd rather have money than Kabo.

Worth Five Dollars a Box.

GLOBE PILLS.

Globe Pills Globe Pills Globe Pills Globe Pills Globe Pills Globe Pills Globe Pills Globe Pills Globe Pills Globe Pills

Are admitted by thousands to be worth Five Dollars a Box for Nervous and Bilious disorders, such as wind and pain in the stomach, sick headache, giddiness, fullness and swelling after meals, dizziness and drowsiness, cold chills, flushings of heat, loss of appetite, shortness of breath, costiveness, blotches on skin, disturbed sleep, frightful dreams, and all nervous and trembling sensations, &c. Every sufferer is earnestly invited to try one box of these Pills and they will be acknowledged to be Worth Five Dollars a Box.

For females of all ages these Pills are invaluable, as a few doses of them carry off all humors, and bring about all that is required. No female should be without them. There is no medicine to be found to equal the GLOBE PILLS for removing any obstruction or irregularity of the system. If taken according to the directions given with each box, they will soon restore females of all ages to sound and robust health.

For a weak stomach, impaired digestion, and all disorders of the liver, they act like "MAGIC," and a few doses will be found to work wonders upon the most important organs in the human machine. They strengthen the whole muscular system, restore the long-lost complexion, bring back the keen edge of appetite and arouse to action with the ROSEBUD of health the whole physical energy of the human frame. These are the "FACTS" admitted by thousands, embracing all classes of society, and one of the best guarantees to the nervous and debilitated is that the GLOBE PILLS have the largest sale of any medicine in the world.

Sold at retail by all druggists. In boxes, price 25c. per box. If these Pills cannot be obtained from your druggist, they will be sent by mail on receipt of price. Mention this paper.

Board of Trustees' Proceedings.

Fulton, N. Y., Nov. 20th, 1889.

Board met pursuant to adjournment.

Present, President Wilson and Trustees Rice, Weaver, Johnson, Patterson and Kellogg.

On motion Trustee Rice was appointed Clerk pro tem.

Trustee Nichols came in.

Minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

The following bills were reported correct by the finance committee and clerk directed to draw orders for the same on proper funds.

C. Weaver, Street Commissioner .... $[illegible]
P. O'Brien, Services to Bd. of Health 1.00

Trustee Weaver, to whom was referred the matter of the sluice on First Street, near D. E. [illegible] planing mill reported that he had examined the place and desired that the full Board examine it also before any work be done.

On motion of Trustee Kellogg, the full Board agreed to examine the matter on November 21st, at 9 o'clock a. m.

Mr. H. H. Kendrick appeared before the Board and stated that he had procured the iron for the new Bell Tower, but that he was unable to put same up this fall, on account of the lateness of the season. He asked that the board advance money enough to pay for the iron, and store the same [illegible]

Hens, if properly kept, are a source of profit and comfort to the owner.

Don't water your plants too often and give them too much.

The egg contains almost all the constituents of the human body, and hence the hen must have a variety of food to construct it.

The men who make the most money from farming are not the ones who work the hardest or the most hours, but those who manage with the greatest wisdom.

There is less risk of disease with ducks than with any other fowl. It pays to have a few in every family's poultry yard.

The difficulty when cream will not raise, in nine cases out of ten is the temperature. Every butter maker should use a thermometer.

Weeds thrive best on farms whose owners spend most time in towns or in the scramble of politics. They are not so fond of the society of the industrious and thrifty.

Sheep digest their food more thoroughly than any other domestic animals, consequently sheep manure is one of the best of animal manures. Lands pastured by sheep increase in fertility.

In Virginia the bulk of the grain is harvested without binding. Farmers of that State claim that it saves labor both in harvesting and threshing, and yields equally well as by the old method of straw bands.

Pigs are large consumers of food as compared with their weight, but when penned up for fattening they expend only a small proportion of it in keeping up animal heat, consequently they increase rapidly in flesh and fat and are considered economical meat producers.

According to the Commissioner of Agriculture, the poultry products of the United States the last year had a farm value of at least $200,000,000, and no less than 16,000,000 were imported at a first cost of over 15 cents per doz. while the average annual value of such importation during the past four years has been $2,216,326.

Fall Care of Dairy Stock.

There is no season of the year in which proper care of dairy or any other stock has a more telling effect than in the Fall. Animals are liable to suffer from two sources. One is short, frost bitten, and innutritious feed, and the other is cold rains and frosts, which often chill them to the marrow, not only reducing flesh but making them rheumatic and stiff. Suffering from either source is a poor preparation for going into Winter quarters. It weakens the system and impairs the natural powers of resistance to cold, which it would otherwise have if properly nourished and sheltered during the changing temperature of the Fall season. Men get on their thick clothing and overcoats long before the regular Winter season sets in, and they need them, too. So animals need shelter and warmth at this chilly season, and they must have them or they will not maintain that perfect health and go through the Winter in that confortable, thriving condition that is so desirable.

Horses in Dark Stables.

The pupil of a horse's eye is enlarged by being kept in a dark stable; he has a harness put on him and is suddenly brought out into glaring sunlight, which contracts the pupil so suddenly as to cause extreme pain. By persevering in this very foolish and injudicious, as well as cruel, practice, the nerve of the eye becomes impaired, and if continued long enough loss of sight will ensue. To see how painful it is to face a bright light after having been in the dark, take a walk some dark night for a short time till the eyes become used to the darkness, then drop suddenly into some well lighted room, and you will scarcely be able to see a few moments in the sudden light. You know how painful it is to yourself, then why have your horses repeatedly bear such unnecessary pain? asks Field and Farm.

Miss Jones—How good of you doctor, to come to talk with me.

Doctor—Oh, not at all. I have listened to so much clever talk this evening that it will be quite a relief and a rest to listen to you, Miss Jones, I assure you.—Glasgow Citizen.

Scribbler—When is that review of my novel coming out, Scather?

Scather (professional critic)—Well, to tell the truth, I have not read it yet.

Scribbler—Yet. When I brought the book to you, you assured me that you would lose no time in reading it.

Scather—So I did. Well, I have lost no time in reading it yet.—America.

Bigbee—Why Small, you are just the man I want to see. You have known me for five years now haven't you?

Small—Yes.

"Well, I would like you to accommodate me with a loan of $10."

"Sorry, Bigbee; but I can't."

"Can't! Why not?"

"Because I've known you five years."—Time.

There are [illegible] medical women in the United States whose incomes range from [illegible] to [illegible] a year. The number is increasing every year and the supply of "lady doctors" bids fair to be as great as that of the male physicians. Austria is the only civilized country in the world which prohibits women from entering the medical profession. Russia and China permit them, and the queens of Italy and Roumania employ women physicians. Women are petitioning the Australian government to open the doors of its medical colleges to them, and the empress has been urged to assist.

One of the most successful homeopathic women physicians of the west is Miss Maria McDean, of Helena, Mont., whose income last year was between $11,000 and $12,000. She received her medical education in Boston and Berlin.

Epoch.

The transition from long, lingering and painful sickness to robust health marks an epoch in the life of the individual. Such a remarkable event is treasured in the memory and the agency whereby the good health has been attained is gratefully blessed. Hence it is that so much is heard in praise of Electric Bitters. So many feel they owe their restoration to health, to the use of the Great Alterative and Tonic. If you are troubled with any disease of Kidney, Liver or Stomach, of long or short standing you will surely find relief by use of Electric Bitters. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle at R. E. Phillips' drug store.

DRUNKENNESS—LIQUOR HABIT—In all the World there is but one cure, Dr. Haines' Golden Specific.

It can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it, effecting a speedy or permanent cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. Thousands of drunkards have been cured who have taken the Golden Specific in their coffee without their knowledge, and to-day believe they quit drinking of their own free will. No harmful effect results from its administration. Cures guaranteed. Send for circular and full particulars. Address in confidence, GOLDEN SPECIFIC Co., 185 Race Street, Cincinnati, O. 23y1

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., Feb. 18, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gentlemen:—I have used your Kendall's Spavin Cure for Corns and Scratches and I can say I never saw its equal. I have cured some of the worst cases of Corns that a horse could be subject to. I have been having such good success with your liniment that I would almost as soon a horse would have Corns as not. I have recommended it to several with like success. I had a large Pacer with a white hoof forward and had Corns in both quarters as large as fifty-cent pieces. I cured him in three weeks, so when I sold him to an expert horseman he never knew the horse ever had a Corn. I will give $100.00 for the worst case of Corns that I can't cure with your Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Respectfully yours, PETER MALONEY.

The Proper Caper.

BY FRANK H. WELCH.

The impression is quite general
That people are to day
More highly intellectual
Than in ages passed away;
But the notion is erroneous,
I am steadfastly convinced,
And I think a retrogression
Has been recently evinced.

Now we have some strange conceptions
As to ways of dress and walk,
And the strangeness is extending
Even to ideas and talk;
Things have turned so topsy-turvy
And are changing so of late
That old timers lose their bearings
And can hardly navigate.

There are many funny fancies—
Some are fit to make one laugh—
But the oldest is the fashion
Of the latest photograph;
Formerly they took your picture
Front face, eyes upon a crack,
Nowadays the proper caper
Is to photograph your back.

ORGAN MEN OF NEW YORK

HOW THEY LIVE AND MOVE AND HAVE THEIR BEING.

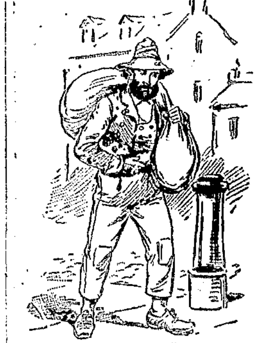
They Have Been Put to Severe Straits by the Ordinance Forbidding Their Turning Their Cranks Upon the Streets. Notes of a Trip Among Them.

A GOOD deal of sympathy for the poorer class of Italians in New York city has been recently excited by the passage of the ordinance by the board of aldermen forbidding the playing of hand organs on the street, and the cause of the organ grinders has been taken up by the New York press in a most pronounced manner.

Previous to the prohibition some 500 organ grinders made New York city their headquarters. Since Nov. 1, on account of the municipal restriction, 200 organ grinders have left the city. Many journeyed to Connecticut. A few are now playing "Johnny Get Your Gun" in South Carolina. Still others have gone as far west as Ohio. As a rule, only the cripples and blind have been left in New York. In nearly every case these tramping musicians have left families behind them, and as the expenses of the organ grinder while on the road will eat up the larger part of his earnings, the outlook for the wives and children is very discouraging.

There are two manufacturers and four repairers of hand organs in New York. To these the hungry and despairing Italians have fled for refuge in their distress. A majority of the perambulating instruments are hired from the manufacturers at the rate of from $4 to $5 a month. The average earnings of a man with an organ is about $7 a week. In the case of cripples or the blind this sum represents the wages of two men—one to carry the instrument and the other to turn the crank. Those who think the work of the organ grinder is easy should feel the weight of the instruments. The lightest of these weighs sixty pounds. In the case of the pianos on wheels the weight is between 600 and 800 pounds.

To handle these instruments on a crowded street is an exceedingly difficult matter. To add to the annoyance of the player the truck and hackman take delight in trying to run them down. In the Fourth and Fifth wards of New York, an organ or piano grinder is known in the vernacular as a "Guinea." They derive this title from the fact that it was formerly the custom of the newly landed Italian emigrants to buy a guinea pig as soon as they landed in this country to fatten for the table. This custom prevailed to such an extent that it was a common sight to see an Italian coming up Broadway with a pig under his arm, and so the boys in the rougher locality came to call them "Guineas."

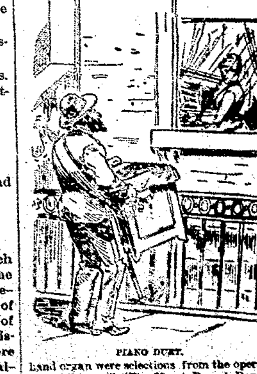


"A GUINEA."

The Italian emigrant takes to playing the organ because he finds it the readiest method of earning a living. Besides this he is naturally musical, and the strains of the organ, however crude, satisfy that passionate desire for harmony which is a part of the Italian nature. No matter how ignorant he may be of the theory of music, his innate knowledge of the accord of sweet sounds teaches him when his instrument is out of tune. His repertoire of tunes is changed usually about once every year. This is done by the insertion of a new cylinder into his instrument.

In making this change in programme the manufacturer puts one tune upon the cylinder, and then sends for the owner of the instrument to let him hear how it sounds. If it suits him, the owner submits the titles of several new songs which he wishes to play. These songs are then incorporated into the instrument. He is guided in the selection of these tunes by the requests of the children whom he meets in his daily rounds. The children buy the ballad sheets containing the freshest songs, learn the words, and wait till the organ grinder comes around in order to learn the tunes. In this way the organ grinder finds out what tunes are popular.

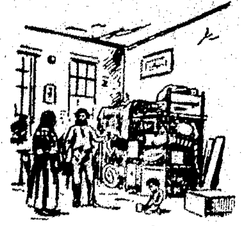
This fact will no doubt account for the marked change in the character of hand organ music within the past three years. Almost every observant person will remember that the airs formerly played on the hand organ were selections from the operas, the "Miserere," "The Heart Bowed Down" and tunes of a like classic character.



PIANO DUET.

"Where Did You Get That Hat?" and "Only a Picture of Her Boy" have usurped the place of those incomparable old-time melodies above alluded to; not, however, because the Italian musician was tired of hearing them, but because the exigencies of his business demanded the change.

It is a curious fact that the perambulating piano finds more favor in the wealthier portions of the city than the organ. In fact, a good instrument often excites the envy of the young lady who owns a $[illegible] piano, and who fails to produce as good music as that turned out by the crank. The organ grinders say that it is a very common [illegible] for the ladies of Fifth [illegible] to try and play a [illegible] in time, in arranging [illegible] itinerant instrument, radical changes from the score are made. The street organ has only twenty-six keys, and the maker often finds it a difficult job to get his harmony and accompaniment in so small a compass. This will account for the departure from the score of a piece in many cases when heard on the hand organ.



ORGAN GRINDERS' HOME.

A person not conversant with the facts would be surprised to see the loving care that an Italian organ grinder takes of his instrument. His care is mainly exercised in guarding against the inroads of croton bugs. A good deal of glue is used in making an organ. The croton bugs get inside the organ and eat out the glue, seriously injuring the instrument. In order to protect his organ from the bugs the organ grinder first wraps the instrument in an oil skin cover, and over this is placed a stout cloth. When in repose the organ is stowed under the bed, where all the valuables are kept. Rent is comparatively high in the crowded tenement districts where these Italians live, some of them paying as much as $8 per month for a single room. In order to find space to accommodate their household gods, in many cases the bed is raised half way to the ceiling. Under the bed the organ is placed after being carefully oiled and overhauled.

Many of the readers of this article will remember the time, not many years ago, when the hand organs were ornamented with little red curtains in the front of the instruments, behind which danced and courtesied a number of small puppets. Among these was one that held out a plate for pennies. The little red curtain is gone now and the puppet no longer holds out the plate, because the children of a younger generation were so much tickled with the performance of this automatons that they gathered in crowds and blocked the sidewalks. The musicians became alarmed at these too popular demonstrations, and for fear of arrest they laid away the figures, presumably forever.

The same holds good with regard to the monkeys. There was a time when a hand-organ was incomplete without the monkey, but some vicious animals among the monkeys bit little children on a few occasions and the city authorities banished the monkeys to the country, where they can occasionally now be seen. New York supported four monkey trainers four years ago. There is not one in the city at the present time. Those monkeys that are taken into the city are never exhibited within the corporate limits of New York.

The monkey is kept when at home in a box especially constructed for him near the stove in cold weather. It receives more attention than the children, and its every want is attended to more carefully than those of an infant. The cost of a "green" monkey is from $15 to $25. To break one of these little animals for hand organ use is an extremely difficult job. When the monkey is properly broken his value is increased to between one hundred and two hundred dollars, according to his proficiency and strength.

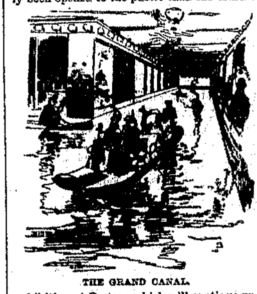
Boston's Marine Exhibition.

No exhibition more picturesque has recently been opened to the public than the Marine exhibition at Boston, which will continue until January. Seven and a half acres of floor space are required whereon to display the work of the various men who make ships and their parts and appurtenances. A noteworthy object is the reproduction in Grand hall of Mr. Edward Burgess' latest yacht, the Quickstep. The grand canal on which are exhibited models of every sort of vessel is attractive, and there is a complete illustration of the fisheries marine of the United States.



THE GRAND CANAL.

Rich Red Men.

The Osage tribe of Indians, whose reservation is between Kansas and the Creek country, are five times as rich as the average of Americans, ten times as rich as the average of Englishmen, and the French and Italians are paupers in comparison. There are among the Osages no penniless people, and none in want, except that insatiable want that always wants more. There are 1,501 of them, according to last year's census. They have in the United States treasury $7,758,694 of their own money, drawing 7 per cent interest. This amounts to a capital of $5,175 apiece for the whole nation—men, women and children.

But besides this they have 1,470,000 acres of land, equal to just about 1,000 acres apiece. This land is mostly fine and arable, and would sell for an average of $10 an acre, or $10,000 for each individual's portion. This makes each individual Osage Indian worth $15,172. Each family possesses $60,000 on an average, and the head of it, if he be industrious and enterprising, can grow $10,000 worth of crops a year on his 4,000 acres of land. He is raised permanently above want and above fear of want.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

New Minister from Venezuela.

The histories of most public men of Central or South America are intimately connected with the histories of revolutions. Such is the case with Gen. N. Bolet-Peraza, the new minister to the United States from Venezuela. He was almost born to an active part in a revolution. At 17 he entered the Federalist army, and spent five years in the work of overthrowing the Centralist government. Then, in [illegible], he helped to drive Blanco from the country, and was made secretary of state by [illegible]

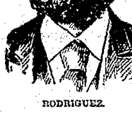
COSTA RICA'S ELECTION.

Don Jose Joaquin Rodriguez Probably Chosen for President.

It is very clear, say the observant members of the American colony at San Jose, with many a sly wink at each other, that Costa Rica is becoming very like the United States, and that possibly she is qualifying to join that vast and prosperous nation before many years shall have passed. Never before in the history of the plucky little republic was known such an electoral lucha as that of the present year. It began last May, when President Soto called upon Vice President or Designado Esquivel to take his place and hold it for the remainder of the term. Senor Esquivel stepped promptly to the helm, and steered affairs bravely for two months. Then trouble began. During those two months his friends had begun to talk of him in connection with the coming election for the presidency, and simultaneously had appeared an opposition candidate in the person of another estimable citizen of San Jose, by name Don Jose Joaquin Rodriguez. This gentleman is older than Senor Esquivel, much wealthier and, in some respects, more conservative. He has been a judge of the higher courts and is beyond doubt a clever lawyer. The Esquivelites, however, began to poke fun at him from the moment he published his letter declaring himself a candidate and closing with the assurance that he was like George Washington. Hot and heavy waxed the contest until the memorable 4th of August, when the Rodriguistas came marching into the city in large bodies and attempted to gain possession of the cuartels. The police were ordered out and charged upon them with drawn swords. The crowds retreated, laughing and joking as if it were the veriest school boys' sport, advanced again, and again had to retreat. It was a day of excitement.

Acting President Esquivel was away at Alajuela until evening. When he was returning some one met him at the train with the cheerful assurance, "La revolucion es un hecho" (It's a fact, there's a revolution). He hastened to the palace and held his ground pluckily until everything was calmed down. Afterwards he recalled President Soto to his post, and returned to private life, giving the very good reason that he did not wish to be in power while a candidate for election. Three months more have passed and the primaries are over. They were held on Sunday, in this city, in Central park before the grand cathedral. A platform was built at each of the four corners, just inside the great iron gates. Some of the more timid families left the city for a fortnight, fearful of a little war. The cannon had an ominous look, seen through the barred windows of the old cuartel, and now and then one saw the vigilant little policemen examining their revolvers, which they carry thrust inside their vests, at some slight peril to their own existences.



RODRIGUEZ.

Notwithstanding the fears of the timid, however, the election was quiet and peaceful, although there was trouble later when President Soto turned his office over to Dr. Duran. Beginning on Sunday, the first of the three days, every pulperia, vinateria, taquilleria, every hotel bar, in short, every place where drinks could be obtained was closed, according to an order previously issued by the chief of police. There was absolutely no drinking and no rowdyism. The polling places were quiet. Two or three policemen were stationed inside and at the entrance. Only one voter could enter at a time. At any moment a lady alone could have passed close to the very door without molestation of word or look.

Appearances now seem to point to the election of Rodriguez. There are 540 presidential electors from all the country. The Rodriguistas claim a majority of 100. The electors meet Dec. 3, and the result will be announced soon after that date.

Before and during the primaries the greatest precautions were taken to prevent trouble.

At Cartago, the old capital, every one, without distinction, was compelled to surrender his firearms. Weapons of every description were forbidden to be carried, even to the smallest pocket knife. The Cartago people were mostly for Rodriguez, while the Josefinos, or San Jose folks, were nearly all for Esquivel. The Rodriguistas wore a tricolor badge; the Esquivelistas put on a tiny scarlet button or carried a scarlet handkerchief with the corner peeping out of their pockets. The ladies wore scarlet flowers, for, it must be observed, the ladies were deeply interested. The prettiest society girl in the capital was not afraid to give you her views on Don Jose's ill advised assertion that "the state has no religion," and the cook in your kitchen had no hesitation in enlightening you while she was beating out your breakfast tortillas, as to Don Ascension's heretic proclivities, and her belief that if elected he means to destroy all the churches and bring down heaven's curse upon the country. The school boys had their wars, and the school girls showed partisan tendencies. Families were divided, marriage engagements were broken, sweethearts made miserable. Of the Soto family, the president, Don Bernardo, was notably impartial, neutral. His father, Don Apolinario de Jesus Soto, the first vice president, is supposed to have been inclined at first toward Rodriguez, but toward the last to have been on the fence. Don Ronalfo, the secretary of war and the navy, was out and out for Rodriguez. As a matter of course, the present government otherwise favored Don Ascension Esquivel, he being of the same party. Don Ascension is, without a doubt, the more progressive of the two, and a man under whose administration Costa Rica will advance as much in one year as it will in twelve if Don Jose Rodriguez is in power.

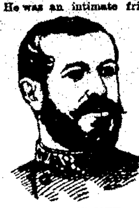
PLAIN JOHN ORTH.

Archduke John No Longer—He Is Now, of His Own Motion, a Private Citizen.

Is there to be a Peter the Great for Austria in the future, as there was many years ago for Russia? One of the Austrian royal family and a cousin of the emperor, the Archduke John, having resigned from the Austrian army and other emoluments, has followed Peter's example and gone into a shipbuilding yard in London.

Now, supposing that the people of Austria should become tired some day of the reign of whoever may succeed the present emperor, and demand a change. The Archduke John, or Johan Orth—he has assumed that name—having become familiar with the industries of the English nation, would be ready to step in and manage a freer government than Austria now has. A sovereign who has been a workman would be a new thing among the crowned heads of Europe, especially one with royal blood in his veins.

The archduke has long been discontented. He was an intimate friend of the Crown Prince Rudolph, who protected him from the enmity of the emperor. While in the army he offended the Prussians by writing an article on bronze cannon, in which he referred contemptuously to them. This caused trouble, since he was of royal blood, and he was relieved of his command. Being a radical, he said many things derogatory to the divine right of kings, and proposed to revolutionize the Austrian military system, incurring the enmity thereby of a field marshal.



ARCHDUKE JOHN.

While he was commanding an army corps the Bulgarians, who were hunting a ruler to take the place of Alexander of Battenberg, hunted him out and offered him the throne. He agreed to accept it without so much as saying by your leave to his imperial cousin, but before he was ready to step into it, his plans were betrayed, and he left hurriedly for London, at the same time advising the commissioners to offer the crown to Prince Ferdinand, of Coburg.

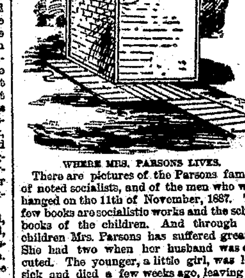
Don John was removed from his command in the army, whereupon he went to Fiume, Italy, to study navigation, and passed an examination, with high honors, as "captain for long voyages." Then he returned to Austria, where he found himself in such bad odor with the emperor that he asked to be retired from the army and to be permitted to resign his titles and emoluments. His request was granted, with the proviso that he retain his orders. He has now gone to work like any other man.

MRS. PARSONS' HOME.

How and Where a Noted Female Anarchist Now Lives.

Mrs. Lucy Parsons, widow of the A. R. Parsons who was hanged two years ago, lives in a queer little cottage in Avondale, a part of Chicago, and is as furious an anarchist as ever.

It is a curious domicile, planned by herself; an architectural anarchy, as it were. "The front door is on the back side," as they say in Tipperary; it is unsymmetrically tall, almost perfectly square, built of pine and stands solitary in the midst of a clay waste. The visitor has to walk nearly around it and under all the windows to get to the door, and once inside he finds the interior even more anarchistic than the exterior. Each separate article of furniture appears like a protest against accepted standards. It is the home of a woman at war with society.



WHERE MRS. PARSONS LIVES.

There are pictures of the Parsons family, of noted socialists, and of the men who were hanged on the 11th of November, 1887. The few books are socialistic works and the school books of the children. And through her children Mrs. Parsons has suffered greatly. She had two when her husband was executed. The younger, a little girl, was long sick and died a few weeks ago, leaving the mother almost heartbroken. The other is a manly, healthy and apparently intelligent boy. Mrs. Parsons is sadly broken, but her devotion to the anarchistic programme is as strong as ever.

In the later years of her husband's life she was among the most active spirits and fluent talkers in the cause. After the anarchists were condemned she raged furiously against society and the courts and caused many painful scenes. She then fell into comparative obscurity, but has lately emerged, breathing fury against capitalists and prophesying that the day of overturning is near at hand. "Fifteen years before freedom came to the slave," she reiterates, "no man hoped to see it in this century; it was apparently most hopeless at the beginning of the war." And so, she prophesies, will it be with the capital and wage system.

London's New Lord Mayor.

Sir Henry Aaron Isaacs, who has assumed the office of lord mayor of London, is the son of the late Mr. Michael Isaacs, and was born in 1830. In 1862 he was elected a common councilor, and in that capacity served as chairman of several committees. In 1883 he was elected alderman for the ward of Portsoken, and he filled the office of sheriff during the Jubilee year, in commemoration of which event he was knighted. Sir Henry is by occupation a fruit broker, and by religion a Jew. He is a Free Mason, a lieutenant of the city, a governor of the Royal hospital, and a member of the Gold and Silver Wyre Drawers' company. In 1849 he married Eleanor Mary, daughter of the late Mr. James Rowland.

Are admitted by thousands to be worth Five Dollars a Box for Nervous and Billious disorders, such as wind and pain in the stomach, sick headache, giddiness, fullness and swelling after meals, dizziness and drowsiness cold chills, flushings of heat, loss of appetite, shortness of breath, costiveness, blotches on skin, disturbed sleep, frightful dreams, and all nervous and trembling sensations, &c. Every sufferer is earnestly invited to try one box of these Pills and they will be acknowledged to be Worth Five Dollars a Box.

For females of all ages these Pills are invaluable, as a few doses of them carry off all humors, and bring about all that is required. No female should be without them. There is no medicine to be found to equal the GLOBE PILLS for removing any obstruction or irregularity of the system. If taken according to the directions given with each box, they will soon restore females of all ages to sound and robust health.

For a weak stomach, impaired digestion, and all disorders of the liver, they act like "MAGIC," and a few doses will be found to work wonders upon the most important organs in the human machine. They strengthen the whole muscular system, restore the long-lost complexion, bring back the keen edge of appetite and arouse to action with the ROSEBUD of health the whole physical energy of the human frame. These are the "FACTS" admitted by thousands, embracing all classes of society, and one of the best guarantees to the nervous and debilitated is that the GLOBE PILLS have the largest sale of any medicine in the world.

Sold at retail by all druggists. In boxes, price 25c. per box. If these Pills cannot be obtained from your druggist, they will be sent by mail on receipt of price. Mention this paper.

THE fifty-first Congress opened at the nations Capitol in Washington on Monday. Two new Senators from the new state of South Dakota and two from the new state of Washington had the oath of office administered to them. Three hundred and twenty-seven answered to the roll call in the House of Representatives and this number selected as speaker Representative Reed of Maine, he recieving 166 votes to 154 for Carlisle.

WHOEVER wrote this got the whole truth down in a nutshell: "If you have a little farm or business, and are out of debt, don't fret or work yourself and good wife into the grave for the sake of making money. You have but one life to live and it is very brief at best. Take a little comfort and pleasure as you go along day by day, and try to do a little good to others. A morbid, insatiate desire to possess the earth, to grab everything in sight, is at the foundation of more misery than any one thing. Wealth alone will never keep your memory green after you are gone—a good life and kind actions will."

Thanksgiving Services.

The union Thanksgiving services were held in the Presbyterian church this year. Rev. W. D. Chase read the scripture lesson, Rev. D. M. Rankin the hymn. Rev. L. S. King offered a prayer and Rev. J. C. Breaker gave the sermon in his usual scholarly manner, taking his text from Ps. XCVI, 8, "Give unto the Lord the glory due unto his name."

The Presbyterian church choir consisting of Messrs. A. Rice, N. H. Gilbert and the Misses Cora Foster and Alice Ferguson, with Mrs. F. A. Emerick at the organ, furnished music for the occasion. Mr. Gilbert in his able manner also rendered a solo entitled "Great Jehovah."

Rev. B. Brunning was hurriedly called to Oswego to day to assist the Universalist pastor there at the funeral of a Mrs. Cole, aged 80. Her husband is 80 also, and but sixteen days younger. They have lived together 58 years of married life. Thus the old must go and the young do, so really in the midst of life we are in death.

The Ladies of the Universalist society will hold their sale and festival at Church's Hall on Tuesday afternoon and evening Dec. 10th. No admission in the afternoon. In the evening an admission fee of 10cts will be charged. There will be good music, vocal and instrumental, by local talent and a pleasing farce by the young people. Supper will be served from five o'clock until eight or later, ice cream will also be served from the beautiful Ice Palace. The public are cordially invited to come and spend a pleasant afternoon and evening.

"An Evening with Hamlet."

This was the announcement to be read on the dainty programs that were offered to the members of the fortnightly club, as they entered the parlor of Mrs. Geo. M. Case on Monday evening last. The work of the club during the past two months has been the study of Hamlet, and the plan for the evening was to review the prominent characters presented in that tragedy.

The ornamentation of the programs was the handiwork of Mrs. Geo. Kellogg.

The music, two fine selections for the piano, was furnished by Mrs. Fred Emerick, and papers upon the following subjects were read: Shakespeare by Mrs. Emens; Queen, Mrs. J. H. Case; Laertes, Miss Eva Case and Horatio by Mrs. French; Hamlet's soliloquy was given by Miss Alice Ferguson; Mrs. Adna More read a chapter on Hamlet, from Dowden; one from Mrs. Jameson on Ophelia, was read by Mrs. Curtis, and the character of Polonius was discussed by Miss Porter. A selection from Littell's Living Age, "Voltaire on Hamlet," was read by Mrs. Abram Emerick, who also gave her thoughts on seeing the play as presented in New York, recently, with Booth as Hamlet, and Modjeska as Ophelia.

The refreshments consisted mainly of a fine dish of "Literary Salad."

Limited Tickets on Railroads.

In the case of Hurlburt vs. The Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg Railroad Company, it was established that railroads have the right to eject a passenger holding a limited ticket, when the contract on the ticket is violated. The plaintiff, in this case, purchased a limited ticket from Utica to Watertown, and stopped off at Remsen; the ticket read "good for continuous passage."

The charge to the jury was in favor of the Railroad Company as to the right to eject plaintiff from the train; and there was no question whatever on this point. There was a conflict of testimony as to the point of ejectment; the witnesses for plaintiff testified that, in the exercise of this right, he was put off a long distance from any dwelling, in a wilderness.

This case and the charge to the jury, make it clear that when a passenger purchases a limited or continuous passage ticket, or a ticket sold for less than regular fare, and refuses to comply with the conditions of the contract of same, or when without a proper ticket refuses to pay fare demanded by a Railroad Company on its trains, that the Company has the right to eject such passenger from its trains.

This case has been watched with considerable interest, as it was expected that it would decide the question as to whether a Railroad Company has the right to eject a passenger holding a limited ticket, when the conditions of the contract are not complied with; and the charge to the jury shows that a Railroad Company has such right; the Judge holding that if the Railroad Company erred at all, it was in ejecting the passenger in the woods, a long distance from any dwelling. Because the plaintiff was not ejected near a house or at a station, the jury awarded him two hundred and fifty dollars ($250.00).

The law is as follows: If any passenger shall refuse to pay his fare, it shall be lawful for the Conductor of the train and the servants of the Corporation to put him, and his baggage, out of the cars, using no unnecessary force, at any usual stopping place or near any dwelling house, as the Conductor shall elect on stopping the train.

OBITUARY.

Wright.—Miss Mary A. Sperry was born in Sterling, Cayuga county, N. Y., Nov. 1st, 1834. At the age of 14 years she came to reside in Volney, settling at or near what is now known as Mt. Pleasant. Her opportunities for mental and moral culture were such as a retired rural section afforded, which she did not fail to improve. Sept. 6th, 1854, she was married with Mr. Wm. B. Wright, youngest son of Joel Wright one of the early settlers of this town. Here they found a home and the first sixteen years of connubial bliss was shared in the midst of familiar scenes and childhood memories. In 1870 Mr. Wright removed with his family to Jersey City, N. J. In their new home they soon saw opportunities for usefulness, and with an enthusiasm befitting the occasion they offered their services as teachers in the Sunday School held in the "Old Bethel Ship" and were most cordially welcomed, and thenceforth until declining years rendered it impracticable Mrs. Wright was "instant in season," walking a distance of two miles from her home, yet was very seldom absent from her Sabbath work. Six years since she made a public profession of religion and united with the North Baptist church in Jersey City and at once became an active worker, cooperating faithfully as circumstances permitted in all the enterprises of the church, until after a brief illness she "ceased to work and live."

Our acquaintance with these friends began Sept 6th, 1879, when as a guest at the "old homestead" at Mt. Pleasant we met them and a large company of their friends who had gathered at this cherished spot to hold a jubilee on the 25th anniversary of their wedded life. Our next meeting was under quite different circumstances. Mrs. Wright died at her home Nov. 21st. and at her request her remains were brought back to rest beside her kindred in the cemetory at Mt. Pleasant. On Sunday Nov. 24, 1889, accompanied by the husband and daughter her casket was taken to the same old home, now the residence of Mrs. Wright widow of Joel Wright Jr., and from thence taken to the church when after appropriate religious services the last sad rite was observed. Mrs. Wright's appreciated friendships were shown by a beautiful display of flowers—a wreath from the "Ladies' Social Circle," a society of several years standing, composed of sixteen members, and Mrs. Wright was the first member deceased. Also a pillow of exquisite beauty from the Woman's F. M. Society, of which she had been treasurer, with the appropriate scripture quotation "Faithful unto Death."

Those nearest and dearest to her were also represented by their floral tribute not inferior to those already mentioned, prominent upon it and in beautiful design appeared "Husband and Daughter." A large gathering at the church of kindred and acquaintances indicated the high esteem cherished for her, "Sorrowing most of all that they would see her face no more."

Mrs. Miranda Ludington died at the home of her daughter Mrs. Edds on Seneca street Friday, Nov. 29, at the gae of 75 years. Funeral services conducted by the Rev. W. D. Chase was held Monday at 10:30 a. m., and the remains taken to Marcellus for interment.

Cora, wife of Jesse R Waugh, aged 18 years, died on Tuesday, Dec. 3. On Friday last she gave birth to a baby girl. Peritonitis followed resulting in her death. This is an exceedingly sad case, the deceased having been married but a little over a year. Funeral will be held from the house of William Waugh on Seneca street to-morrow (Thursday) at 2 p. m.

Mrs. Julia C., wife of George Norton, died suddenly at Oswego Falls Saturday, Nov. 30, under circumstances that raises the question as to whether she received proper medical treatment at the hands of her medical attendant, Dr. Miller. Coroner Drury is taking evidence in the case which has not yet been concluded. Mrs. Norton was 37 years of age. Funeral was held from the Congregational church Tuesday, Rev. J. C. Breaker officiating.

Agnes the 18 months old daugther of Mr. and Mrs. George Johnston died Monday night of congestion of the brain after an illness of only 12 hours. The funeral services were held this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29, 1889.

Thanksgiving Day was observed in Washington with the usual ceremonies. Of course, the day is not here what it is in New England, but still the gathering of families under the old roof tree becomes more customary, from the number of Northern and Western families that have built houses here during the last few years. The idea of a boarding house is incompatible with Thanksgiving; in fact, the real observers of Thanksgiving offer up a prayer of pity for the poor outcasts in boarding houses. Thus so long as Washington remains a city of boarding houses, the blessings of Thanksgiving will be restricted to the few. The boarding house turkey is a nondescript bird and the boarding house mince pie a nightmare.

There was less drinking yesterday than I have noticed on any previous holiday in Washington. In fact the heavy drinking among government clerks is not so general as it was a few years ago, when not one-half the employes could be found at their desks on a day following a holiday. Stricter rules are largely responsible for this. The increased consumption of beer and the correspondingly decreased use of whiskey has also worked his part of the reform.

The President attended divine Service at the Church of the Covenant and later in the day discussed one of those big turkeys the Connecticut farmers spend anxious hours pushing buttered walnuts into, until the fat shakes as they walk. The sky was laden and the air raw and damp as the President stepped into the church, and if he saw anything to be thankful for his sombre face did not show it. Perhaps he was thankful to be alive. The family seated around the White House board later in the day was the largest that has been gathered there in forty years. The only missing figure was that of Russell Harrison.

Secretary Noble and his wife and nieces dined at home and the circle was not enlarged by guests. The Tracys' followed their example, as did the family of Secretary Rusk. Secretary Miller, wife and daughter were the guests of Major Claus. Secretary Windom spent the day in Brooklyn. The Wanamakers' gave a big Thanksgiving party at "Lindenhurst," their country seat.

The Honorable, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, are distinctly unhappy. The local prohibition element asked these gentlemen to restrict in the granting of licenses for the ensuing year the number of saloons as far as possible; out of this suggestion someone evolved the brilliant idea of restricting the number of barrooms in any square to four. Exactly how the sheep should be chosen from the wolves in such cases was not deemed of sufficient importance to furnish an objection to the new rule. The rule was adopted and now the commissioners are trying to enforce it. Among the licenses granted in squares having an excessive number of barrooms, were licenses to places notorious for violations of the law—places that pay no attention to the Sunday and after midnight closing law. Saloon keepers on the same square, who close promptly and keep orderly places, have been ignored. In the emergency the distillers and wholesale dealers of Philadelphia, Baltimore, Louisville, and other cities, have come forward and will endeavor to enlist the co-operation of a sufficient number of Senators to be able to show the new Commissioners that unless they retract the new rule they will fail of confirmation by the Senate. If the Commissioners wish to be the true friends of temperance they will close every place in the city that has been convicted during the past year of violating the law or can now be proved to have violated it. The people will not be hoodwinked by the substitution of any other scheme of reform.

A $250,000 suit for slander would not add a better relish to most men's turkey, but certainly the fact that Samuel Strong had filed such a suit against him on Wednesday did not affect the cheerful spirit of Ben. Butler. The Butler-Strong legal wrangle is a famous one. Gen. Butler brought suit against Mr. Strong several months ago for a considerable sum of money, which he asserted was due him as contingent counsel fees out of the award made to Mr. Strong. The suit had some highly spicy features, among which was the production of a document, purporting to be signed by Gen. Butler, in which he agreed to accept a much smaller sum than that claimed in the suit. Gen. Butler denounced this document as a forgery, and Mr. Strong now sues.

A Word to Invalids.

You are cautioned against the purchase of Whiskies with high-sounding names. In most cases those high-toned brands are used to cover compounds abominable in taste and absolutely injurious in their consequences to the consumer.

My Whiskies have been before the public for over 15 years. They have stood the test thoroughly, having been analyzed by some of the most expert chemists throughout the country, and in every instance their absolute purity is established and highly commended upon. My brand—the plain I. W. HARPER WHISKEY—carried off the highest honors at New Orleans over all Sour Mash Whiskies displayed from the State of Kentucky. Respectfully,

Hop Plasters

A New England Household Remedy.

Universally popular because of real medicinal merit. For the countless pains and aches, soreness or weakness, no matter how caused or how severe, which attack the human body, no remedy in the world is so prompt and thorough in relieving, curing and restoring as the Hop Plaster.

Unsolicited Testimony of thousands of people, and the constantly increasing sale of these plasters, is ample proof of the truth of this assertion.

☞HOP PLASTERS never burn or irritate.

If you suffer apply one now; you'll feel happier to-morrow. Feels good the moment put on.

BUT SEE HERE. Hop Plasters are sold by all medicine dealers. Don't be swindled into taking a substitute or imitation. Signature of the proprietors will be found on the genuine goods.

BROUNSTEIN'S CLOTHING.

As there isn't any patent on good clothing, doesn't it seem somewhat strange, that there shouldn't be more of it! It strikes us as rather queer that the poor clothing should predominate to such an unconscionable extent as it does; for, though less at-the-time money is made out of the good than out of the poor, yet the come-again customers much more than strikes the balance in favor of the good. There are, of course, other manipulators of the good besides ourselves; but we must admit that the great bulk of the Ready-made is very far from being "up to the mark." And such being the case, it's a sad commentary on humanity's intelligence that folk's should ever be silly enough to buy any clothing of the "sloppy" kind that is advertised so extensively nowadays.

The American Agriculturist

BOTH ONE YEAR FOR ONLY $2.50

The American Agriculturist is a National Rural Magazine of 48 pages, with cover. A year's volume has more than 576 pages and over 1,000 illustrations. It is the recognized authority on all matters pertaining to agriculture, and the oldest and most ably edited periodical of its class in the world.

IN ADDITION WE WILL FORWARD

FREE to every subscriber to the above combination sending 15 cents extra for mailing expenses a copy of

THE FARM AND HOUSEHOLD CYCLOPEDIA.

544 Pages! 249 Illustrations!

This book is a complete ready reference library for farmers and housekeepers, being filled with useful facts, hints and suggestions upon all subjects pertaining to rural and domestic affairs, embracing the results of experience and research by scientific and practical men and women in all civilized countries. It contains the cream or substance of more than a dozen ordinary agricultural and household books, and is the only first-class work of the kind ever sold at less than six dollars. It is a book to be consulted every day in any emergency, and to be read at all times with interest and profit. It is such a book as every farmer and housekeeper needs and ought to have, comprising the universal want of a reliable counsellor upon every topic relating to the farm and household. The work is profusely illustrated, and is divided into two general headings, viz., THE FARM and THE HOUSEHOLD, each of which occupies half the book. These are again subdivided into a number of departments, as follows:

Rural Architecture, Fences and Gates, Field Crops, Fertilizers, The Garden, Orchard and Vineyard, Small Fruits, Live Stock, The Poultry Yard, The Dairy, The Apiary, Farm Implements, Around the Farm, Cooking Recipes, Ladies' Fancy Work, Floriculture, The Home Physician, The Toilet, The Laundry, Hints and Helps.

All of the above subjects are fully and ably treated in this valuable book. It is a vast storehouse of useful facts, hints and suggestions of the utmost value to farmers and housekeepers, and no man who has a house and an acre or more of land can afford to be without it.

Remit by postal note, money or express order, check, draft, or by registered letter.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps's has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. [illegible] JAMES EPPS & CO., [illegible]

Now for the Cure.

TO THE EDITOR "TIMES":—

Dear Sir:—Kindly allow me space in your columns for a few words, as for one who thoroughly endorses every word of Father Earley's letter in your last issue, with reference to the conduct and life of our young girls.

But all persons connected with the ministry, will admit, that one of the most knotty problems for solution, is this one of retaining in the Church's Fold, the young persons of both sexes, from the age of 14 to, perhaps, 24.

And certainly, parents have a very great deal to answer for.

But now comes the great crux, viz., What shall be the remedy?

There are certain and numerous persons to-day, of, perhaps, the best intentions, who would totally prohibit almost every social form of (what may be, questionable) pleasure. There is no doubt a certain and great social pleasure to some, to get together in the tavern, and have a chat over the glass and the pipe. And, supposing this is wrong and you remove this evil, as you think it, by force of law, what have you to offer in return for this, to a great many, pleasureable fascination? Also a social pleasure of long standing.

And the same reasoning may be put to the subject of what our young girls think a pleasureable fascination, the which, if we would remove the evils of street walking and flirting, the ogling and over-dressing, &c., &c., must be replaced by something or other equally fascinating and pleasurable, and what, oh what, shall it be?

I, for one, am ready and willing to help all in my power, what remedies, adjudged the best, may be put forward through your valuable columns, or otherwise suggested by older and perhaps wiser heads than mine:

Yours Faithfully,
FRANK A. KIRKE.

Coroner Vowinkel of Oswego was called here Monday morning to inquire into the death of the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Braga of Dexterville, who was found dead in bed Sunday morning. The parents had retired Saturday night and taken the child with them, letting it sleep between them, and in the morning it was dead. The coroner, after hearing the facts of the case, said that an inquest was unnecessary.

Watson Squires, the recently elected Senator of the New State of Washington, is an old Fulton boy, receiving his early education in Falley Seminary. He was made Governor of the Territory by the late Ex-President Arthur. Many of the older Fultonians will remember him well as a boy and young man about the village, and will be pleased to learn of the great esteem in which he is held on the Pacific slope.

Mrs. Wooden gave a drive whist party at her pleasant home on First street last evening in honor of her friend Miss Mills. About forty enjoyed the hospitalities of the occasion. The struggle for supremacy in that fascinating and exciting game of whist was spirited and resulted in Mrs. F. A. Gage and Mrs. T. D. Lewis carrying off the first honors. Mr. G. C. Webb and Mrs. G. S. Piper carried home the "consolation prizes." Refreshments were served and Mr. C. M. Allen and Miss Cora Foster entertained those present with vocal music in the able manner which both are capable of.

Dr. D. E. Lake addressed the Y. M. C. A. meeting Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock on "Social and Personal Purity." A large audience was present. The extent of the social evils of the day was first portrayed and the reasons or causes underlying these evils were named. The permitting of young children to eat highly seasoned food, vicious companions, impure literature, demoralizing stories and gossip and evil thoughts were in turn dwelt upon and their corrupting influences upon our youth clearly shown. Such addresses can not but do good and that too where much good needs and ought to be done.

"Our House is Left Unto Us Desolate."

After weeks of suffering Mrs. Emeline Camp Loomis, widow of the late Lewis E. Loomis, while surrounded by her children, died at her home on Erie street Sunday night about nine o'clock. For more than two weeks before the last hour it was evident that her illness was fatal. Knowing this, those that loved her best could but join with her in wishing that the end would come soon, for every moment of prolonged life was a day of prolonged torture. So keen the love and so intense the suffering that to all of them the worst appeared the best.

In the circle of acquaintances where she was best known, her worth, her patient enduring for others, that amounted to heroism, was fully appreciated. Those who knew her most loved her best. Her life began June 3, 1819, at Winsted, Conn. Her father, Moses Camp, was of Revolutionary stock, and so was her mother, who died about five years ago lacking but two months of her one hundredth birth-day. Miss Camp became Mrs. Loomis Nov. 2, 1842, and soon after came to Fulton for her future home. Here for nearly fifty years she lived and here she reared her five children, three of whom survive her. They are Miss Mary C., who since the death of Mr. Loomis in 1876 has been her mother's constant companion, Mrs. Huldah Richards of St. Louis, Mich., and Mrs. Emma A. Roe of Cincinnati, Ohio.

The funeral occurred this (Wednesday) afternoon at the family residence attended by the Rev. Dr. Rankin of the First Presbyterian church.

Young Mens Christian Association.

We have noticed in the last two or three numbers of the Watchman announcements of gifts to Associations in different cities. H. W. Scoville of Waterbury, Conn., has offered a lot 50 feet front by 100 deep, worth $10,000 on condition that $40,000 be secured inside of the coming year, 1890. The wife of a young member of the association has offered the first $1,000.

The will of the late John Crerar of Chicago contains a bequest of $50,000 to the work for young men in that city, and the late Simeon F. Marsh of Southbridge, Mass., bequeathed the sum of $4,000 for the proposed building there.

In this country alone there are 20 buildings in course of erection on funds being raised for the purpose. When will our turn come? The meeting of last Sunday showed the necessity of more accommodations. The young men of our village are as worthy as the young men of any city.

Dr. Lake in his most excellent address on "Social and Personal Purity" of Sunday last put forth, in clear and pointed remarks, the necessity of better and purer lives. This subject will be taken up again by some other of our physicians and another phase of it dealt with. The rooms were never so crowded before at the young men's meeting, there being 122 present. The topic for next Sunday's meeting is "Deliverance from Bondage" Ex. XIV. 13:31 and Jno. VIII, 36, and will be conducted by our vice-president. It is our desire that every man should feel free to come and join us in this hour of social religious service. Time 4 o'clock. Place Y. M. C. A. parlor. Come.

Married—Monday, Dec. 2, at the residence of Dr. D. E. Lake, Mr. H. Lawrence to Mrs. Elizabeth Wells, both of Fulton. The ceremony was performed at 10 a. m. At 11 a. m. they took the train en route for FonduLac. Wis., stopping at Sandusky, Ohio, They will return in the spring to make Fulton their permanent home. Both parties are well and favorably known, enjoying the respect of the whole community.

David Baldwin's boat loaded with $1,300 worth of lumber is on the dam and all of the wiseacres of Fulton are unable to suggest a practical plan for getting it off. An attempt was made by Mr. Baldwin and his assistants to get it across the river on Thanksgiving afternoon when the current took it, lumber, crew and all down the river until it struck the dam near the electric light station where it is now lodged. The badly frightened captain and crew rowed ashore in a skiff which was with the boat. The water has lowered some six inches but there still remains no practical way of getting it off as yet.

A SENSIBLE PARROT.

We heard of a parrot the other day, which rather astonished a gathering at a tea table. Where did you get that Plush Sacque? enquired one lady of another.

Before an answer could be made, a parrot screamed from view by a curtain, called out, at

H. & A. ROSENBLOOM'S STUPID!

The hostess was profound in her apologies and said she supposed the parrot had heard the phrase go to Rosenbloom's so often that she had incorporated it in her vocabulary. Stupid, was one of her pet expressions. The company was much diverted by the incident and Polly became the pet of the evening.

An Excellent Entertainment.

The Musical Carnival under the auspices of the Pathfinder Boat Club and under the management of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gross, Wednesday and Thursday, of last week was a great success being without question the best local entertainment ever given in Fulton. Much dramatic and musical ability was brought out by local talent that agreeably surprised all that witnessed the performance. It is hard to particularize and give all the credit due when all did so well, but we do not propose to allow such an occasion to pass without going somewhat into details. Some say that the only criticism that they have to offer was that the program was too long but confess that there was no part that they desired to have cut out. Mrs. F. A. Emerick, Miss Bertha Elder and Mrs. Gross were the accompanists and it goes with saying that this part was well taken care of.

"Out of School," "The Roses and the Bees" and "The Drum Major Drill" were parts in which a host of of the younger generation of lads and lasses had an opportunity to display their ability. The marching and evolutions in the last mentioned being particularly well executed. This was preceeded by the playing of a drum corps consisting of Masters Ellis, McCully and Foster which we cannot refrain from making mention of.

"The Flower Dance," "The Gypsy Dance," "The Holland Dance" and "The Fan Drill" were all well executed and reflected credit on Mrs. Gross the instructress and all that took part. Miss Carrie Nichols as leader of the Flower Girls, Mrs. E. V. Lathrop and Mrs. J. H. Case of the Gypsies and Miss Cora Foster of the Holland Girls all made a most favorable impression by their graceful dancing and fine singing and you will never know from us to whom the highest honor should be given. The wild Indian Dance may be worth a column but we can only give it a paragraph. Manager Stephens said that it was so realistic that he unconsciously felt of his head three times during the production the second night to make sure that he had not been scalped. Messrs Nash, Foster and Butler made a hit as the Æsthetic trio and were well supported in it by Miss Mary Johnson and Mrs. Lathrop.

Arthur Emerick and Miss Alice Ferguson, as "Johnnie Jones and his Sister Sue," brought down the house and had an encore if anyone ever did, but Manager Gross would allow none. Mrs. J. H. Case in "The Wandering Minstrels" carried out the difficult role with a skill that was pleasing to everyone. Miss Cora Foster gained favorable comment from her song "A Daisy Maid am I" which was followed by the equally favorable rendering of "When Nellie was Raking the Hay" by Charles Allen and chorus. The high grade musical success of the entertainment was the trio singing of Messrs. Gilbert and Foster and Mrs. Gross in their selection from "The Bohemian Girl" while the dramatic success can be assigned to the selection from "The Mascot" in which Messrs. Case, Lewis, Taylor and Rowland and Misses Foster and Johnson took leading parts.

The Pathfinder Boat Club are indebted to the Fulton and Oswego Falls bands for their presence and the selections played. It will be a long time before another entertainment will be given that will give better satisfaction to a Fulton audience.

The Boat Club cleared about $100 from the entertainments.

Sums of $400, $500 and $750 wanted on first mortgage.

Killed on the Railroad.

John Slaver, aged 44 years, who lives near Ingall's Crossing, was killed about 8 o'clock Saturday evening just south of Fulton by the north bound passenger train on the Ontario & Western railroad. Slaver is reported as having been intoxicated at the time of his death, as he was around town Saturday afternoon considerably under the influence of liquor. He was walking the track on his way home and was seen by the engineer who blew the whistle. He did not seem to pay any attention however until the locomotive was quite close to him when he tried to step aside but was too late. He was struck and knocked many feet, being dead when found. The train was at once stopped and the remains brought to the freight house here.

Coroner Vowinkel of Oswego was notified and reached here Sunday morning. A jury was at once impaneled, who viewed the remains. Dr. E. Frank Marsh made the examination and found the man's hip fractured and back broken, besides superficial injuries. The inquest was then adjourned until Thursday morning at 9 o'clock. Slaver leaves a widow and several children.

British Buying Our Cheese Factories.

The "British gold" about which our politicians harped so much forty years ago, is now being devoted to the purchase of American factories and other sources of wealth. The latest rumor is that an English syndicate is securing options on the purchase of a large number of first class cheese factories in Central and Northern New York—in St. Lawrence, Jefferson, Oswego and Oneida counties. If such a purchase is consummated, the Englishmen will expect to control nearly five hundred cheese factories, and also the make of fancy cheese, in the region named. Commenting upon this rumor a Boston contemporary says that such a scheme might give quite a boom to cheese-making in Vermont and Maine, as the English syndicate buy the New York factories with a view of maintaining a fair price for cheese, and making good dividends on their investment. It adds that New England can make as good butter and cheese as an other farming section in the world. Enterprise, capital, skill and improved facilities are all that is needed for the developement of a most remunerative branch of business on a larger scale than ever before.—N. Y. Witness.

Republican Authority.

The first Congress during President Harrison's Administration will assemble at Washington this winter, and people will probably look to the New York Tribune for official interpretation of the policy of the Republican party at the National capital. Our metropolitan cotemporary is especially identified with a Protective Tariff, pensions for Union veterans, and various other clauses in the Republican creed; and its endorsement, recently, as the official newspaper of the Republican clubs of the country makes it more than ever the principal National authority of the Republican party. Whatever else may be said of The Tribune, every one must concede that the paper is conducted with consummate ability. Its prospectus, printed in another column to-day, shows that it will spend a good deal of money during 1890 for matters that can be read with interest by men of every political faith. The reader is referred to The Tribune's own statement of them for further particulars. Some very eminent and brilliant names appear among its list of contributors. Prizes worth $2,440 are to be given away to those who raise clubs of subscribers, including a free trip to New York and entertainment in the city; and there are a great many new premiums for readers. A 20-page Catalogue has been prepared, which will be sent in return for a two-cent stamp.

About 150 colors are now obtained from coal tar; which has almost entirely supplanted vegetable and animal dyes.

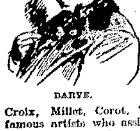
THE BARYE EXHIBITION.

It Has Excited Much Interest in the New York Art World.

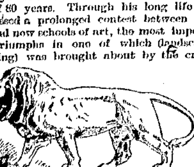
An exhibition in New York, opened for the benefit of the Barye monument fund, is a feast for all who are lovers of art, especially of animals reproduced in art.

Barye was one of those men who strike out in new paths. He found art something which was defined as good or bad, as it accorded with or differed from conventional rules in vogue among so called critics. He studied animals, and gained an accurate knowledge of their structure; consequently, he was able to give the most faithful portraiture of them to be found in modern sculpture. No horses compare with his save some chiseled by the ancients. His "Lion Crushing a Serpent," his "Walking Lion," "Theseus and the Minotaur," are wonders of art. In addition to works of Barye are paintings by Dela Croix, Millet, Corot, Tryon, and other famous artists who assisted in forming a new taste—a taste for realism.

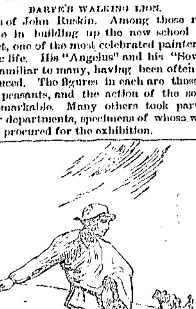


BARYE.

Barye was born in 1795 and died at the age of 80 years. Through his long life he witnessed a prolonged contest between the old and new schools of art, the most important triumphs in one of which (landscape painting) was brought about by the criticisms of John Ruskin. Among those most active in building up the new school was Millet, one of the most celebrated painters of rustic life. His "Angelus" and his "Sower" are familiar to many, having been often reproduced. The figures in each are those of real peasants, and the action of the sower is remarkable. Many others took part in other departments, specimens of whose work were procured for the exhibition.



BARYE'S WALKING LION.



MILLET'S SOWER.

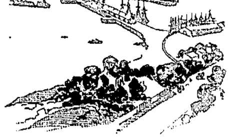
These artists who broke away from a school to which they were condemned by tradition deserve honors, and they are getting them. They opened new paths which every year are leading to still newer paths. Their example has been followed in every department of art, and has led to methods which a century ago would have been regarded as invented by the insane.

A Pointer for the Czar.

A suggestion to the czar: Why not train a number of dogs to scent out the strong, peculiar odors of dynamite, send them ahead of the imperial train to detect, and, by vicious barking, signal to the engineer the dangerous presence of the dynamite. As an additional precaution, another pack of trained dogs can be placed in boxes suspended under the floors of the carriages. They would howl when they smelled dynamite. A system of speaking tubes should connect the dog boxes with the compartments occupied by the suite of the tzar, so that the howling could be transmitted to the engineer, who, in such a case, would put on additional speed and quickly leave the mine behind. But am I true to my nihilism in giving our enemy such valuable (?) suggestions?—Leo Hartman.

Milford Haven.

As a specimen of the way they do things in England The London Graphic gives a picture and a little notice—just a few lines—of Milford docks, which have just been completed at a cost of $5,000,000. They are of special interest because the Great Western railway designs to make that a landing place for a new passenger line to America. And it is an interesting fact that the first steamer to anchor at the new docks—the City of Rome, from New York—landed there 160 "packages of luggage" and 123 passengers belonging to Barnum's show, which is to run this winter at the Olympia, in London.



THE MILFORD DOCKS.

There is a graving dock 700 feet long, and wet docks capable of receiving a dozen great liners at once, besides some miles of quays, and a fast train carries passengers thence to London in six hours. The object of opening this line is to avoid the fogs and difficult navigation of the Irish sea.

An Anecdote of Foote.

Tample Bar relates an anecdote of the comedian Foote in connection with Garrick's Shakespeare jubilee in 1769. During the three days' amusements, of every kind were provided for the crowds who assembled from all parts of the country and from London. The proceedings were closed by an ode on Shakespeare, written and recited by Garrick. On this occasion the success achieved provoked the naturally bitter spirit of "one Foote, a player," as Walpole designated the man otherwise known as the British Aristophanes. Walking with Murphy by the banks of Avon, a well dressed man approached him, anxious to converse with him on the recently concluded performance. "Has the county of Warwick the honor of giving birth to you, sir, as well as to Shakespeare?" asked he. "No," replied the stranger, "I come out of Essex." "Ah, sir," said Foote, remembering how celebrated was that country for calves, "and who drove you?"

Bright's Disease.

A Ten-Year-Old Child Saved After the Failure of Four Physicians.

My little girl, ten years of age, was taken sick in March, 1888, with scarlet fever. When recovering she took a severe cold, which developed Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. Her ankles, feet and eyes were terribly swollen; she had a burning fever, and all the symptoms of an aggravated case of Bright's Disease. Four of our best physicians attended her, but without success, and

Her Life was Despaired of.

But a mother's love and prayers surmount all difficulties, and I determined to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y. This was a last resort, and I hoped, although my little daughter's case was a very severe one, that the Favorite Remedy would do for her what it had done for others whose condition had not been, seemingly, as hopeless. How happy I am that I determined upon this course—for an improvement was at once perceptible. The fever left her—her appetite improved—she gained six pounds in a short time, and one by one the well known and dreaded symptoms of the disease left her. Words fail to express my gratitude, and I cannot too earnestly recommend the Favorite Remedy. It was and is due entirely to the Favorite Remedy, which was the only medicine taken after her case was abandoned by the physicians.

A MARVELOUS RECOVERY.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." Mrs. Ella A. Goff, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

That Piano Next Door.

BY S. C. DODGE.

Will anything stop that piano next door?
Beginning at daylight, till midnight is o'er,
It's hammered and pounded and sung at and banged
By music-mad people who ought to be hanged.

I'm wakened each morn when a school girl begins
To practice the scales till I'm punished for sins;
Then her overgrown sister who sings like a cow,
Keeps up till the noon her ear torturing row.

After dinner that tin pan piano resounds
With a horrible medley of one-finger pounds
From children unruly, from baby and nurse,
Till its racket of discord can hardly be worse.

After supper that family of musical mirth
Torment that piano for all they are worth;
All street organ tunes that a Wagnerite hates,
All tropical songs that such anguish creates,

Are jingled and jangled and warbled and played
Till dogs howl in chorus and cats are afraid.
On Sundays, when decent pianos will rest,
This rattle-box nuisance is doing its best.

The men folks around it, with crazy delight,
Shout camp meeting hymns with a steam-engine's might.
Like fog-horns, like thunder, like animals' roar
Their voices let loose rattle windows and doors,

And then while they take just a moment for breath,
You hear the piano, that stops not for death!
If something don't quelch that piano next door
The folks that torment it will wolter in gore.

HONORABLE SENATORS.

SOME OF THE MEN WHO DO THE HARD WORK OF LAW MAKING.

Analysis of the United States Senator. Curious Parallelism of Successive Careers—Senators Blackburn, Hoar, Hale, Hiscock and Hawley.

In studying the character and composition of the United States senate one should bear in mind that it was at the start a novelty in political creations. The word "senate," of course, has from time immemorial been applied to the highest law making body—the British house of lords, the Athenian councils and even mere collections of oligarchs being so called. Even the grand council of the gods in Homeric verse has been styled the Shining senate of the skies.

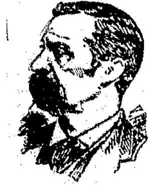
But in every other case there were prerequisites of rank, wealth, birth, etc. In the United States alone, a senate may be composed entirely of men originally in the humblest walks of life. Hence a sketch of the lives of senators is really a sketch of the progress of common men, a showing of the prize from which none are arbitrarily debarred. Hence the never failing popular interest. Hence the fact that each successive new senator is an object of such intense, such human interest. The fact that the Fifty-first congress is now in session arouses this interest anew.

The southern senators did for a while constitute a sort of class, because they practically remained "during good behavior." Now one sees among them many new men, and of these a most interesting figure is that presented by Joseph C. S. Blackburn, of Kentucky. Born Oct. 1, 1838, in Woodford county, Ky., he is now in the prime of life, and bids fair to become a long service senator, though his present term ends in '91. The old Ashland district of Kentucky has been prolific of greatness. When Henry Clay retired, the people turned with wild enthusiasm to John C. Breckenridge. He became vice president at 35. The war ended his career, and Mr. Blackburn succeeded him in the people's affections.



SENATOR BLACKBURN.

After a brilliant term in the house he entered the contest for senator with only twelve votes pledged to him, while his principal opponent had fifty. Yet Mr. Blackburn got there. An enthusiastic Kentuckian thus describes him:

"There is absolutely nothing indirect about the man. He is a star of chivalry.

"His heart's his mouth;
What his breast forges that his tongue must vent,
And being angry does forget that ever
He heard the name of death.

"He is one of the few men who would not smother a sentiment or conceal a thought to gain the much desired end, and in every species of strife he acts upon the suggestion of Montrose:

"He either fears his fate too much,
Or his desert is small,
Who dares not put it to the touch,
And win or lose it all.

"He is worshiped at his home, and one might say his home is the state of Kentucky. His domicile is in the small town of Versailles, in Woodford county, the heart of the blue grass country; and a pointer that shows his popularity is found in the fact that the town council adopted an ordinance during the memorable senatorial struggle last winter that no one should be arrested for being drunk during the twenty-four hours succeeding Blackburn's election. He is the favorite son in the sense that Clay, Webster, Calhoun and Douglass were 'favorites.'"

At the opposite extreme in politics, appearance and general style, yet quite as popular, is the venerable George F. Hoar, of Massachusetts, now in his third senatorial term, which will end in 1895. He is "venerable" by appearance and courtesy, but is not very old, having been born in 1826. He is a most enthusiastic Massachusetts man, never lets slip a good opportunity to magnify the greatness of his native state, and has been involved in several heated controversies concerning the claims of that state to have led in great movements. It is understood in the senate to be Mr. Hoar's private opinion that about everything really good on this continent was devised or matured in Massachusetts.

SENATOR HOAR.

He grew slowly and regularly to his present prominence, graduating at Harvard, practicing law, serving in local offices and then three terms in the lower house of congress, and finally reaching the senate in 1877 [illegible] cyclone, one may look upon him as destined for a long service senator.

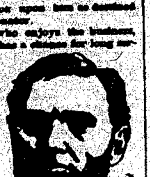
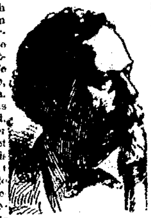
A young senator who enjoys the business, grows in favor and has a chance for long service is Frank Hiscock, of New York. He has a winning way, a decidedly attractive personality, and that of a healthy, kindly disposed gentleman. He is portly in figure, and has a fine head of hair and a full curling beard. The upper lip is smooth shaven. The nose is straight, full at the end and with large nostrils. His eye is as clear and mild as that of an ox. You feel instinctively that nature had enough material on hand when she made that man. Hiscock is deliberate, quiet, impressive, but never loud. He says what he has to say in full, round tones, but is never driven by the galleries into lifting his voice from its dignified monotone. He has the repose of self reliance, the ease of experience and the patience of deliberate judgment.



SENATOR HISCOCK.

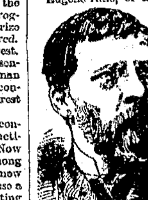
Senator Joseph R. Hawley, of Connecticut, presents a sort of anomaly, in that he is a southern man who has removed northward and eastward. In a country like the United States it is rare, indeed, to find a man representing a district east of the one he was born in. Among the few have been Blaine, born in Pennsylvania, Gen. Burnside, born in Indiana, and J. R. Hawley, born in North Carolina in 1826. When he was 11 years old his family removed to Connecticut, which has ever since been his home. He has had a singularly varied experience as editor, soldier in the war for the Union, then colonel and general, editor and governor of Connecticut, congressman and president of the centennial commission, and finally senator. His first term began in 1881, his second will end in 1893, and his chances are even for more.

Mr. Hawley's marriage some two years ago to Miss Edith A. Horner made the country familiar with his "sturdy, firm and fine appearance," as they were described and pictured. His first wife was Harriet Foote, of Guilford, Conn. Gen. Hawley, as he is often called, is the fastest talker in the senate, yet his articulation is so distinct that many hearers do not notice his vehemence. The stenographers, however, know it and dread it. In his last speech against the Blair bill he beat all previous records, and, according to one stenographer, who timed him while another took his speech, he rose to 225 words a minute. This was all the more remarkable, as the average in the senate does not rise above 130. Senator Hawley has been fortunate in avoiding personal quarrels with other politicians, and his editorial work on The Hartford Courant has usually been conspicuous for fairness.



SENATOR HAWLEY.

Eugene Hale, of Maine, is young, as senators go, being but 53; and it was once humorously said that he became prominent by being the favorite son-in-law of a prominent man. But he has since shown inherent capacity for leadership. He advanced in the regular old New England way—first as county attorney for nine years, then member of the Maine legislature, after that a congressman for ten years, and finally senator for the term to end in 1893. Industry and clearness of statement are his strong points as a legislator. There is no better worker in a congressional committee room than Eugene Hale. He is singularly well prepared on any subject he attempts to speak upon, and while there are more brilliant orators, there is no more useful member of either house.

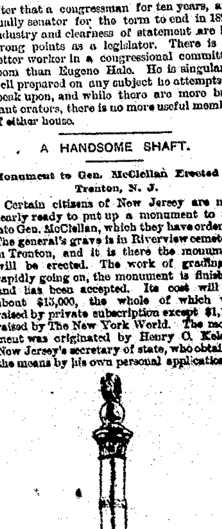


SENATOR HALE.

A HANDSOME SHAFT.

Monument to Gen. McClellan Erected at Trenton, N. J.

Certain citizens of New Jersey are now nearly ready to put up a monument to the late Gen. McClellan, which they have ordered. The general's grave is in Riverview cemetery in Trenton, and it is there the monument will be erected. The work of grading is rapidly going on, the monument is finished, and has been accepted. Its cost will be about $15,000, the whole of which was raised by private subscription except $1,100, raised by The New York World. The movement was originated by Henry C. Kelsey, New Jersey's secretary of state, who obtained the means by his own personal application.



THE M'CLELLAN MONUMENT.

The inscriptions are as follows: On the front face: "George Brinton McClellan, born in Pennsylvania Dec. 3, 1826; died in New Jersey Oct. 29, 1885." On the right [illegible]: "Organizer and commander of the Army of the Potomac and commanding general of the armies of the United States." On the left face: "Governor of New Jersey 1878-81." On rear: "Erected as a tribute of respect and affection by personal friends."

The insignia are: On the front: "McClellan cap, sword and field glass." On the right face: "Oak wreath and major general's stars." On the left face: "Laurel [illegible] major general's stars." On the rear: [illegible]

SOME HISTORIC FIRES.

SUGGESTED BY THE BLAZES IN LYNN AND BOSTON.

J. H. Beadle Writes Interestingly on Notable Conflagrations of Record, Beginning with the Burning of Rome and Including Recent Blazes in America.

Modern science has done wonders, but it cannot yet claim a triumph over the modern "big fire." Not many years ago American boys read in their school books of how "Rome was an ocean of flame! Height and depth were covered with red surges that rolled before the blast like an endless tide;" how Nero played on his harp to the music of crackling flames, and what a pity it was that they had no fire engines. We have since learned to pity ourselves. The great fire of Dec. 16, 1835, which swept nearly all New York city east of Broadway, destroying 648 large stores and warehouses, broke the charm of confidence, and the succeeding Pittsburg fire, covering sixty-five acres at one blaze, completed the conviction that the fire department of the day was a poor thing in a big blaze.

LYNN—CENTRAL SQUARE BEFORE FIRE.

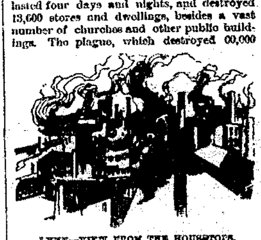
Machinery for the extinction of fire has been improved every year since, and yet the fires have been getting bigger. The first San Francisco was built entirely of wood, and went up in a blaze on Christmas eve, 1849. The "self risers" congratulated themselves on the fact that the structures "weren't much account anyhow, and it was a big illumination"—cost only $1,000,000!—and built another city. May 4, 1850, most of that was burned; loss, $3,000,000. A month and ten days later the rest went up; loss, $2,000,000. The next city was of more solid materials, but, on the 3d of May, 1851, the wooden part of it burned; loss, $7,000,000. Six weeks later another destructive fire occurred. Then they constructed tall buildings of stone and brick; the earthquakes shattered them, and finally the San Franciscans compromised on low and solid buildings—of two or three stories for the most part.

Two big fires stand out prominently in history—the burning of Rome in the reign of Nero (perhaps because it led to a frightful persecution of the Christians) and the great fire of London, which began Sept. 2, 1666, lasted four days and nights, and destroyed 13,600 stores and dwellings, besides a vast number of churches and other public buildings. The plague, which destroyed 60,000



LYNN—VIEW FROM THE HOUSETOPS.

Londoners, had just ceased its ravages when the fire came, and, like that of Rome, it led to a persecution—this time of the Catholics. Many an antiquarian has mourned the loss of ancient landmarks, and many a tourist asking for some old site or building receives the answer: "Ah, all knowledge of it was lost in the great fire;" but it proved the salvation of London. The narrow, crooked and sewerless streets were never restored, the new city was built in four years and far better built; the plague has never returned, and the "blessing in disguise" is commemorated by a beautiful monument.

As previously noted, it is somewhat amusing to read in popular American works of some fifty years ago that "there is no danger of any such fires" as those of Rome and London now. True, there has never since been so complete a destruction as that of London, for five-sixths of that city "within the walls" were destroyed; but the city contained but 200,000 people, and certainly held less wealth than is now piled up in the lower quarter of New York city. A city was wiped out, but the losses would not compare with those at Chicago; so the sad fact is forced upon us that modern fires are far more destructive.

In 1866 Portland, Me., advertised that, in honor of the triumph of the federal armies and resulting peace and prosperity, she would celebrate the 4th of July with extraordinary eclat, "closing with the most brilliant illumination ever shown in New England," and she certainly had it, for one-third of the city was ablaze before morning, at a cost variously estimated at from $10,000,000 to $20,-

EDGAR A. POE'S COTTAGE.

Sale of the House in Which the Poet Wrote Some of His Famous Pieces.

The cottage at Fordham in which Edgar A. Poe wrote some of his most famous poems, notably "The Bells," "Annabel Lee" and "Ulalume," the purchase of which some months ago by Edward Fearing Gill, Poe's biographer, is said to have fallen through, is one of the most interesting sights about New York to one interested in literary relics. The cottage and farm on which it stands were purchased for $3,487.50. It was Mr. Gill's intention to have the building preserved so far as possible from the encroachments of time.

The present appearance of the cottage itself is much the same as it was when Poe hired it, but the surroundings have changed. When Poe lived in it in 1846 the country was unsettled, and the farm houses were few and far between. Now it is in the limits of the city of New York. Eugene Field, in a recent number of America, has brought to light an account of an interesting visit made to the cottage by Mrs. Martha J. Lamb, and described by her in a volume entitled "Echoes of the Æsthetic Society of Jersey City" (1882). Following are some extracts:

"Fordham is an inconspicuous portion of New York city, a few miles north of Harlem river. * * * In less than thirty-five minutes the ride was accomplished. Then came a walk of nearly half a mile. We crossed the railroad track, and a wide, dusty street, and then ascended a picturesque hill, upon the very backbone of which stands the house where Poe wrote 'The Raven.' [This is an error. "The Raven" was published on Jan. 29, 1845, before Poe moved to Fordham.] I scarcely know which struck me the more forcibly, its diminutive size or its quaint antiquity. The gable end is partially sheltered from the street by an aged cherry tree, and pear and apple trees of a former generation hover about on other sides, like sentinels on duty. The fence, which incloses both house and grounds, is lined with lilac and currant bushes. * * * 'This is the room where Mr. Poe did his writing,' our guide said. 'We have not been here long enough to fix up the place much. There are two rooms on this floor, and two rooms above, but the house is full of little closets and nooks, and is more roomy than it seems.' She certainly did open doors in most unexpected places. * * * Two windows to the north opened upon an exceptionally beautiful landscape in summer, and a wide expanse of immaculate snow in winter; and two windows to the south swept the pretty garden and fields beyond. * * * In their season, the perfume of many flowers, and the music of birds and bees filled the air which fanned his brow. The chamber where Poe slept, and where they say his mother-in-law used to lock him up for days together, was upstairs. It had a roofed ceiling, with a sharp point in the center (sic). At the east end was a high wooden mantel, with a small square window on each side of it, and there was a little one pane window under the eaves, to the south. My eye fell upon the door, with its queer little old fashioned panels, and last century's latch two-thirds of the way to the top. * * * 'That was Mr. Poe's cowhouse over there,' said the young woman, pointing towards a little inclosure some six feet square in the side of the lodge."

The most tragic part of Edgar A Poe's life was enacted in this cottage. Poe was a descendant of Cromwell. The son of an actress, born while his parents were members of a theatrical company, he early showed a most extraordinary precocity. He was adopted by Mr. Allan, a rich Baltimorean; he went to school in England as a child, and later entered the University of Virginia, but he contracted heavy gambling debts, and his guardian, in consequence of Poe's wildness, placed him in his counting room, where, however, Poe did not stay long, preferring to seek his own fortune. He went to Boston and started out on his literary career. Finally becoming discouraged, he enlisted in the army, was lately discharged through the efforts of his friends, wrote a story which secured a prize of $100 from The Saturday Visitor, and became editor of The Southern Literary Magazine, where he wrote some of his best short stories. In 1835 he married his cousin, Virginia Clemm, a girl 14 years old. In 1837 he went to New York and lived in straitened circumstances for two years. In 1839 he went to Philadelphia and became associate editor of W. E. Burton's Gentleman's Magazine, and after that editor of Graham's Magazine. In 1844 Poe returned to New York with his wife and her mother. He became connected with The Mirror, and it was in the columns of this paper that "The Raven" first appeared, although Poe's name was not then attached to it.

"The Raven" established Poe's fame. At this time his wife was dying of consumption, the poet himself was in failing health and so poor that it was only through the assistance of [illegible] compelled to exist. [illegible]

Comforts were sent to the cottage, which aided much in making smooth the last hours of poor Virginia. She died on Jan. 30, 1847. There was a quiet funeral, and Mrs. Poe was buried in the family vault of the Valentines at Fordham, but her remains were subsequently taken to Baltimore and interred beside the remains of the poet.

Poe lived here until 1849. During this time, although poor, he managed to keep from starving. His mind was filled with the idea of starting a new magazine, but he never succeeded in doing so. In 1849 he went south, visiting Richmond, the scene of his early childhood, and on his return he stopped at Baltimore. He disappeared, but was finally found by his friends in that city. He died a few days later. The manner of the poet's death will probably always remain in obscurity. Some declare that his death was the direct result of a debauch, and that he died in delirium tremens; others deny this. No one denies, however, that he was one of America's greatest poets.

the morning of the 11th the fire raged, destroying about 800 stores, factories and dwellings, but very few lives were lost, not twenty in all. The loss was about $80,000,000. The recent destruction in that city renders this article timely. It is generally conceded that the London fire of 1666 was most sweeping, but that may be because we have no statistics of destruction in the great cities of the orient. Nineveh and Babylon were destroyed largely by fire. When Lucius Verus, the Roman, captured and burned Seleucia, it was said to have 500,000 inhabitants, of whom 300,000 were massacred; but we cannot know the exact truth. Forty years later the site was a tangled, swampy wilderness, full of wild beasts. The burning of and massacres at Bagdad, Damascus, Jerusalem, Carthage and other ancient cities were horrible affairs, but in actual destruction of property the great Chicago fire probably went beyond any of them.

As the Christians suffered for Rome's conflagration and the Catholics for that of London, so the conflagration of Chicago was popularly attributed to Mrs. O'Leary's cow! On the evening of Oct. 8, 1871, the lady took a lantern to the stable to give light while she milked; the cow kicked the lantern into the straw; the stable went, the adjacent lumber pile went and 2,100 acres of the city went soon after. The public is still familiar with the details and the then inexplicable phenomena. Buildings supposed to be fireproof went like tinder. The flames would sweep across a street, dash in the windows at the south end of a block, and before a man could run around the square they would be bursting through the north windows. Stone and iron melted before the fierce heat; the river did not restrain it a moment; it expired at the end of three days, simply for lack of aliment.

About 18,000 buildings were destroyed, including 41 churches, 32 large hotels, court, custom house, postoffice and nearly all other public buildings. Of course the loss of life cannot be known—who can know how many unknown men are in deep sleep at any time in back rooms?—but 200 deaths were proved and 93,500 persons were left homeless. The total loss was put at $200,000,000, about one half the estimated wealth of the city. Never was such sudden and complete destruction by fire alone; never such rapid recovery. In two years scarcely a trace of the fire remained, and the business of the city was 20 per cent. greater than in 1871.

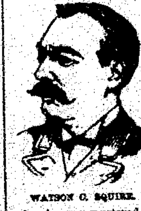
J. H. BEADLE.

WASHINGTON'S SENATORS.

They Are Watson C. Squire and John B. Allen.

Of the two men first to represent the new state of Washington in the United States senate New York furnishes one and Indiana the other.

Watson C. Squire was born at Cape St. Vincent, N. Y., in 1838. He was graduated at the Wesleyan university at Middletown, Conn., in 1859. The law then claimed his attention, besides school teaching. But at that time the great struggle between north and south came on, and young Squire enlisted in the Nineteenth New York infantry. He served on the Potomac till the fall of 1861, when he was mustered out and returned to the study of the law.



WATSON C. SQUIRE.

In the fall of 1862 he raised a company, and was afterwards placed in command of the First battalion of Ohio sharpshooters. He served in all the battles of the Army of the Cumberland, and finally was made judge advocate on the staff of Gen. Rousseau and afterwards Gen. George H. Thomas.

After the war Mr. Squire became an employe of the Remington Arms company and went abroad to make contracts. In 1879 he went to Washington territory, and was made governor by President Arthur in 1884. He has done a great deal to make Washington what it is.

John Beard Allen, Senator Squires' colleague, was born at Crawfordsville, Montgomery county, Ind., in 1845. Senator Allen is one of those men who got his education by hard knocks. At 18 years of age he enlisted in the One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Indiana infantry and served in the West till he was mustered out in 1865. He then went to live at Rochester, Minn., acting for a time as an agent for a grain firm. But having a predilection for the law he studied first in an office and then at Ann Arbor, Mich., being admitted in 1869. Going to Olympia, W. T., he opened an office and a public reading room, he being custodian of the latter. Eventually he located at the bar and in 1875 was appointed United States attorney for the territory. In 1881 he removed to Walla-Walla. Six years later he was elected a representative in congress, but did not take his seat. The two [illegible] Republicans.

The Universalist sale, supper and entertainment was a great success except financially, and the latter on account of the rain storm only. The supper was excellent. The sales were good for the attendance and the "farce" played was unusually good. The principal characters were sustained with wonderful fidelity by Mr. Bennett, Mr. Coates, Miss VanBuren and Miss Blanche Boomer and the servants were real servants and filled their places excellently. It was well said by many that poorer playing had been done by professionals in in large places. We regret the bad weather on the society's account.

The following is a report of the sermon of Rev. L. C. King at the Free Methodist Church at the funeral services of the unfortunate John Slaver who was killed by a train on the N. Y. O & W. railroad Saturday evening, Nov. 30th.

Text, "There is but a step between me and death."

I Samuel XX-3.

The reverend gentleman after speaking of the brevity of life and the certainty of death, despite medical skill and care, took occasion to make some quite pointed remarks concerning the business of liquor selling. He handled the nefarious business without gloves and said in part substantially these words:—

"On the last evening of the month of November, 1889, as the train on the Midland at about 8 p. m. was speeding on its way, carrying its human freight to their homes or business, I saw a man struggling along the track —the watchful eye of the engineer saw him too, and his hand was on the lever, the whistle sounded an alarm and the air brakes hugged the car wheels, but ah, me! it was too late;—a bleeding mangled mass lay by the track,—an immortal spirit had been ushered into the presence of its maker, and another witness had been added to the long list against something. A coroner's jury will be impaneled, the usual form will be observed, and the verdict 'No one to blame,' will probably be sent to the papers. But I am not satisfied with the verdict. We want to know if no one is really to blame. I propose to hold an inquest this afternoon. O Holy Ghost come and help us in this inquest.

The locomotive works that built this engine, that with frame of iron and ribs of steel, and bowels of fire breathing hot steam and flame at every breath, snorting along the glistening track running this man down, you are to blame. But every one says, No! That company is not to blame. Engineer, you ran your engine against this man! You killed him; but the coroner's jury will exonerate him. We all do. Some one was to blame. Yes, the man was to blame. Now we breathe yes; but I am not inclined to stop here. How came this man to be in the condition that he did not understand the warning and get out of the way? I learn that he has been in the habit of indulging in the cup that dazes and inebriates. O, now I understand, says one, the saloon keeper that sold him rum or whiskey is the one to blame. Yes, that man that keeps a murder den is the guilty one. Well, I should think that man would feel that some unseen power was pulling him down to the regions of despair. But I want to follow this thought a little, for one says that the brewer and the distiller are the ones to blame, for if there was none made there would be none to sell.—But to my mind there are others who are to blame in this matter.

If I were to take this poor mangled body and carry it to the brewer or the distiller they would say, 'we did not do it; we only make beer and rum.' If I should carry it to the den where he bought the poison that unsettled his mind and wrecked his powers and made him helpless, I should recieve for an answer, 'It is my business, and the man wanted to buy. I have a right to do it, I am licensed.'

Ah, so I must go farther, and I take this body to the Commissioners of Excise and say, 'here, gentlemen, is the fruit and reward of your labors,' but they disdain credit therefor. 'We were elected purposely to grant murderer's licenses.' So I must carry this evidence farther. So I take it to the voters of Volney who cast their ballots to elect just these men to do just this business.—'No sir! not here, we are temperance men, we are for high license.' Yes, and I this afternoon take the body of John Slaver and lay it at the feet of the party who votes for high license and refuses to shut up these murder dens. * * * I shall carry it no farther. If you voted for high license you are accessories before the fact. If you did not vote to stop this terrible business you are accessories after the fact. The voters of this town have a lesson before them. But will the business stop? No sir! our party must be kept in power. The rum soaked politics of our party must be preserved.

I want to say something more. That little dam in the Conemaugh Valley is but a mote beside the dam of Divine displeasure which by and by will give way before the fierceness of His wrath, and will sweep away their awful wickedness with the besom of destruction. We have had an exhibition of this; Slavery felt the wrath of God and it was swept away with vengeance. The papers will chronicle this death as another victim to rum, but what record will be written in the presence of Him who knows every evil way. License will continue the business, but Prohibition will stop this business. Will you help stop it?"

WASHINGTON, [illegible]

A really complete discussion of the President's message is of course impossible to secure. The majority have no definite opinion to give. A few Southern Democrats express their opinion of his remarks on ballot box frauds against the negro in rather picturesque language, but that is about all. The message is an unusually long one, but this is the fault of necessity, as the manifold interests of the government broaden with every year, and it is the duty of the President "to give the Congress information of the States of the Union." Viewed from a literary standpoint the document is much inferior to such polished efforts as President Arthur's last message to Congress, and even to President Cleveland's labored efforts, full of strange words and German mysticisms. But while the language is common place it is also business like and there is no straining for effect. President Harrison is not the man to lie awake nights trying to think up some expression that shall tickle the ear of the groundlings. Perhaps unlike Beaconsfield he does not believe that "the world is governed by words and not by ideas."

The President's position on the colored franchise in the South, on the civil service and on the silver coinage, will meet with most opposition. On the tariff and the surplus questions he adheres clearly to the declaration of his party. As to pensions there is no doubt of his liberality, and his wish that no Union soldier should ever die in a poor house, will meet a hearty response. The President is opposed to the free coinage of silver and doubts the wisdom of any considerable increase of the present rate of coinage. In other words while he likes silver he is not, in the beautiful language of the street "stuck" on it.

The nomination of David J. Brewer on the Supreme Bench was a surprise of Kansas to succeed Stanley Matthews Brewer is the son of a missionary, being born in Smyrna, Asia-Minor. He was educated in this country. He is connected with several prominent American families. He is a nephew of Justice Field, and it will be the first time in the history of the country when two men so closely allied have sat upon the bench together. Judge Brewer is a victim of asthma and the moist climate of Washington will be the greatest draw back to his new home.

The Senate adhered to the time honored plan of the drawing of lots as to which of the Senators from the new States should be designated for the short term and which for the long. Prior to the adoption of the motion Mr. Collum presented a certificate from the the two houses of North Dakota, designating Mr. Pierce as the long term Senator. The Senate held that the legislature under the Constitution, had nothing to do with the matter. Mr. Pierce proved as unlucky in casting lots as he was before the Senate, for Mr. Casey his colleague, was the lucky man who received the long term.

The House, though only occupied by a score of people, looked like a mysterious school room last night. Mr. McPherson, the newly elected clerk, was testing the fourteen gentlemen who appeared as candidates for the two positions of reading clerks of the House. Each man was given ten minutes hearing. The reading was Washington's farewell address, being selected by Mr. McPherson as an especially difficult composition. It was given in every style from the business rattle of a roll call to a sing song, and from cast iron delivery to the most ambitious manner. The salary of the reading clerk is $3,600 per annum and the plum therefore worth trying for. The trial of last evening was not conclusive, however, and several of the best readers will be given a chance before the House to-day. If the trial proved anything it proved the scarcity of good readers.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the pain of Cutting Teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers; there is no mistake about it. It cures Dysentery and Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums, reduces Inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP," and take no other. 53y1

There is nothing akin to this now in the United States; you can go into the Senate chamber and hear Mr. Sherman or Mr. Hoar; you can go to a congress of archeologists, of philanthropists, of physicians, of engineers, and hear a man talk as he talks to men. But with the single exception of Johns Hopkins university there is nothing so open as this university of France to anybody who, any day, may wish to learn what he can from a first rate authority. I suppose that Clark university hopes, as time goes on, to do something on such lines.—Edward E. Hull in New England Magazine.

Commissioner of Navigation.

Capt. William W. Bates, of Buffalo, who recently appointed commissioner of was navigation by President Harrison, was born in Calais, Me., in 1827. He learned shipbuilding in the towns of Washington county, Md., and after a season at Detroit, Sandusky and Huron, returned in 1846 to Maine, where he entered into business with his father. In 1849 he built the schooner Challenge, the first clipper on the great lakes, at Manitowoc, Wis. At this time he was an acknowledged authority on marine architecture. From 1854 to 1857, with the late J. W. Griffith, he edited and published The Nautical Magazine and Naval Journal. He took part in the civil war, after which he resumed shipbuilding in Chicago. He built a dry dock at Portland, Ore., in 1881, and in the west and east continued to study problems of shipping economy. For several years he has been the chief inspector and manager of the Inland Lloyds, with headquarters at Buffalo.

Imitation Overgaiters.

Among pretty street boots are the imitation overgaiters for young women and misses. The foxings are of fine calf, goat or kid, and the tops or gaiter parts of cloth or undressed kid. They have the semblance of a binding. A strap passes under the hollow of the foot, with a buckle on the outside. A casual observer would not notice but what they are what they seem. But while they are stylish they will hardly be affected by women who do not change their footwear often, for they would tire of the sameness.—Shoe and Leather Facts.

History of the Day.

Thanksgiving day was a long time in getting itself established. It is not an exclusively American affair, and was not generally observed in the west and south till after the war; but in New England it may be said to date from the middle of the Seventeenth century. Over 3,000 years ago Moses instructed the Israelites to keep a feast after they got established in the Holy Land. They called it the Feast of the Tabernacles, and for eight days, following the close of harvest, they dwelt in booths made chiefly of green boughs and feasted on corn, wine, oil and fruits. In the course of time a splendid ritual for this feast was developed, including much singing in responsive choruses. Somewhat later the Greeks held a nine days' feast of similar character, in which slaves were allowed to take part, and all criminals except murderers. The Romans had a similar feast in honor of Ceres, goddess of grain.

The Saxons had a "Harvest Home," and after them the English, which festival was observed in a sort of way in some of the American colonies. In the year 1621 the Pilgrim Fathers tried to celebrate it, but it was rather a gloomy affair. In 1623 a ship loaded with provisions failed to arrive and Governor Bradford appointed a day of humiliation, fasting and prayer, but the expected ship arrived and so they made it a day of thanksgiving.

Ninety Indians, headed by Chief Massasoit, took part. In 1631 the Puritans ran out of provisions, and Feb. 9 was named as a day of fasting and prayer. As in the other case, the ship arrived, and they had a feast instead. June 15, 1637, there was a general service in all the churches of New England to give thanks for the great victory at Fort Mystic over the Pequots, and on the 12th of October following a general service and feast, in honor of peace and the settling of some religious differences. Forty years later Governor Andros ordered the people to give thanks on the first day of December; but they hated Andros and did not thank worth a cent. Several persons were arrested for treating the proclamation with contempt, but this struck the home authorities as rather ludicrous, and his conduct was disapproved.

Thereafter Thanksgiving was pretty generally observed in all England and the states settled by her, the governor naming the day. George Washington recommended to congress the naming of a national day in 1789, for the adoption of the constitution; it was done, and the day was generally observed. In 1795 the proceeding was repeated. James Madison appears to have issued the first presidential proclamation on the subject, in 1815, in honor of the return of peace. Forty-eight years passed before President Lincoln issued the second one, in 1863. Since then every president has followed the custom and the day is nationally observed at last.

Board of Trustees' Proceedings.

FULTON, N. Y., Dec. 4th, 1889.

Board met pursuant to adjournment.

Present, President Wilson and Trustees Rice, Wolever, Patterson and Nichols.

On motion of Trustee Rice the Fulton Savings Bank were allowed to erect wooden annex in the rear of their building on First street, one story high, to be covered with tin, and to be sheathed with iron if the Board so order.

The President reported that on November 21st, 1889, the Board met at the premises of D. E. Mason on First street. All present except Trustee Patterson. After an examination of the street and premises adjoining, it was on motion of Trustee Kellogg ordered that the gutter on the east side of First street, from the northwest corner of D. E. Mason's planing mill building to the tail race of the gun works, be graded so that water at the said Mason building shall not stand over two inches deep.

On motion, Trustees Kellogg, Rice and the Village Attorney were appointed a committee in reference to the amending the Village Charter.

Mr. William Summerville appeared before the Board and asked that an electric light be placed on the Whitaker road near the arch bridge over Waterhouse creek.

The following bills were reported correct by the finance committee and clerk directed to draw orders for the same on proper funds:

F. E. Bacon, labor on park,	$11.31
C. Wolever, highway labor,	71.96
B. J. Kimball, surveying,	5.00
Amos Wolever, assisting surveyor,	14.00
Fulton Gas Light Co., gas for jail,	8.75
W. D. Patterson, glazing for jail,	50
" " rent of jail,	200,00

The matter of sewer at the intersection of Oneida and Sixth streets was discussed and on motion of Trustee Rice referred to the Street Committee and Street Commissioner with power to act.

The Clerk was directed to cause to be published with the minutes Section 41 of Chapter 5 of the Village ordinances, which said section reads as folows, viz:

SECTION 41.—No person shall use any small or horse sled or sled without horses for the amusement of sliding on any of the sidewalks or in any of the streets of this village under the penalty of two dollars for each offence. It shall be the duty of the police force to see that this ordinance is enforced.

On motion the Board adjourned to December 18th, next, at 8 o'clock, p. m.

A Word to Invalids.

You are cautioned against the purchase of Whiskies with high-sounding names. In most cases those high-toned brands are used to cover compounds abominable in taste and absolutely injurious in their consequences to the consumer.

My Whiskies have been before the public for over 15 years. They have stood the test thoroughly, having been analyzed by some of the most expert chemists throughout the country, and in every instance their absolute purity is established and highly commended upon. My brand—the plain I. W. HARPER WHISKEY—carried off the highest honors at New Orleans over all Sour Mash Whiskies displayed from the State of Kentucky. Respectfully,

I. W. HARPER, Distiller, Nelson County Ky.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Haven of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, are in town visiting old Fulton friends. They are stopping at H. Partrick's, the lady's father's.

William B. Osgood and Bemis Osgood of Oneida county, and Lucien Osgood of Wayne county were here to attend the funeral of C. S. Osgood yesterday.

John B. Lovingston and wife of St. Louis, came to Fulton to attend the funeral of the late C. S. Osgood. Mrs. E. M. Fisher of Pulaski and Miss Belle Bragdon were also here.

The Sunday evening sermons on special subjects at the Universalist church are certainly attracting more than common interest. Next Sunday evening's subject will draw a large congregation we should think. It is: "Is the Adam of the Bible the only 'first father' of all the races of men.' We judge the paster thinks not. He said, last Sunday, "Bring pencil and paper and take down bible quotations."

The Pole Will Stand.

The cold North winds will whistle around the celebrated pole in front of Willard Johnson's block this winter, and under every probability for many winters to come, the decision of Justice Merwin having been reversed by the Supreme Court Judges at the Syracuse General Term last week.

The following is the closing of Justice Martin's opinion on the case:—

"It is true that the court found 'that this pole was not necessary for the public use alone, and there were other places where it might have been located so as to answer the same purpose.' Whether the trial judge intended by this finding to decide that no pole was necessary at that place for public use, or whether his intention was to find that it was not alone necessary for that purpose, but was also necessary for private use, is not quite clear. If the former, it is we think adverse to the concession of the parties and against the weight of the evidence. On the trial it was conceded that this pole 'was convenient and reasonably necessary to the furnishing light for public and private use.' This concession involved the necessity of this pole to furnish light for public as well as for private use, and the evidence tended to show quite conclusively that such a pole in that vicinity was necessary for the proper maintenance of a street-light which was required at that place. We do not think it an answer to the right claimed to say that this pole might have been placed on the land of others. If it was necessary that it should be located in that vicinity, the burden could as properly be imposed upon the street in front of the plaintiff's premises as upon the street in front of the premises of his neighbor.

Upon the evidence, admissions and facts, as presented on this appeal, we are of the opinion that the judgment directing the removal of the pole in question was not justified; that the court erred in directing such judgment; and for that error the judgment should be reversed.

Judgment reversed, with costs to abide the event.
Hardin, P. J., concurred.
Merwin, J., not sitting.

Affairs at the E. & O. Mills.

Everything now has decidedly the appearance that the factory across the river will soon be at a standstill. How long is a question that no one knows. The assignee have obtained the consent of the creditors as has before been stated in THE TIMES, of separating the two plants located at Providence and Oswego Falls and machinery from the mills here are daily being shipped to Providence. Two wool washers have already been shipped. Twenty cards and twenty-two combs will soon follow.

The stock is now being run out and as soon as it is run through a department, the hands in that department are laid off. The dye room hands, the wool washers and the carders have now finished up and hands in the combing department are daily being paid up. It will be five or six weeks before all work is finished in the weave room, although some looms will begin to stop next week. Nobody knows what action will be taken when the stock is all run out but it is believed that the plant here will pass into the hands of Mr. Julliard or of a syndicate and that the ultimate result will be advantageous to the community and all concerned.

Saturday and Monday afternoon and evening at C. R. Nichols' store 500 articles will be offered for sale, Prices ranging from 25c. to 5.75.

Service of Song.

On Sunday evening, Dec. 15th a Musically Illustrated Service of Song will be given in the Congregational church, Oswego Falls, by a chorus of voices and instruments, numbering about forty, entitled, "A Child of Jesus." The chorus of voices is composed of the following persons:

Sopranos:—Mrs. E. Robertson, Mrs. Ed. Beckwith, Mrs. J. L. Dixon, Mrs. F. Martin, Mrs. J. Stevens, Miss C. Pollard, Miss I. Rill, Miss M. McClement, Miss B. Diamond, Miss C. Harrison, Miss L. Lake.

Altos:—Mrs. C. Berry, Miss M. Parkhouse, Miss J. Johnson, Mrs. Cook, Mrs. Z. Newell.

Tenors:—Mr. J. Stevens, Mr. Williams, Mr. Z. Newell, Mr. H. Pollard, Mr. H. Rowland.

Bassos:—Mr. W. Beckwith, Mr. Ed. Beckwith, Mr. R. Harrison, Mr. J. L. Dixon, Mr. G. Fairman, Mr. L. Ballard, Mr. T. Bayley.

Reader, Miss A. Van Camp.

MARRIED.—Dec. 7th, 1889, at Oswego Falls, Levi Padgett of Baldwinsville to Nettie Brown of Oswego Falls, by Rev. J. C. Breaker.

The semi-annual meeting of the Oswego County Medical Society was held at the Doolittle House, Oswego, yesterday afternoon.

Smith Davis will sell his household furniture, piano, carpets, &c. at auction at his home on Second street Saturday at one o'clock, p. m.

The Rev. W. de L. Wilson of Syracuse, will be the preacher at the evening service, this (Wednesday) evening, held in Zion Episcopal church.

The jury in the case of Mrs. George Norton rendered a verdict that she came to her death from an abcess, and censured the attending physician for misconducting the case.

Edwin M. Harvie, formerly a law student in Mead & Stranahan's law office in this village, was admitted to the bar at the General Term examination at Syracuse last week.

One week from to-night the Woman's Relief Corps will hold a fair and fancy goods sale in their rooms in the Dexter block. An elegant silk quilt is to be drawn by the person holding the lucky ticket.

Gilbert Jennings will give a grand New Years party at the Palermo Centre House, Wednesday evening Jan. 1 1890. Wilson's full band will be in attendance. Floor Managers, Charles Hopkins, M. M. Saterlee. Tickets 50 cents.

Edward E. Hill, formerly of this village and a graduate of Fulton Union School, now principal of Hyde Park public school, Chicago, was married to Miss Rose M. Lester of Tuscola, Ill., Nov. 28th.

George Perkins and Charles Clute have taken the the contract of removing the canal boat of David Baldwin from the dam and are now at work on it. It is reported that they receive $75 for the job.

The renovated Citizens Bank is now in the hands of artist A. E. Worden, who is giving it its interior decorations. It will be ready for occupancy in a week or so and will be one of the finest in this section.

Willard Johnson announces his intention of building a block between THE TIMES building and the Clark House, to be completed before June 1st. If it is built the Y. M. C. A. will have rooms and a gymnasium in the building.

We are indebted to George C. Cooper, our ex-townsman, for a finely illustrated pamphlet of Lansing, Mich. It shows the thrift and enterprise of that beautiful and progressive Michigan city. Mr. Cooper is vice president of the Capital Wagon Company.

The funeral of C. S. Osgood was largely attended from his late residence on First street, yesterday afternoon. Rev. J. C. Breaker conducted the services. The following acted as bearers: C. W. Streeter; L. B. Babcock, H. C. Gardner, Abram Emerick, E. E. Hart, James Morton.

The Swedish Male Quartet will be at the opera house Friday evening, Dec. 13, and will be assisted in their program by the well known reader, Miss Lizzie Gleason. The press criticisms which we have before us speak in the highest terms of the Sweedish songs which are pronounced as "bright and harmonious and rendered with remarkable precision and beautiful shading." Concerning Miss Gleason the Boston Herald says:—

"Miss Lizzie Gleason was eminently successful in all her numbers, and the young lady reveals an artistic training united with great natural talent. She is quiet and unpretending in manner, and secured the sympathy and interest of the audience in her first selection."

Calvin S. Osgood Dead.

Calvin S. Osgood, aged 79 years lacking two days, died suddenly at his late home Thursday, Dec. 5, 1889, at 5 p. m. Never robust, he had been for several years feeble, and for the last few years had not been quite as strong and occasionally had attacks of great prostration. For a few months previous to his death he had, at intervals, paroxysms of pain and oppressed breathing. He drove down town the morning of the day previous to his death, but was not as well the next morning, and at about noon a physician was called. He seemed at 2 o'clock to feel as well as usual and read his newspaper and conversed cheerfully with his family, sitting in his chair. At about 5 o'clock he laid down, as was his habit, and within a few moments had ceased to breathe, without expressing any anxiety or pain.

He leaves a wife, with whom he and his family observed their golden wedding in May, 1885. He leaves two daughters, and a sister Mrs. E. M. Fisher of Pulaski. He was a brother of the late Willard Osgood of Oswego Falls. He had resided in this village and vicinity for thirty-seven years. He was a much respected citizen and a most estimable man. Mr. Osgood was the kindest of neighbors and an honored member and deacon of the Baptist church, where his presence will be greatly missed. The loss to a community of a man of his integrity and daily life cannot be easily filled. He leaves a fragrant and precious memory to all who knew him.

"Chase we still, with baffled feet,
Smiling eye and waving hand,
Sought and seeker soon shall meet,
Lost and found, in Sunset Land."

* * * * * * *

"And I will trust that he who heeds
The life that hides in mead and wold,
Who hangs yon alder's crimson beads,
And stains the mosses green and gold,
Will still, as He hath done, incline
His gracious care to me and mine;
Grant what we ask aright, from wrong debar,
And, as the earth grows dark, make brighter every star."

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Mary Tobin died Saturday, Dec. 7, '89, at her home in Lower Oswego Falls, at the advanced age of 91 years. The remains were taken to Enterprise, Ont., Monday for interment.

Mrs. Mary Condon died at Oswego Falls Tuesday evening, Dec. 10, '89, at the age of 71 years. She was the mother of Mrs. Edward McCaffrey. Funeral services will be held Thursday at 10 o'clock a. m. at the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

Mrs. Deborah Sheridan, mother of James, John T., Joseph and Charles Sheridan, Mrs. H. P. Hillick and Mrs. H. C. Youngs, died at Toronto, Ont., Monday, Nov. 25, 1889. She was for many years a resident of Fulton, but had for some time past lived with her sons in Toronto.

Thomas O'Connor, aged 49 years, died at Granby Thursday, Dec. 5, '89. Funeral was held from the Catholic church yesterday at 10 o'clock, a. m.

William Proud, an old and well known citizen of Oswego, died Sunday at the age of 73 years.

Resolutions of Respect.

A committee appointed by the Sons of Temperance presented the following resolutions of respect to the memory of Mrs. Jesse Waugh.

Whereas our sister, Cora Waugh, who has been recently taken from among us has been for a year a member of this division, and has during her brief time with us won the respect and kindly regard of all its members, and

Whereas it is fitting and proper that this division make some expression of this feeling

Resolved, That as a division do mourn her loss and deplore the sudden and early death of one who was taken when life seemed sweetest and human ties hardest to sever.

Resolved, That we extend to her afflicted husband and relatives an assurance of our earnest sympathy in this their great bereavement.

Resolved, That in respect to her memory our charter and official badges be for thirty days draped in mourning.

PRIVATE LETTERS
Made Public by PEEBLES & CO.

Under date of —— Mr. I. M. Smart writes as follows:

PEEBLES & CO:

Can you tell me how I can make ten dollars do the work of twenty in getting my winter Clothing?

Anxiously Yours,
I. M. SMART.

No, Smarty, we can't tell you how to make twenty dollars go into ten. That is not in our arithmetic. Ten dollars won't buy you a twenty dollar suit, but we can sell you a ratler for that X.

Mr. Poore writes us:

DEAR SIR:

What is the lowest I can get me a good winter coat for?

Q. T. POORE.

The lowest, the very lowest, you can get a good winter coat (an overcoat, we suppose) is $5. You can get a coat at lower figures, but it will cost you more in wear. We may say to you that we have the cheapest line of good overcoats in town.

WE EXPECT TROUBLE

The eyelet of a corset seems a trifle to make a business on; but what if one eyelet cuts the laces, while another eyelet don't?

And what if the eyelet that cuts is in universal use?

And what if the eyelet that cuts the laces also rusts the corset?

And what if the eyelet that cuts is not so neat and proper and womanlike as the other?

And what if it costs as little or less to put in and never comes out or wears out?

The new eyelet is made of loops of corset lace instead of metal.

The Ball and Kabo corsets have it; the Ball is the easy corset, the Kabo the one that does not yield a barleycorn.

You can wear them two or three weeks and return to where you got them, if you want to. The makers provide you that privilege.

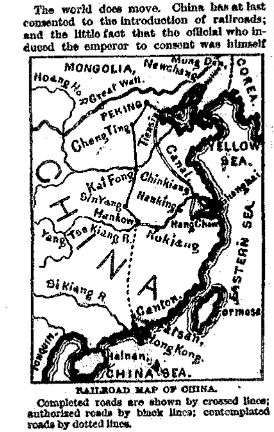
AN EPOCH IN CHINA.

The Government at Last Agrees to the Construction of Railroads.

The world does move. China has at last consented to the introduction of railroads; and the little fact that the official who induced the emperor to consent was himself financially interested in the enterprise, while a "sad fact" in itself, is yet so very American-like as to furnish additional proof that the country is adopting western ways.



RAILROAD MAP OF CHINA.

Completed roads are shown by crossed lines; authorized roads by black lines; contemplated roads by dotted lines.

They had a railroad ten miles long in China in 1876, built by the English from Shanghai to the seaport town of Woosung; but the emperor notified the owners to remove it after a few trains had been run, and it was removed to the island of Formosa. The Chinese seemed to have insuperable objections to labor saving contrivances, and it is said that the emperor feared an insurrection if the cheap porters and transporters were thrown out of employment. Another reason was still more powerful in the interior. The Chinese religion is, in its last analysis, simply a worship of ancestors; the graves of the empire are sacred in the highest degree, and the construction of a roadbed would necessarily disturb many of them. It was not to be thought of. In China, as in some other countries, the present is still under bondage to the past.

Nevertheless another set of Englishmen went to work in 1878, and this time in the imperial province. The Chinese Engineering and Mining company owned a valuable coal mine about seventy-five miles northeast of Tientsin, and after much delay secured permission to build seven miles of railroad from the mine down to the canal; but they had to call it a tramway and stipulate that horses and mules only should be the motive power. Nevertheless the engineers constructed a locomotive out of odds and ends, ran it about the yard for awhile, and finally put it on the line. It was named the "Rocket of China," and its first trip was on the centenary of George Stephenson's birthday. The imperial officials [illegible] and frowned, but daily use soon reconciled them to the sight.

At length Li Hung Chang, viceroy of the province of Pi-chi-li, in which Peking is situated, was induced to take an interest—being presumably "let in on the ground floor"—and thereafter devoted all his talents to gaining the imperial consent. At last the emperor consented that the English should have a line sixty miles long from Pekin to the seaboard at Taku; others rapidly followed, but all short and detached sections from one treaty port to another. Li Hung Chang continued to work on the imperial intellect, and, finally, on the 30th of August last, the decree was granted for the construction of the "Great Western railroad," from Pekin to Hankow, something over six hundred miles. At that point the officials in charge of rice transportation on the grand canal protested in a body, as the road would interfere with their monopoly, and for the present the permission goes no further than Hankow.

Nevertheless, the great north and south line is an assured fact, for Li Hung Chang has given out that the road is to be extended as far as Canton, the great southern port of the empire. Thus the line will connect the capital with the extreme south, and run through the richest and most populous sections. It will thus be as important as a line from Chicago to New Orleans would be if it were the only one west of the Alleghanies. The new line will connect the richest [illegible] of the empire and traverse the most populous sections, from the imperial capital down through Shanghai, Honan, the Han, Yangtse Kiang, Po and Leang valleys, and finally the great rice field of the south and the sugar lands, to the port and city of Canton.

Its entire course of 1,400 miles will be through regions of unsurpassed fertility, and while there cannot be a doubt as to the correctness of the emperor's [illegible]

POINTS ABOUT THE CHARACTERISTICS OF THE COUNTRY.

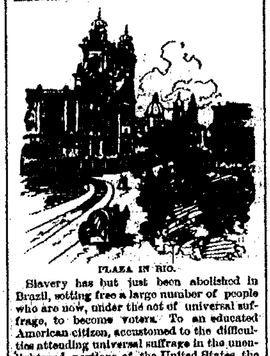
The Population Is but 11,000,000, but the Area of Territory is Nearly Equal to that of the United States—A [illegible] of Great Rivers, Mountains and [illegible].

The name of the new republic in South America, the United States of Brazil, comes about very naturally. The empire was divided into twenty provinces and one neutral municipality, in which lies the city of Rio de Janeiro. These provinces are now the states which compose the republic. Yet, having but one-half the number of states of her great sister of North America, Brazil has nearly an equal area. This territory is more contiguous than any of the great national divisions on the globe. The circle would be the most compact form for a nation. Brazil is not a circle, but she has a shape something like a heart.

In this vast territory, which comprises two-fifths of South America, there is, of course, a great diversity of contour. There are sea coast and lowlands and high lands, vast forest tracts, mountains and rivers. The mountain chains run mostly northward and southward, the rivers mostly northward, though the great Amazon runs east.

In all this immense area there are about 11,000,000 people. Of this nearly a million live in cities. There are a great many races comprising the population. In the north they are mostly Indians, while in the south the negro element prevails. Only one-third the whole people are white, the other two-thirds being mamalucos or mestizos, mulattoes, cafusos, or Indian and negro mixed, civilized and savage Indians, and Africans—the last comprising the most numerous unmixed race in Brazil.

The native Brazilian is a gentle kind of person, though occasionally partaking of the savage vindictiveness of the Spaniards and Portuguese who overran the territory. The Aborigines were many of them cannibals, and it is said that the Catauxis and other tribes on the river Purus kill and eat members of other tribes today. But these cannibals are chiefly confined to the banks of the Dace, Purus and other tributaries of the Amazon.



PLAZA IN RIO.

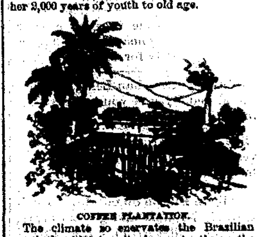
Slavery has but just been abolished in Brazil, setting free a large number of people who are now, under the act of universal suffrage, to become voters. To an educated American citizen, accustomed to the difficulties attending universal suffrage in the unenlightened portions of the United States, the spectacle of a cannibal marching up to the poles to deposit his ballot and returning to a supper off his roasted enemy is somewhat amusing. However, it is to be hoped that the intelligence of the more civilized districts will outvote the savage.

The cities have naturally grown up in the midst of the most productive land in Brazil. Consequently the planters partake somewhat of the peculiarities of city life. He is principally given to raising coffee, which has been cultivated in the field largely by the blacks. A plantation before the abolition of slavery in Brazil was very like one in the cotton states of North America before the civil war. The slave did all the work and the master got all the profit.

There are two large cities in Brazil with a population of over 150,000—Rio de Janeiro, 275,000, and Bahia which numbered about 150,000 a few years ago; though the estimates of population there vary considerably. The people in these cities are a gay, indolent, happy-go-lucky kind of people, very like the present citizens of Spain or Portugal.

Rio de Janeiro is the principal city, built on a narrow undulating plain extending along the bay. The older streets are like those of all old cities, very narrow. The newer streets are wider, and the houses that line them are of more modern design. They paint them in gay colors and ornament them with various colored tiles. Only a few are of granite or brick, and many are of stucco. The chamber of deputies and the city palace of the emperor are on the plaza. The Imperial library, which was brought from Lisbon when Dom Pedro's ancestors came over in 1807, has grown to comprise 100,000 volumes.

There are a great many pretty girls in the Brazilian cities. They are nearly all brunettes, have beautiful figures, and great dark eyes. The Brazilian senorita at 16 is beautiful. She retains her beauty for ten years or thereabout when it suddenly collapses, and at 30 she becomes a model for Rider Haggard's "She," after that aged person goes back from her 2,000 years of youth to old age.



COFFEE PLANTATION.

The climate so enervates the Brazilian youth that the senorita is constantly on the outlook for a husband from among the young North Americans who go to Brazil to enter the counting houses of the merchants. Many of the girls are wealthy, and often youngsters who go to Brazil to earn a fortune by hard labor find a fortune lying in the lap of a houri, which they have only to appropriate at will. Unfortunately, however, these girls are very ignorant and possess jealous dispositions, so that the husband who looks kindly on another is liable to raise a breeze over his head that is not easily quieted.

The religion of Brazil is almost exclusively Roman Catholic—at least, that is the religion of the nation. But Brazil is full of free thinkers, spiritualists and other kindred people. This is largely the characteristic of the men, while their wives and daughters are members of the Roman Catholic communion.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. Some of these cures are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"My daughter Mary was afflicted with scrofulous sore neck from the time she was 22 months old till she became six years of age. Lumps formed in her neck, and one of them after growing to the size of a pigeon's egg, became a running sore for over three years. We gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla, when the lump and all indications of scrofula entirely disappeared, and now she seems to be a healthy child." J. S. CARLILE, Nauright, N. J.

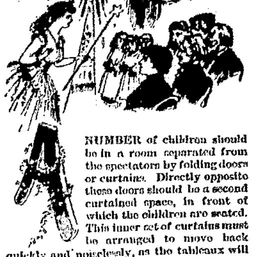
A CHRISTMAS EXERCISE.

AN ENTERTAINMENT TO BE GIVEN BEFORE THE "TREE" IS PLUCKED.

Full Directions for the Production of a Very Pretty Series of Tableaux that Will Be Sure to Please the Children and Their Elders.



A NUMBER of children should be in a room separated from the spectators by folding doors or curtains. Directly opposite these doors should be a second curtained space, in front of which the children are seated. This inner set of curtains must be arranged to move back quickly and noiselessly, as the tableaux will be represented behind them. Some of the children may be reading, some playing with toys, and some engaged in a quiet game.

The fairies should enter as glidingly and noiselessly as possible. The Fairy of Joy may be dressed in red, with holly berries or leaves, real or imitation. The Fairy of Peace appears, dressed in a soft gray, with hair smoothly arranged. She enters with hands clasped on her breast, and eyes looking downward. The Fairy of Christmas Bells will make an effective appearance attired in some light colored dress, decorated with rows of little gilt and silver bells. The Fairy of Christmas Stockings may wear a striped suit and carry a stocking full of toys in one hand. The Fairy of Christmas Greens is costumed in white, with decorations of evergreen. The Fairy of Christmas Gifts may wear a dark colored dress, trimmed with strings of popcorn, as that is a time honored decoration for the gift tree, and should carry a small silk bag full of presents. Each fairy should have a wand. These can be easily made by covering slender canes, or, better still, blackboard pointers, with gilt or silver paper. Santa Claus is attired in the regulation costume, which may be hired for the occasion.

As the outer curtains are drawn, disclosing the group of children, a ringing of bells is heard, some far away, some near at hand. The prettier it can be made to sound, the more effective the whole entertainment will be. They may accompany each tableau, beginning when the fairies cease speaking. When the bells ring the children should cease their occupations and appear to listen. Then one repeats (without rising):

The Christmas bells—the Christmas bells—
How merrily they ring!
To weary hearts a pulse of joy,
A kindlier life they bring.
The poor man on his couch of straw,
The rich on downy bed,
Hail the glad sounds as voices sweet
Of angels overhead.

The bells—the silvery Christmas bells—
O'er many a mile they sound!
And household tones are answering them
In thousand homes around.
Voices of childhood, blithe and shrill,
With youth's strong accents blend,
And manhood's deep and earnest tones
With woman's praise ascend.
—John W. Brown.

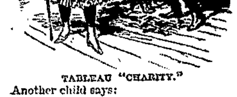


TABLEAU "CHARITY."

Another child says:

Those Christmas bells so sweetly chime,
As on the day when first they rung
So merrily, in the olden time,
And far and wide their music flung;
Shaking the tall, gray, ivied tower
With all their deep, melodious power.
They still proclaim to every ear:
Old Christmas comes but once a year.
—Thomas Miller.

A third child repeats the following, from Dickens: "Christmas is the only holiday in the year that brings the whole human family into common communion; the only time in the long calendar of the year when men and women seem, by one consent, to open their shut up hearts freely." The fourth child says:

Again the Christmas time is here,
With all its wealth of happy cheer;
Bright burns the fire, and on the wall
The holly shines in hut and hall,
And merrily from steeples high
The bells ring out to earth and sky
Their message of "Good will and peace,
May love abound—may love increase."

Ring, happy bells, across the snow;
Your silver voices come and go,
And fill the hearts of those who hear
With reverent thoughts, while Christmas cheer
Swings wide the door, and says "Come in;
For one brief day are all men kin."
To all this day "Good will and peace,
Let love abound—let love increase."

As the last words are uttered the Fairy of Joy glides in, and the children look astonished. The ringing of bells is again heard, and the fairy says:

Clash! clash! peal the bells;
Christmas joy their welcome tells;
Wealth of sunny days to be,
Sing the joy bells gleefully;
"Golden hours and days we give—
Hours and days in which to live
In the ways of truth and right,"
So the bells ring forth with might Heralding a future bright.
Clash! clash! peal the bells.
—G. Weatherby.

Dear children, the Christmas fairies are coming to see you to-night, and will show you sights that will delight you. I am the Fairy of Christmas Joy, and when I wave my wand, you will see one who has little to make her happy, but who is filled with Christmas joy.

As the fairy waves her wand a colored light should be burned, and at this time the inner curtains can be drawn without notice. The tableau represents a little girl dressed in very ragged clothing, with a basket by her side, holding a doll in her arms. She is smiling and apparently about to caress it. In a minute another light should be burned, under cover of which the curtains may be drawn and the Fairy Joy retire. These lights can effectively be used before and after each tableau. As the light burns down, the Fairy Peace enters at once and says:

Hush! the Christmas day is ending,
Angels on the earth descending
Bless the world to-night;
Glory streameth down from heaven,
Peace unto mankind is given
Through the light
That came down from heaven above,
Lighting all the world through love.
—Julia Goddard.

When the Fairy Peace waved her wand another tableau [illegible]

[illegible]

When this tableau is hidden from view, the Fairy of Christmas Bells, entering, says:

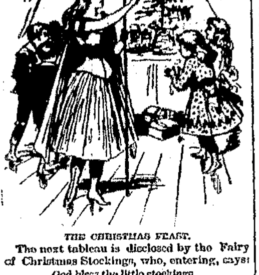
O bells! sweet bells! across the years
Half gay, half sad, your chiming;
Old joys ye tell, old sorrows swell
Throughout your tender rhyming.

O merry bells! this Christmas day
How loud and clear your ringing!
Such love and mirth o'er all the earth
Your lusty voices singing!

O happy bells! through coming years
We hear in your glad sending,
The message still of peace, good will—
All jarring discords blending.
—Caro A. Dugan.

But the poets fail to sing of a Christmas bell whose sounds are dear to all hearts, whose voice is always heeded, whose message is always pleasant. It is the Christmas dinner bell.

The tableau disclosed shows a table, apparently spread for a Christmas feast, and a maid, with white cap and apron, just in the act of ringing a large dinner bell. The ringing of bells is also heard outside to suggest the kind spoken of in the poem.



THE CHRISTMAS FEAST.

The next tableau is disclosed by the Fairy of Christmas Stockings, who, entering, says:

God bless the little stockings
All over the land to-night,
Hung in the choicest corners,
In the glow of crimson light!

The tiny, scarlet stocking,
With a hole in the heel and toe,
Worn by wonderful journeys
The darlings have to go.

The stockings, of all sizes
And patterns, great and small,
With many glad surprises,
I pray, God bless them all.
—Selected.

The tableau shown on the waving of her wand shows a row of stockings, of all sizes, hung for gifts. Beside them stands a little girl in her white gown, just pinning a folded paper on the toe of a small stocking, and looking around with a roguish smile.

The Fairy of Christmas Greens now enters and repeats the following:

The holly! the holly! oh, twine it with bay—
Come give the holly a song;
For it helps to drive stern winter away,
With its garments so somber and long;
It peeps through the trees with its berries of red
And its leaves of burnished green,
When the flowers and fruits have long been dead,
And not even the daisy is seen.
Then sing to the holly, the Christmas holly,
That hangs over peasant and king,
While we laugh and carouse 'neath its glittering boughs,
To the Christmas holly we'll sing.
—Eliza Cook.

The tableau now shown represents two boys dragging a lot of Christmas greens on a sled—one holding the rope, the other keeping the load of greens on the sled. The second boy carries an ax over his shoulder.

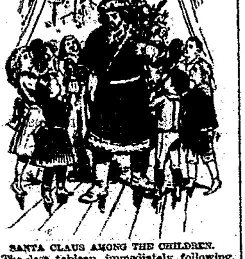
The Fairy of Christmas Gifts now enters, saying:

Oh, what's the best season for giving?
Is it when chill winter is here,
When cold makes the fireside pleasant—
The days of the glad Christmas cheer?

Or is it in glorious springtime,
When Nature her bounty bestows;
Or summer her sweetest of blessings
Flings out in the blossoming rose?

Perhaps 'tis in fall, when the harvests
Give up to mankind their rich yield;
When reapers and gleaners, rejoicing,
Are busy in each yellow field.

Ah, not at all times, in all seasons,
Love's gifts are as welcome as day;
Then take them, and, taking, remember
Thy debt to some others to pay.
—Selected.



SANTA CLAUS AMONG THE CHILDREN.

The last tableau, immediately following, shows Santa Claus with his hands full of gifts. This tableau does not end like the rest, for Santa Claus steps out and says, smiling: "I'll show you little folks a tableau that will please you more than any you've seen, and I do not need a wand either to produce it." (Throws open a door, disclosing the Christmas tree. The children now mingle with the other guests, and a distribution of gifts by Santa Claus follows.)

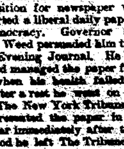
ANNIE ISABEL WILLIS.

SAMUEL WILKESON.

The Well Known Railroad Secretary Who Has Just Died.

Samuel Wilkeson, journalist, explorer and railroad official, who died recently, was born in Buffalo in 1817, graduated from Union college and studied law. He early showed a predisposition for newspaper work, and in 1856 started a liberal daily paper in Buffalo, The Democracy. Governor Seward and Thurlow Weed persuaded him to go to The Albany Evening Journal. He bought an interest and managed the paper for a year and a half, when his health failed, and he sold out. After a rest he went on the editorial staff of The New York Tribune, and eventually represented the paper in Washington. For a year immediately after the important war period he left The Tribune for The New York Times. This occurred from his indignation at Horace Greeley's act in bailing Jeff Davis.

While in The Tribune service Mr. Wilkeson was detached for the purpose of aiding in the placing of government loans. He used the press and attained a remarkable success in popularizing the loan. In 1869 the owners of the Northern Pacific railroad applied to him for assistance in [illegible]



[illegible]

Mr. Wilkeson belonged to that hardy race distinguished for physical and intellectual vigor, known as Scotch-Irish. His father was one of the founders of Buffalo, N. Y. In appearance the son was of a slender figure, but of full height and indicative of force. His hair and beard of late years was snowy white. His eyes were especially expressive.

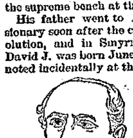
His health failing last October, he was granted an unlimited leave of absence, with full pay by the company, accompanied by a testimonial of esteem, in the hope that rest would restore him, but without avail.

JUSTICE DAVID J. BREWER.

President Harrison's Appointment to the United States Supreme Court.

His honor Associate Justice David J. Brewer is the full official designation of the new supreme court judge, and the appointment is probably the most important President Harrison has made. Members of the cabinet are great, but their terms are short—they average much less than four years—and nearly all minor appointees are removable at pleasure; but the judges of the United States supreme court are there for life or good behavior, and they have the last say on the most important matters. It has more than once happened that a decision of the supreme court had practically the effect of an amendment to the constitution.

Justice Brewer is in the very prime of life and firm health, and, accidents aside, may rival the judicial terms of Marshall and Taney. He adds another to the many proofs that talent of certain kinds is hereditary, for his father, Rev. Josiah Brewer, was a man of great ability, and his mother was a sister of the eminent Fields—David Dudley, Rev. Dr. Henry M. and Justice Stephen Field—the uncle and nephew now occupying seats on the supreme bench at the same time.



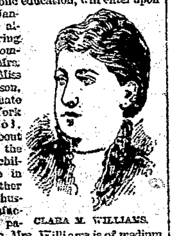
JUDGE D. J. BREWER.

His father went to Asia Minor as a missionary soon after the close of the Greek revolution, and in Smyrna, in that country, David J. was born June 20, 1837. It may be noted incidentally at this point that the children born abroad to missionaries, soldiers, sailors and diplomats lose no rights as citizens. Judge Brewer is eligible for the presidency. His parents having gone from Middletown, Conn., he would rank as a native of that place; and they returned there when he was but 2 years old. After an academic course there he entered Yale college, where he was graduated in 1856, being a classmate of Chauncey Depew. He passed a year in the office of his uncle, David Dudley Field, in New York city, and then took a course at Albany, graduating in 1858, after which he went west, and soon located in practice at Leavenworth, Kan.

Judge Brewer has declared since his appointment that, from the day he adopted law as a profession, his ambition was to reach the supreme bench, and apparently his career has been a steady progress in that direction. In 1861 he was made a United States commissioner; in 1862, judge of the probate and criminal courts in Leavenworth county; in 1864, judge of the first judicial district of Kansas, and, after an interval as teacher and school official, he was elected, in 1870, associate justice of the supreme court of Kansas. This office he held till 1884, when he was appointed United States circuit judge for the Eighth judicial circuit, including Kansas and neighboring states. From that place he is now promoted to the national supreme bench. There is a sort of pleasing harmony in such a continuous career.

Mrs. Commissioner Williams.

Mrs. Clara M. Williams, whom Mayor Grant, of New York, has appointed commissioner of public education, will enter upon her duties in January, and is already preparing herself for her coming duties. Mrs. Williams was Miss Clara M. Robinson, and is a graduate of the New York Normal school. She is now about 35 years old, the mother of two children, the one in college, the other in school. Her husband is a manufacturer of wall paper. In person Mrs. Williams is of medium height and somewhat stout. She is one of three women on the board of education, the other two being Mrs. Agnew and Mrs. Powell.



CLARA M. WILLIAMS.

Rights of a Chinese Husband.

If a man beats his wife, but does not break her limbs or maim her, the law takes no notice of it. If a wife beats her husband, she is liable to receive 100 blows, and the husband may separate from her. Those who have been shocked by the sale of women in the famine regions will be interested in knowing that the law provides that "he who from poverty sells his wife shall not be heavily punished. Let the woman revert to the last husband—that is, to the man she was sold to."—Pall Mall Gazette.

We recommend Carter's Iron Pills to every woman who is weak, nervous and discouraged; particularly those who have thin, pale lips, hands and feet, and who are without strength or ambition. These are the cases for which Carter's Iron Pills are specifically prepared, and this class cannot use them without benefit. Valuable for men also. In metal boxes at 50 cents. A SHORT LIFE.

Little McGinty, the Only Hippopotamus Ever Born in America.

It was brief but famous. The life of Little McGinty, as the baby hippopotamus born the other day at the New York zoo was named, after one who has been largely lamented of late throughout the entire land, lasted but four days and four hours.

Circumstances were against McGinty. He weighed only forty pounds at birth, which is sixty pounds short of the average weight of baby hippopotami. He was a delicate child, and when it became apparent that Fatima Murphy, his fond mother, was not equal to the strain of nursing him, Dr. Conklin and Keeper Downey knew that in raising the infant on the bottle they had a delicate task on their hands. It is an interesting fact in this connection that this is the way in which all hippopotami found on exhibition have been raised. The Arabs who procure the animals have learned that when a young "hippo" has been raised by its mother in the natural way it has imbibed so fully the wild instincts of its progenitors that tame submission to confinement is an impossibility.

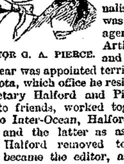
Hence their practice is to kill the mother as soon as it has given birth to its young, capture the latter and bring it up by hand, but the bottle-fed infant of all kinds is what the insurance people call a "risky life," and the Arabs fail to bring to maturity all the hippopotami they catch, even though the conditions of climate and their intimate knowledge of the proper course of procedure are in their favor. So, in the case of McGinty, the odds were all against him from the start, and when the weather changed his doom was practically sealed.

Dr. Conklin, superintendent of the Central park menagerie, feels that a mistake was made in naming the baby after an individual whose life, as far as publicly known, was a succession of disasters, and that sober second thought would have suggested the greater propriety of calling him Stanley or Emin Pasha. At the same time he was of the opinion that there would have been no saving grace in rendering this much homage to the gallant explorers of the former home of the dead baby's progenitors.

The skin of McGinty will be stuffed and placed in the same glass case with the remains of the lamented Mr. Crowley.

Gilbert A. Pierce.

North Dakota, in choosing Gilbert A. Pierce as her new senator, gained a man of some literary reputation and a good public speaker.



SENATOR G. A. PIERCE.

Pierce was born in the state of New York, and is 50 years of age. When quite young he left his home for Indiana, and became interested in journalism. In 1884 he was one of the managers of President Arthur's campaign, and in July of the same year was appointed territorial governor of Dakota, which office he resigned in 1887.

Secretary Halford and Pierce, who are intimate friends, worked together on The Chicago Inter-Ocean, Halford as managing editor and the latter as associate editor. When Halford removed to Indianapolis, Pierce became the editor, and headed the granger movement while he held that position. The Farmers' Alliance is now his strongest supporter. He is a good editor, and a novelist also, but, like Beecher, he does not pride himself on his story writing. Pierce is probably as well read on Dickens' works as any one on either continent. "Dickens' Dictionary" is his most valuable book, which is greatly appreciated by students of Dickens for its value and convenience. Pierce's plan was used by Charles Dickens, Jr., in the preparation of a similar book.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase money, if satisfactory results does not follow their use. These remedies have won their popularity purely on their merits. R. E. Phillips' druggist.

THE great Cronin trial at Chicago has ended and the jury have rendered their verdict. Beggs gets off free, Kunze is sentenced to three years in the penitentiary and Coughlin, O'Sullivan and Burke are sentenced to life imprisonment. The customary motion for a new trial was entered and the 18th day of January fixed as the date when the judge would hear the motion argued. The verdict rendered is considered a compromise as it is generally conceded that all but one of the jurors were in favor of hanging the three sentenced to life imprisonment.

Resolutions on the Death of C.S. Osgood.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Savings Bank held at this bank Dec. 18, 1889, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we deeply deplore the loss to this Board of still another of its original but fast diminishing members.—Calvin S. Osgood.—That eighteen years of intimate association with him has taught us to highly appreciate his perfect honesty and integrity and to dearly love his unassuming dignity, great firmness and charity in all things; while at the same time we have so greatly admired and relied upon his unobtrusive intelligence and sagacity in all that pertained to the best interests of our institution.

Resolved, That while we feel the feebleness of words to comfort, we can not refrain from expressing our heartfelt sympathy with the sorrowing family, knowing that their loss is in no small degree our own.

Ordered, That the foregoing resolutions be entered on record in the proceeding of this Board; published in the village papers and a copy sent to the family of the deceased.

Honor for a Former Fultonian.

The great question of drainage is one that has been agitating the minds of citizens in the great city of Chicago for years. A scheme has been devised to accomplish this purpose by lowering the Chicago river, thus creating a current, and by this means accomplishing the object. A vast outlay of the city's money is necessary, and for this reason the high esteem in which Mr. Murray Nelson, a former Fultonian and brother of Mr. W. S. Nelson of this village, is held can readily be seen when we see that he received the largest number of votes of those recently elected as drainage trustees. The Chicago Tribune has the following editorial in this connection:—

"The revised and corrected returns in this morning's paper show that Mr. Murray Nelson stands at the head of the poll. It was not any bland and winning ways that won him this distinction, for he is less given to the suaviter in modo than to the fortiter in re. That which did it was his aggressive and unrelenting honesty as shown during his service in the County Board when he fought the boodlers; not the least of his merits being the preparing of the excellent reform law which does so much to keep County Commissioners straight at present. The people wanted a man in the Drainage Board who would not only fight boodlers but would do it in an aggressive, and unpleasant way, just as when he sent some of his associates in the board to Joliet, while others with reputations fatally wounded barely managed to escape the penitentiary. Had Mr. Nelson been running for the ordinary political office where suavity and affability and smiles and hand shaking are in demand he would have been at the foot of the poll. But the demands of the situation were peculiar, and by a certain process of natural selection Mr. Nelson was chosen for the work to do. The office picked him out, not he the office.

Fresh Eggs Every Day.

A good story is told of a grocer not far from Boston town who had a customer that must have fresh eggs every day. The grocer weary of having the eggs returned as not fresh, tried putting the date when laid upon all eggs sent to the customer's house. By this means, it is said, some grocers become so expert as to be able to obtain fresh laid, Eastern, or Western eggs, all from the same basket. With our Boston grocerman it worked to a charm, until one morning when preparing the eggs to send his troublesome customer he forgot the day of the month and dated the eggs ahead. At evening he was visited by the gentleman, who producing one of the eggs remarked, "I find," said he, checking a smile, "these eggs were to be laid to-morrow." This story illustrates how difficult it is to supply the demand for fresh eggs. It has never yet been done. For this reason some egg-raisers, who are known to send honest fresh eggs to market, get 50 cents a dozen the year around. Any kind of decent eggs will bring forty cents or more during the next eight weeks. Therefore make the pullets and old hens lay now. Some persons do this even in coldest weather. A lady told us last year, "my fifty hens, half pullets, are now, Dec. 26, laying two dozen eggs and upward every day. But the secret of my success is in the fact that I have used more or less Sheridan's Condition Powder in their food, for several months past, so that they are in condition to lay. My hens are healthy all the time." Another lady says, "I have used Sheridan's Powder for three years. My neighbors are getting interested in it, but they do not use half enough; one or two small packs is no fair test. I order six cans at a time. During an eight weeks trial, using Sheridan's Powder, I got from forty hens 1,707 eggs." Do your hens lay like that? For 50 cents in stamps I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House Street, Boston, Mass., will send by mail two 25 cent packs; five packs for $1.00; or for $1.20 a 2¼ pound can of Powder post-paid; Six cans for $5.00, express prepaid. For $1.50 the Farm-Poultry monthly will be sent a full year, and a can of Powder, post-paid.

Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam for Coughs and Colds does is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The large bottles are 50c. and $1. We advise a trial. It may save you from consumption. 32w4

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12, 1889.

George Washington could find no flaw in the sunshine of Wednesday the one hundredth anniversary of his inauguration as President of the United States. At 10 o'clock the Capitol was closed to the general public, admission being only by card. Before 11 o'clock a long line of people were in waiting. Not since Mr. Blaine spoke at the memorial session in February 1882, of President Garfield's untimely taking off, has so large and distinguished an audience occupied the House. The House floor was covered with extra seats for the distinguished guests.

A red line made a semi-circle around the Speaker's desk, composed of red leather sofas and cushions, placed there for the use of the President and his Cabinet and the members of the Supreme Bench. A big, imposing chair awaited the President and one nearly like it was ready for the Secretary of State. Back of these sofas were cane seat chairs placed between the desks of the members for the accommodation of the representatives of the several foreign governments. All over the House were seats prominently placarded for prominent guests.

Some of the arrangements were badly made, or rather many arrangements were not made at all. When the Governors of the thirteen original States entered in a body they stood around for about five minutes, a lonely little knot of gray haired men, and no one spoke to them. General Fitzburgh Lee, who loves to pose and is generally the object of an ovation, looked deeply mortified, as did Governor Jackson. No seats had been provided for these guests and it was only after considerable delay that room was found for them on the last row of seats on the Democratic side. It was an unpardonable blunder, and is another instance of the blundering incompetency of Sergeant-at-Arms Leedom, who allowed his cashier to walk off with everything in sight.

The scene in the galleries was very brilliant, the costumes of the ladies being very rich. The ladies of the White House were not present on account of the death of Mrs. Lord, Mrs. Harrison's sister. Two cabinet ladies also remained away through good-natured, but slightly over-drawn, sympathy with Mrs. Harrison, but Mrs. Blaine and Miss Blaine were present as well as others of the cabinet ladies.

The music was of course of the finest character. With a judgment rare in Congressional committees of arrangement the Chaplain of the Senate, Dr. Butler was assigned to pray and Rev. Mr. Milburn to invoke the benediction. If this order had been reversed, Rev. Mr. Milburn's unfortunate ability to "tell the Lord all the news" as Speaker Reed says, might have asserted itself.

The oration of Chief Justice Fuller, who wore his office robes and read his remarks in a clear though not strong voice and with very little attempt at oratorical effect and was a very sensible and scholarly production. Of course, an audience of Americans who have been raised on daily doses of George Washington's virtues and the glories of the Republic cannot be expected to give rapt attention to a repetition of the old facts, but it was a good oration for all that. At its conclusion the applause was led off by Secretary Blaine, who also warmly congratulated the orator.

The Silcott investigating committee will report to-morrow. It will exonerate the book-keeper and paying teller of Sergeant-at-Arms office from all blame or charge of neglect. The committee will also state that it finds its jurisdiction limited so far as making recommendations is concerned, but will submit the statutes governing the Sergeant-at-Arms and leave it to the House to decide whether the loss shall fall on the individual members of the House or on the Government.

A bill will undoubtedly be introduced in the House to reimburse the members from the Treasury. This bill will if passed by the House, be probably killed in the Senate, where it can only meet the most bitter opposition.

On sober second thought most lawyers are agreed that cashier Silcott acted as the personal messenger of the individual members when he drew the money from the Treasury, that the receipts had been merely handed to him like so many transferred checks and he was only a messenger of theirs. Every U. S. Treasurer during the past twenty years has taken occasion to remind Congress annually of the crying necessity for a safer system of paying thier own salaries. Everybody has been warned. A bill to reimburse the members would be a far bolder measure than the salary grab in the seventies.

The marriage of Miss Julia A. Kimball to Henry Milford Steele occurred this morning at the residence of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Kimball on Third street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. C. Breaker. Only immediate relatives of the contracting parties were present.

Mr. Steele, who takes away one of Fulton's favorite daughters is art editor of Scribner's Magazine and is high up in his profession. Miss Kimball recently resigned her position in the Union school which she had filled so well for several years. She will be greatly missed in social circles. Everyone will join with THE TIMES in wishing her every happiness in her new home. The newly married couple left on the noon train for New York their future home.

The County Grange.

The County Grange held a private session at the Court House at Oswego Thursday last. The following were elected officers:—Worthy Master, Josiah Betts, Bowens Corners; Overseer, Mr. Lonis, Hannibal; Lecturer, Mr. Haven, Vermillion; Stewart, Mr. Haws, South Hannibal; Assistant Stewart, G. W. Robinson, Lacona; Chaplain, B. S. Drake, Demster; Treasurer, Anna Upcraft, South West Oswego; Secretary, Jennie B. Stone, Scriba; Gate Keeper, Mr. Fuller, Central Square; Pomona, Mrs. J. C. Fuller; Flora, Eva Potter; Lady Assistant Stewart, Mrs. C. G. Stevens; Executive committee, John Upcraft, Southwest Oswego; Byron Hartson, Union Square; Mrs. Lonis, Hannibal. Mr. J. Upcraft of Southwest Oswego was recommended as Deputy.

Dr Little's Lecture.

The close of the Y. M. C. A. course was Dr. Little's postponed lecture on Napoleon Bonaparte at the opera house last evening. Dr. Little has studied closely (as he does everything he undertakes) the career of this monarch. Having very little regard for Napoleon's methods of conducting campaigns, his unnecessary slaughter of soldiers and esteem in which he held himself, the professor proceeded to lay before the audience in a manner which few are capable of doing and which probably no one present ever heard before the insatiate nature of this genius of the 19th century who the lecturer termed "a thing not a person." He contrasted Napoleon and the results of his conquests with George Washington and the results of his. The genius of the man was not questioned but the quality of the same was. After hearing this able lecture one would naturally come away with the conviction that in the "great Napoleon" something very essential was lacking—that he was a wonderful man but a thoroughly bad one.

Bradner Montague, the canal boat captain who shot at Under.sheriff VanBuren, while the latter was in search of Bert Snyder, a jail breaker, was released on bail Friday afternoon. Lewis N. Ostrander of Phœnix and John W. Montague of Cortland, signed the bond, which is the sum of $500.

A. R. Ney proprietor of the Boston Bazaar has for some time past missed small articles from the front of his store. Two lads were arrested Monday afternoon and three more later on, their ages ranging from 10 to 14 years. There were two Reynolds boys, Braidy, Hawksby and Groesbeck. The case was up before Police Justice Sharp until nearly midnight. Mr. Ney did not wish to prosecute the boys but wanted the thieving stopped. The Police Justice let them off with a fine of $1.50 each. It is cheaper than they will ever be able to get out again.

Be sure to see the great bargains in Holiday Goods at the Syracuse Drug Store before purchasing.

Young Men's Christian Association

All who are interested in the promotion of a Lyceum are requested to meet in the rooms on Friday evening this week at 8 o'clock.

The gymnasium class which should have met last evening, will meet this evening at 8:30. Twenty-seven boys enjoyed the privileges of our rooms last Saturday. They were divided into two classes for instruction in gymnastics. Come again boys and bring others with you. All boys between the ages of 11 and 15 are invited to come every Saturday a. m., from 10 to 12 o'clock.

We are not in possession of full particulars in regard to the New Year's Reception which the Women's Auxiliary intend giving to the young men of our village, but it is a settled thing that such will be held, and, also, that it will be in the afternoon from 3 to 10. Refreshments will be served and a musical and literary program rendered by some of the best artists in town. A treat is in store for all who come.

Rev. J. C. Meade, of Canastota, addressed the young men's meeting last Sunday in a decidedly practical and instructive manner. It will certainly be long remembered and helpful to all who heard him.

The Swedish Quartet.

The concert last Friday evening at the Opera House by the Swedish quartet was one that gave extreme pleasure to all lovers of fine music. The class of music and the ability to render the same we have only seen surpassed in Fulton by the Temple Quartet. Miss Gleason as an elocutionist was very good. She, however, made the mistake or was unfortunate in having the "Chariot Race," from Ben Hur, as her first selection, a piece that had several times before been given before nearly the same audience.

Some miscreants broke into the store of J. H. Brooks at the corner of Broadway and First street last Sunday night and stole a quantity of cigars and several other articles. They made an entrance by breaking a cellar window. Such acts as these are becoming altogether too frequent and strenuous efforts should be made to discover the culprits that the full limit of the law may be dealt out to them.

John Satterlee, the barber on Cayuga street was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Mrs. H. C. Giesler charging him with "seriously disturbing the public peace and outraging public decency" by swearing at and in the presence of Mrs. Giesler in a loud and boisterous manner. A jury trial was held yesterday but the jury failed to agree and the case was carried over until Friday afternoon at 2 p. m. when it will again be tried before Justice Sharp and a jury.

PEEBLES & CO:

Can you tell me how I can make ten dollars do the work of twenty in getting my winter Clothing?

Anxiously Yours,
I. M. SMART.

"No, Smarty, we can't tell you how to make twenty dollars go into ten. That is not in our arithmetic. Ten dollars won't buy you a twenty dollar suit, but we can sell you a ratler for that X.

Mr. Poore writes us:

DEAR SIR:

What is the lowest I can get me a good winter coat for?

Q. T. POORE.

The lowest, the very lowest, you can get a good winter coat (an overcoat, we suppose) is $5. You can get a coat at lower figures, but it will cost you more in wear. We may say to you that we have the cheapest line of good overcoats in town.

The Markie & Mackie's Metropolitan Minstrel Company played to a good house here last evening. The entertainment throughout was of a high order and gave general satisfaction. Special mention should be made of the choice selections rendered by the orchestra, the contortion act by Jas. Livingstone, the song and dance team Markie & Mackie, the acrobatic team, Markie & Barry and in fact everything presented was the cause of round of applause. Should this company play a return date in this place we predict they would be greeted by a full house.

A working woman said she would walk ten miles to get the Ball corset, if she couldn't get it without. She had had experience with it.

That corset is just as easy the minute you put it on as it is when half worn out.

You can go to your store and get it and wear it two or three weeks, and then you will know what comfort is in a corset. If you are disappointed in it in any way, go back to the store and get your money within three weeks or so—you'll get it. The maker pays the merchant to do that.

There's a primer on Corsets for you at the store.

Don't feed poultry for a day before killing.

Parsnips keep best in the ground till Spring and come out with improved flavor.

Large quantities of ashes are exported every year from Canada to the United States.

Short rye crops in Russia and Germany have caused an improved export demand.

Iowa is reported as leading the country this year with a potato crop of 20,000,000 bushels.

Very favorable crops were made by a number of farmers in Eastern New York who last Spring began the growing of hemp, both quantity and quality being excellent.

It is time the coops were put away for the winter. They should first be repaired and whitewashed.

That English syndicate has at last gobbled the Pillsbury and Washburn flour mills at Minneapolis, at $5,200,000; property transferred Nov. 1.

The price paid for the mammoth horses that draw the transfer wagons of Denver will average $400 each. It pays to breed and raise big horses.

Colorado's wheat yield the present year leads all the rest. It stands twenty-six bushels as against fifteen—the average everywhere.

Barley is the only grain crop that America imports. This is quite curious, since the country is susceptible of growing millions of bushels of export.

The Spanish have a proverb: "Woman loves with her ear, but man with his eye." Persuasive wooing captures a woman's heart while an attractive appearance conquers the man. To retain man's affection and secure enduring happiness, a woman should be as charming in married life as in the days of bewitching maidenhood. Her captivating weapons are a fair and blooming complexion, soft and spotless hands, freedom from skin and scalp impurities, pimples, chapping and the possession of the delicate bloom of perfect health. Cole's Carbolisoap, the perfect medicinal toilet, bath and nursery soap is her salvation. Price 25 cents.

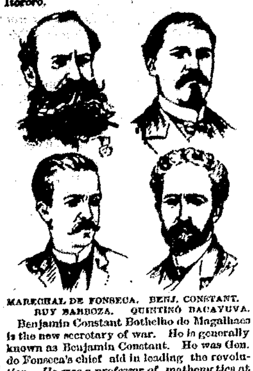
BRAZIL'S NEW RULERS.

The President and His Three Principal Ministers.

Here are pictures of the provisional president of the new republic of Brazil, and of the three chief ministers in his cabinet. Deodoro da Fonseca, who was the organizer and head of the revolution, is now provisional president of the United States of Brazil. He is a man 65 years of age, has been a soldier all his life, and is said to be devotedly attached to the army. He served during the Paraguay campaign, and was wounded at the battle of Itororo.



MARECHAL DE FONSECA. BENJ. CONSTANT.
RUY BARBOZA. QUINTINO BACAYUVA.

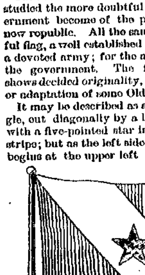
Benjamin Constant Bothelho de Magalhaes is the new secretary of war. He is generally known as Benjamin Constant. He was Gen. de Fonseca's chief aid in leading the revolution. He was a professor of mathematics at the Military school. He is a disciple of Augusto Comte in philosophy, and is credited with having done some great work in mathematics.

Ruy Barboza, the new minister of finance, has long been a leader of the republican element. He has been noted as an anti-clerical, and one of his most famous speeches was a funeral oration over the body of a Free Mason who had been excommunicated by the pope, in which he bitterly attacked the church. At one time he introduced into the chamber a bill cutting off the allowance of a German prince who had married a daughter of the emperor of Brazil and upon her death had returned to Germany to live at his ease. Minister Barboza is still young, and is looked upon as one of the future great men of South America.

Quintino Bacayuva, the new minister of foreign affairs, is one of the leading newspaper men in Brazil. His paper is The O Paiz, published in Rio de Janeiro, and said to be the leading paper in the country. It has always been an independent paper, and has had much influence in shaping public opinion on moderate lines. The present is his first venture into politics as a personal matter.

The more the late revolution in Brazil is studied the more doubtful do students of government become of the permanency of the new republic. All the same, it has a beautiful flag, a well established administration and a devoted army; for the army in fact made the government. The flag is unique. It shows decided originality, being no mere copy or adaptation of some Old World flag.

It may be described as a bright red rectangle, cut diagonally by a broad white stripe, with a five-pointed star in the center of the stripe; but as the left side of the white stripe begins at the upper left hand corner of the flag, and the right side terminates at the lower right hand corner, we may say that there are two red triangles separated by a white field. As the star in field is blue, the Brazilians have the same colors as the United States flag; but as the latter emphasizes the division into states, the former emphasizes the unity of the new republic.



THE BRAZILIAN FLAG.

The latest arrivals from Rio and Para state that, if it were not for the new flag over the public buildings and vessels, there would be no external signs that anything unusual had happened. Business goes on exactly as before. The same men run the custom houses and general harbor business. There is no unusual display, no shouting, none of what Little Dorrit's Mr. Meagles anathematized in Paris as "Their plaguey allonging and morshonging." Gen. Fonseca, who got up the revolution, is acting president, and other places are filled by his coadjutors; but it is announced that this government is provisional only, and that a regular system will soon be inaugurated by an election at which all citizens who can read may vote.

The flurry over the change did not last more than a week, and this is one of many reasons urged for doubting the permanency of the new order. "It did not come on naturally—it was too sudden. People generally know nothing about it, and it had not been discussed; it was simply a 'coup d'etat' of the army, etc.," say the Conservatives. And in view of what revolutions generally are, there certainly is an appearance of truth about these statements.

Bright's Disease.

A Ten-Year-Old Child Saved After the Failure of Four Physicians.

My little girl, ten years of age, was taken sick in March, 188[illegible], with scarlet fever. When recovering she took a severe cold, which developed Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. Her ankles, feet and eyes were terribly swollen; she had a burning fever, and all the symptoms of an aggravated case of Bright's Disease. Four of our best physicians attended her, but without success, and

Her Life was Despaired of.

But a mother's love and prayers surmount all difficulties, and I determined to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y. This was a last resort, and I hoped, although my little daughter's case was a very severe one, that the Favorite Remedy would do for her what it had done for others whose condition had not been, seemingly, so hopeless. How happy I am that I determined upon this course—for an improvement was at once perceptible. The [illegible]—her appetite improved—she gained six pounds in a short time, and one by one the well known and dreaded symptoms of the disease left her. Words fail to express my gratitude, and I cannot too earnestly commend the Favorite Remedy. It was WORTH KNOWING.

Don't feed poultry for a day before killing.

Parsnips keep best in the ground till Spring and come out with improved flavor.

Large quantities of ashes are exported every year from Canada to the United States.

Short rye crops in Russia and Germany have caused an improved export demand.

Iowa is reported as leading the country this year with a potato crop of 20,000,000 bushels.

Very favorable crops were made by a number of farmers in Eastern New York who last Spring began the growing of hemp, both quantity and quality being excellent.

It is time the coops were put away for the winter. They should first be repaired and whitewashed.

That English syndicate has at last gobbled the Pillsbury and Washburn flour mills at Minneapolis, at $5,200,000; property transferred Nov. 1.

The price paid for the mammoth horses that draw the transfer wagons of Denver will average $400 each. It pays to breed and raise big horses.

Colorado's wheat yield the present year leads all the rest. It stands twenty-six bushels as against fifteen—the average everywhere.

Barley is the only grain crop that America imports. This is quite curious, since the country is susceptible of growing millions of bushels of export.

All Broke Down.

The Spanish have a proverb: "Woman loves with her ear, but man with his eye." Persuasive wooing captures a woman's heart while an attractive appearance conquers the man. To retain man's affection and secure enduring happiness, a woman should be as charming in married life as in the days of bewitching maidenhood. Her captivating weapons are a fair and blooming complexion, soft and spotless hands, freedom from skin and scalp impurities, pimples, chapping and the possession of the delicate bloom of perfect health. Cole's Carbolisoap, the perfect medicinal toilet, bath and nursery soap is her salvation. Price 25 cents.

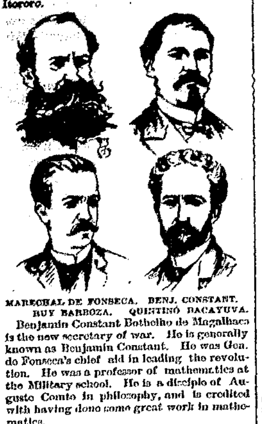
BRAZIL'S NEW RULERS.

The President and His Three Principal Ministers.

Here are pictures of the provisional president of the new republic of Brazil, and of the three chief ministers in his cabinet. Deodora de Fonseca, who was the organizer and head of the revolution, is now provisional president of the United States of Brazil. He is a man 65 years of age, has been a soldier all his life, and is said to be devotedly attached to the army. He served during the Paraguay campaign, and was wounded at the battle of Itororo.



MARECHAL DE FONSECA. BENJ. CONSTANT.
RUY BARBOZA. QUINTINO BACAYUVA.

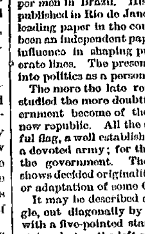
Benjamin Constant Bothelho de Magalhaes is the new secretary of war. He is generally known as Benjamin Constant. He was Gen. do Fonseca's chief aid in leading the revolution. He was a professor of mathematics at the Military school. He is a disciple of Augusto Comte in philosophy, and is credited with having done some great work in mathematics.

Ruy Barboza, the new minister of finance, has long been a leader of the republican element. He has been noted as an anti-clerical, and one of his most famous speeches was a funeral oration over the body of a Free Mason who had been excommunicated by the pope, in which he bitterly attacked the church. At one time he introduced into the chamber a bill cutting off the allowance of a German prince who had married a daughter of the emperor of Brazil and upon her death had returned to Germany to live at his ease. Minister Barboza is still young, and is looked upon as one of the future great men of South America.

Quintino Bacayuva, the new minister of foreign affairs, is one of the leading newspaper men in Brazil. His paper is The O Paiz, published in Rio de Janeiro, and said to be the leading paper in the country. It has always been an independent paper, and has had much influence in shaping public opinion on moderate lines. The present is his first venture into politics as a personal matter.

The more the late revolution in Brazil is studied the more doubtful do students of government become of the permanency of the new republic. All the same, it has a beautiful flag, a well established administration and a devoted army; for the army in fact made the government. The flag is unique. It shows decided originality, being no mere copy or adaptation of some Old World flag.

It may be described as a bright red rectangle, cut diagonally by a broad white stripe, with a five-pointed star in the center of the stripe; but as the left side of the white stripe begins at the upper left hand corner of the flag, and the right side terminates at the lower right hand corner, we may say that there are two red triangles separated by a white field. As the star in field is blue, the Brazilians have the same colors as the United States flag; but as the latter emphasizes the division into states, the former emphasizes the unity of the new republic.

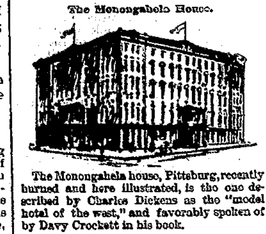


THE BRAZILIAN FLAG.

The latest arrivals from Rio and Para state that, if it were not for the new flag over the public buildings and vessels, there would be no external signs that anything unusual had happened. Business goes on exactly as before. The same men run the custom houses and general harbor business. There is no unusual display, no shouting, none of what Little Dorrit's Mr. Meagles anathematized in Paris as "Their plaguey allonging and marshonging." Gen. Fonseca, who got up the revolution, is acting president, and other places are filled by his coadjutors; but it is announced that this government is provisional only, and that a regular system will soon be inaugurated by an election at which all citizens who can read may vote.

The flurry over the change did not last more than a week, and this is one of many reasons urged for doubting the permanency of the new order. "It did not come on naturally—it was too sudden. People generally know nothing about it, and it had not been discussed; it was simply a 'coup d'etat' of the army, etc.," say the Conservatives. And in view of what revolutions generally are, there certainly is an appearance of truth about these statements.

The Monongahela House.



The Monongahela house, Pittsburg, recently burned and here illustrated, is the one described by Charles Dickens as the "model hotel of the west," and favorably spoken of by Davy Crockett in his book.

With this is given a cut of the knives alleged to have been the property of the murdered Dr. Cronin, and the production of which on the trial caused so much discomfort to ex-Detective Coughlin from whom they were taken.

Old soup under new names is one of the "evolutions gastronomic" from the restaurants of the Paris exposition.

Bright's Disease.

A Ten-Year-Old Child Saved After the Failure of Four Physicians.

My little girl, ten years of age, was taken sick in March, 188[illegible], with scarlet fever. When recovering she took a severe cold, which developed Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. Her ankles, feet and eyes were terribly swollen; she had a burning fever, and all the symptoms of an aggravated case of Bright's Disease. Four of our best physicians attended her, but without success, and

Her Life was Despaired of.

But a mother's love and prayers surmount all difficulties, and I determined to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y. This was a last resort, and I hoped, although my little daughter's case was a very severe one, that the Favorite Remedy would do for her what it had done for others whose condition had not been, seemingly, so hopeless. How happy I am that I determined upon this course—for an improvement was at once perceptible. The feverish heat—her appetite improved—she gained six pounds in a short time, and one by one the well known and dreaded symptoms of the disease left her. Words fail to express my gratitude, and I cannot too earnestly recommend the Favorite Remedy. It was

A Word to Invalids.

You are cautioned against the purchase of Whiskies with high-sounding names. In most cases those high-toned brands are used to cover compounds abominable in taste and absolutely injurious in their consequences to the consumer.

My Whiskies have been before the public for over 15 years. They have stood the test thoroughly, having been analyzed by some of the most expert chemists throughout the country, and in every instance their absolute purity is established and highly commended upon. My brand—the plain I. W. HARPER WHISKEY—carried off the highest honors at New Orleans over all Sour Mash Whiskies displayed from the State of Kentucky. Respectfully,

I. W. HARPER, Distiller,

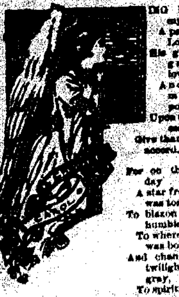
MERRY CHRISTMAS!

CHRISTMAS CAROLS.



Sing loudly, O
my soul,
A paean to the Lord!
His goodness,
grace and love extol,
And for his mercies poured Upon thee as the seasons roll,
Give thanks in glad accord.

For on this happy day
A star from heaven
was born,
To blazon out the humble way
To where our Lord
was born,
And change earth's twilight, cold and gray,
To spiritual morn.

Rejoice, my soul, and know
That Christ is born anew,
His grace new mercies daily show,
His works our work imbue;
And to the world his words outgo
In endless love and true.
William E. S. Fales.

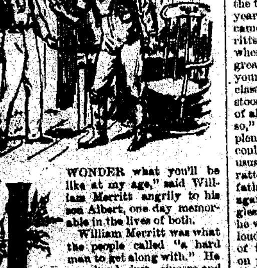
"Merry Christmas!"—ring it out
All ye happy festal bells,
Through the sweet magnolia groves,
Frozen moors, or snow heaped fells.
Carols rise, and yule fires glow,
Sprays of silver mistletoe
Shine from out the dark green pine.
Yule tide, peace and joy be thine!

"Blessed Christmas!"—ring it out,
All ye tuneful festal bells,
Unto cheerless hearts, wherein
Neither hope nor gladness dwells.
Heavens smile, and stars shine out
All our yule decked homes about;
Angels stand within the door—
Christmas tide is come once more!
—Helen Chase.

THE MERRITT MATTER.

HOW HELEN BLAKE BROUGHT ABOUT A CHRISTMAS RECONCILIATION.

[Copyright, 1889, by American Press Association.]



I WONDER what you'll be like at my age," said William Merritt angrily to his son Albert, one day memorable in the lives of both.

William Merritt was what the people called "a hard man to get along with." He was hard, just, sincere and severe. He began mature life as a flatboat captain, and finished his training as sheriff of an Indiana county. A born ruler, at 50 years of age he knew absolutely nothing of any methods save stern command and force ready for instant application. To this he added a habit of perpetual fault finding.

He had been going over the hoary harangue, with which some old people have insulted young ones since the days of Homer, about the good boys and the industrious young men of his early life and the degenerate sons of [illegible] days, when Albert's satirical humor [illegible].

"You're mighty little account now," said [illegible]. "What'll you be at my age?"

"I suppose," said Albert, unconsciously imitating his father's sneer, "I'll do like other old fools and tell lies about the big things I did when I was a boy."

[illegible] one of those insults which some men consider "the first blow," and the second fell [illegible]. Raising his broad, right hand, [illegible] with rage, the father brought it down flat across the son's mouth. The blood flew from Albert's nose as he staggered back, [illegible] gazed an instant on the father, then turned away with clinched teeth and [illegible].

[illegible] his confidant, Sam McCorkle, the drunken shoemaker's boy near by, who was of the same age as Albert, but knew [illegible] as much of the tricks and devices [illegible]. At 10 years Sam was an [illegible] tricks; at 15 he was simply [illegible].

[illegible]

[illegible] Christmas day had come, for Albert [illegible] had made no sign.

When Helen Blake was told that Albert Merritt was a "runaway boy" she merely said, "Ah, indeed," and bent very low over her work; but she knew why he had gone—knew it, indeed, about as well as he did.

Ere long she and Mrs. Merritt seemed to have a good deal to say to each other. They seldom if ever mentioned Albert, but it always seemed that the mother was much cheered after a visit from Helen. In her own desponding heart the mother said: "He will never come back, he is too much like his father," a favorite delusion with mothers, by the way. And so, on this sad Christmas day, the two sorrowful women exchanged deep sympathies without exchanging a word on the subject nearest their hearts, and the mother felt that night as if volumes had been spoken on the subject, when in fact it had not been mentioned. And thereafter Helen came oftener and oftener, and somehow after each visit the mother felt an assurance that all would be right, and felt it just the same whether Albert's name was mentioned or not.

How, after the first shock was passed, Helen Blake never felt a doubt in her bosom that she would in good time receive some word from Albert Merritt, and she would have risked much on her conviction that she would hear before either of his parents, though she could not have told you why, and probably would not if she could, for the best farm in Jackson township. Yet she knew it all the same, and visited the Merritts often, and at each visit it somehow fell out that something rather singular happened.

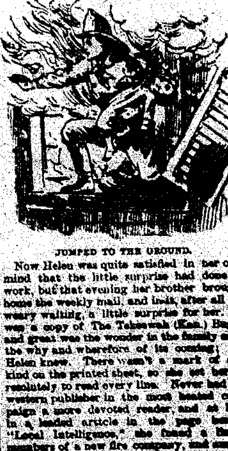
On one occasion she grew quite hilarious in reminiscences of a certain school exhibition, and told how the teacher had photographs of the whole class taken, a set for all, and how childish the pictures looked now, and how everybody had changed, though it was but six years ago, and then she brought out the photographs—cheap, tawdry things they were, but among them was one of a tall, fair boy, with all the glow of class leadership in his eye, and light hair curling around a bold forehead, and under it, in round boyish script, was the autograph, "Albert Merritt."

A pang shot through the father's heart, and he longed for her to talk of his boy; but she rattled on about Tom and Jennie and Mattie, and soon hastened home.

But the mother noticed that Helen "had forgotten her pictures," and so they lay on the looking glass stand for many a day, where the father often saw the presentiment of his boy, but he never touched it, and they lay there till Helen came again.

This time she brought a "story paper" for Mrs. Merritt, saying that the main story in it had interested her very much; and after she was gone William Merritt picked it up and pished and pshawed and ridiculed the pictures, but he read the story. It was a commonplace novelette of a son, who had fled from a harsh father and enlisted in the Federal army, and who was sick almost unto death in a southern hospital, and how in delirium he babbled of home, and how a Sister of Charity wrote to the father, who came and patiently nursed his boy back to life and love and forgiveness. A commonplace story—one of ten thousand war stories of the time—but the father's hand trembled as he read, and he rushed to the field and drove his work with unusual energy and shouted louder than ever at his team, and at night was stern and silent and solemn to a degree that surprised even his long suffering wife.

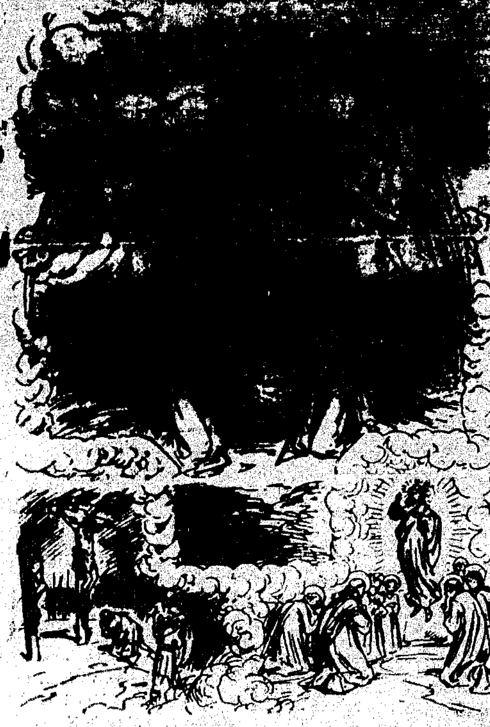
The other children would occasionally venture a reference to Albert, and now when Helen came the father would blame the runaway; but she only listened quietly and asked if they had ever heard of him, and turned the talk to their school days. And so two years passed away and the third Christmas came. In celebration of the day the Merritts were to be the guests of the Blakes, and when they gathered in the big room of the great farm house it happened that all the young people present were of that last day class at the head of which Albert Merritt had stood. Of course Helen Blake never thought of alluding to such a fact—"it just happened so," her parents thought—but there were plenty in a class of eight young people who could talk as fast as they could think, and usually did it, too. And so the conversation rattled on about that glorious day, and the father, whose heart was literally pounding against his ribs, and whose internal struggles were such that he could not tell whether he was eating turkey or oak chips, talked loudly and aggressively to those at his end of the table, and quite overbore Mr. Blake on politics, and finally offered to bet "the pick of his horses agin' a yearlin' calf" that his candidate for the presidency would have 500,000 majority over any man the other side could put up next year.

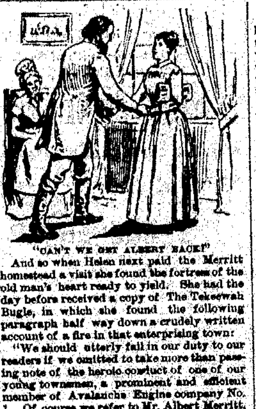


JUMPED TO THE GROUND.

Now Helen was quite satisfied in her own mind that the little surprise had done its work, but that evening her brother brought home the weekly mail, and in it, after all her weary waiting, a little surprise for her. It was a copy of The Tekeewah (Kan.) Bugle, and great was the wonder in the family as to the why and wherefore of its coming; but Helen knew. There wasn't a mark of any kind on the printed sheet, so she set herself resolutely to read every line. Never had far western publisher in the most heated campaign a more devoted reader, and at last, in a leaded article in the page headed "Local Intelligence," she found a list of members of a new fire company, and among the names was "Albert Merritt." A writer in the "County Correspondence" of the next issue of The County Democrat told of "our fair ladies who charmed the audience with their music" at a certain Christmas church festival, and, by request conveyed in a note inclosing the stamps, the publisher directed a copy to "A. Merritt, Esq., Tekeewah, Kas." And this sort of thing went on for eight months more, and the golden [illegible]

[illegible]





"CAN'T WE GET ALBERT BACK!"

And so when Helen next paid the Merritt homestead a visit she found the fortress of the old man's heart ready to yield. She had the day before received a copy of The Tekeewah Bugle, in which she found the following paragraph half way down a crudely written account of a fire in that enterprising town:

"We should utterly fail in our duty to our readers if we omitted to take more than passing note of the heroic conduct of one of our young townsmen, a prominent and efficient member of Avalanche Engine company No. 1. Of course we refer to Mr. Albert Merritt, than whom a braver man never drew breath. No sooner had it become known that a child was in the burning building than, at the risk of his own life, Mr. Merritt rushed into the smoke and flames, dashed up the stairs almost at a bound, and, groping about in the stifling heat, found the infant, fought his way through the fire to the window, for by this time the stairway was burning, and jumped to the ground with his precious burden safe on his arms. He was greeted with such a cheer as only Tekeewah throats can give. We regret to be obliged to add that Mr. Merritt suffered a painful, though not necessarily dangerous, injury in the breaking of an arm, which was struck by a falling timber. He was also rather severely burned. It is hoped, however, that he will soon be himself again."

This paper Helen brought with her but carefully hidden. She had determined, if need be, to show it to the stern father, but she proposed to hold it for the last resort. But her manner (for, though ordinarily calm, she was now much excited) betrayed her, and as soon as William Merritt looked into her face he knew that she knew something of Albert; and her unwonted agitation, as he gazed fixedly at her, convinced him that something was amiss with his son. Mrs. Merritt was about to speak when her husband interrupted her in strained, quivering tones:

"Helen Blake," he said, "is Albert dead? Tell me the truth!"

There was a world of paternal love in the old man's voice now. But for a moment Helen said nothing, for she felt that were she to speak she would instantly and completely lose her self control. So with a deprecatory gesture and a white face she walked to the window to compose herself, while the father and mother waited in suspense. After a little she turned again to them, and, with a reassuring look toward Mrs. Blake, who sat with clasped hands and parted lips, she took the paper from her pocket.

"I would like to read to you an article from The Tekeewah (Kansas) Bugle," she said, in as steady a voice as she could command. And then she read the account of the fire, from headlines to dash, without a break, and without looking up. When she had done she raised her eyes. Mrs. Blake was crying quietly and the old man was quite broken down.

"Helen," he said, reaching out both hands to the girl, "it's no use. I can't be a hard-[illegible] old fool no longer. Can't we get Albert back here with us? Hadn't I better go out to Kansas and get him? Poor boy, may be he's hurt worse than it says." And then the old man let the tears flow unconcealed.

That night a letter was mailed to Tekeewah, Kan. It was written by Helen, though unsigned, and here is a copy:

Mr. Albert Merritt:

The account of the recent fire in Tekeewah and the bravery displayed by yourself on that occasion has [illegible] a great change of [illegible] in a certain quarter; a change which would have come soon, however, in the natural course of things. Your father is very much broken and anxious to see you. [illegible]

When Albert Merritt received this letter he was convalescent, lying on the bed in the [illegible]

[illegible]

The stage was due to pass William Merritt's house at 4:30 o'clock on Christmas eve, but the roads were bad and it was quite dark when, with a sweeping curve, it swerved to the side of the pike and stopped in front of the house, in the open front doorway of which, in strong silhouette against the flood of light within, stood the burly form of William Merritt, his hands outstretched with trembling hopefulness.

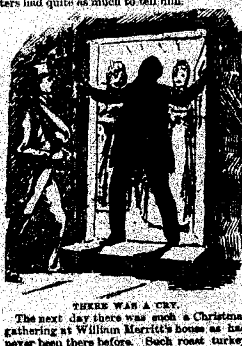
"Come along, Sam," said one of the young men who dismounted from the back seat of the high stage, "I need you yet."

There was a cry, in which recognition, welcome and forgiveness were all blended, from the figure in the doorway, and an answer from the taller of the travelers, who still carried one arm in a sling. And a moment later William Merritt led this one into his house.

"Mother," he said, "our boy has come back."

In the ecstatic joy of meeting his mother, Albert had forgotten Sam McCorkle, and when he looked for him that individual had disappeared. As he afterward explained, he "didn't feel like he was any use when folks was all a-cryin' and a-weepin' and fallin' on each other's necks, so he just sloped."

But Albert did not look for Sam very long. He had much to tell of his new life in the west, where he had been fairly successful, and his father and mother and brothers and sisters had quite as much to tell him.



THERE WAS A CRY.

The next day there was such a Christmas gathering at William Merritt's house as had never been there before. Such roast turkey with cranberry sauce, and such juicy mince pies, and such mealy potatoes, and such fine, white home made bread, and such good things to eat generally as they who sat down at the dinner table partook of have never been excelled. All the Blakes were there, and so were all the members of that class of eight, whose photographs were the first weapon Helen had employed in storming William Merritt's flinty old heart.

And Sam McCorkle, too, the drunken shoemaker's son, full of far western dash and historian of the time "Al rescued the baby." He was "Mr. McCorkle," an honored guest, and no one received greater respect than he. But he did not rise to the height of his glory till evening, for at the dinner table Albert would not suffer his own praises to be sung in too high a key. But when Albert, seeming to have something particular to say to Helen, whose great, brown eyes sparkled unwontedly and whose cheeks persisted in blushing furiously, led her away with him into a quiet corner and left the field to Sam, that individual chanted his hero's deeds to his heart's content and everybody else's delight, though he did not let slip the opportunities to tell of some things he had himself accomplished in the west.

The close of this veracious history may be clipped from The Tekeewah Bugle of March 15, 1889:

"Mr. Samuel McCorkle, the gentlemanly and enterprising agent for Flash & Bitten's justly celebrated lightning rods, has returned from Indiana healthy and happy. His friend and our former townsman, Mr. Albert Merritt, has concluded to remain east, where he will settle down upon his father's extensive farm. A little bird has whispered that the blind god had something to do with Mr. Merritt's decision to forego a share in the golden future, now so near to Tekeewah. Those who are curious in this matter are directed to the notice in the marriage column on another page headed [illegible]

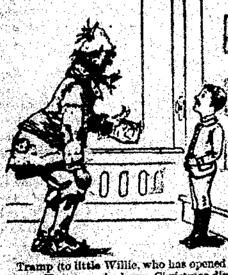
Christmas Trees.

It may seem surprising, but it is nevertheless true, that the cutting of evergreens for Christmas trees is doing serious damage to the forests in some sections. This wholesale destruction of valuable young trees is becoming painfully apparent in the gradual wiping out of woodland in some of the most picturesque portions of the Catskill and Adirondack mountains, and many of the trout streams are drying up. Even small forests help to serve as reservoirs to water, for under the trees the ground is apt to be less spongy, thereby retaining for a time water from rainfalls, and later on allowing it to escape in tiny rivulets as feeders to brooks, big and small.

Confidence.



Tramp (to little Willie, who has opened the door)—Have yer had yer Christmas dinner yet, little boy?

Little Willie—No; we're just going to eat it now.

Tramp—Then perhaps, if I wait around, I can get some of the eatables left over.

HENRY W. GRADY, the great southern editor and orator is dead, the man whose brilliant work in connection with the Atlanta Constitution has made his name famous throughout the world and whose forcible speeches have done more to quench the fire generated by the rebellion than any other man living. He breathed his last early Monday morning in the zenith of his usefulness and it is a matter of the greatest regret that the south has lost its most able citizen and greatest friend.

A BUFFALO dispatch says, "that canal boatman have had a good season for the first time in several years. They were wise enough, this year to profit by the mistakes of other seasons, and they therefore have not had the sorrow of witnessing the good things that might have been theirs pass into the hands of others.

The number of boats that have cleared from Buffalo is 6,855.

While the boats this year have carried millions of pounds of freight, they have carried it at paying rates. That is not saying that the owners of boats have gotten rich out of it, but they have made enough to keep them through a hard winter, and that is more than can be said of the past few seasons.

WE clip the following from the Phœnix Register concerning the student days of Hon. Watson C. Squires at Falley Seminary as being an incident characteristic of the man and one that may be recalled by some who are now readers of THE TIMES:—

"Being one of the speakers at the annual exhibitions he took for his subject, 'Charlatans,' and argued at length to show that Charlatanism invaded every calling from the lowest to the highest, and could be found "even among the learned professions," tossing his head slightly to indicate the faculty sitting directly back on the stage, at the same time establishing a good understanding with the audience by a very "fetching" wink and smile, at which the student portion responded gladly, delighted at his boldness, while the grave faces of the faculty showed appreciation of the hit. Watson and I were in the same classes at New Bridge, and oddly enough, at Falley Seminary too. Many stories are remembered of his aptness in study and recitations."

ROBERT GIFFEN, the famous statistician, has read a paper before the Royal Statistical society in London on the accummulated wealth of the kingdom. This amounted in round numbers in 1885 to £10,000,000,000. This would give to each person in the kingdom a personal share amounting to £270. If the several countries were to become separated, England would be entitled to £308 a head, Scotland £243 and Ireland to £93.

Comparing the decade ending with 1885 and the two pervious decades ending in 1875 and 1865, Mr. Giffen finds that in every item an increase of capital marked the preceding decade, whereas the last decade shows numerous instances of a decrease owing to agricultural and industrial depression. Making a comparison, of the three richest nations of the world Mr. Giffen finds that the wealth per head of population stands as follows: Great Britain, £270; France, £190; United States £160.

"The Tariff is a Tax."

Editor FULTON TIMES:

Dear Sir—If it is "the proper sphere of a newspaper to publish the news as it exists," then the Patriot is hardly up to the ideal of its editor, as it seems to be the aim of the article, "About Free Wool" in the last issue of that paper, to suppress the truth instead of giving it to the public as it exists.

The article referred to above in telling of the dividends of 6 to 24 per cent declared by the Fall River mills, represents them as woolen mils when the fact is they are cotton mills and cotton mills have their raw material free.

In view of the fact that between the years 1870 and 1880 there was a decrease of 875 in the number of woolen mills in the United States, and that in the last two years 90 woolen mills failed, with liabilities of about $10,000,000 it would seem as though the lack of free raw material is what ails the woolen mills.

In referring to the boot and shoe trade the Patriot article is still farther from the truth.

Hides were placed on the free list in 1872, and our exports of leather increased 800 per cent. in 4 years and in 1888 we exported 20,000,000 pounds of leather.

The boot and shoe manufacturer does not have his raw material free as there is a tariff of 15 per cent. on sole leather and 20 per cent. on upper leather, the cloth, nails, buttons, thread, etc., entering into the make up of a shoe are also taxed. A large share of the light and fine leather used in making the better grades of shoes has to be imported as but little is made here. These taxes on nearly all of the materials in a shoe makes it impossible for our manufacturers to compete for the trade of South and Central America and Mexico, whose people demand a light fine shoe.

If the logic used by President Delano, regarding the influence on prices of the change in 1883, in the wool tariff, is correct then it is very plain that the tariff has had a bad effect on the wool growing industry.

In 1867, the tariff on wool was increased, influenced by this increase in the tariff, (I am using President Delano's logic) the price of wool decreased 40 per cent. in 7 years. Michigan and Indiana wool sold for 60 to 62cts. in 1866, and for 35 to 36cts. in 1883, the year the tariff was lowered, The tariff is truly a wonderful thing.

A FREE TRADER.

Common Air.

The breath of life is conveyed to every part of the human lungs by means of a system of fine vessels called the bronchial tubes. When these are clogged up by an accumulation of mucous, so that breathing is very difficult, especially after any exertion, a person has the leading symptoms of Asthma or Phthisic. Besides this the tubes are often reduced to much less than their natural diameter by spasmodic contraction; often nearly suffocating the sufferer. Whether the case is of long standing or not Dr. David Kennedy's Cherry Balsam is the most efficacious known remedy. It at once loosens the mucous matter, and causes it to be ejected by a free and easy expectoration. The balsam in such cases should be taken in larger doses than for a common cough, and no harm is done if some vomiting results. Take particular notice that if the disease is complicated with a dyspeptic state of the stomach Kennedy's Favorite Remedy must be used to correct the digestion. The case must be very severe that will not rapidly improve under this treatment.

Utilizing Natural Gas at Sandy Creek.

The residents of the village of Sandy Creek and Lacona are completely carried away with the burning of natural gas for heating purposes. They resemble the habitual drinker whose morning glass is said to only whet his appetite for more of its firery contents; and gas in one stove only leads its owner to cry for another by which he may toast his shins. It will be summer before all are supplied so general is the demand. Fifty applicants for gas are already booked which have not been supplied and every day adds two or three to the list. Considerable difficulty is experienced by the company in obtaining supplies as fast as they are needed, so far are we from the base of suppy. All the mixers and burners have to be ordered in Pittsburg or Bradford and several orders for these goods are now on the road, while the parties for whom they are intended wait for their arrival with great impatience. People who have their winter's supply of coal leave it in their cellars and order in the gas. Everything about the plant works to the satisfaction of all and before the year rolls around there will not be a house in town that does not use it. The heating capacity of the gas exceeds that of coal or wood by many fold, as will be readily seen by the fact that sufficient gas is in many instances obtained from a mixer with an eighth of an inch aperature to heat an entire dwelling.—Sandy Creek News.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury, as Mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucus serfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do are ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure and get the genuine, it is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

[illegible] of the tobacco growing States was armed with a measure for the repeal of the tobacco tax, while most of the more enthusiastic went to the full length of the rope with bills for the total wiping out of the internal revenue system.

One of the new bills provides for the establishment of a "bureau of appointment" to take the place of the present civil service commission. This measure was introduced by Representative Cheadle, of Indiana. The proposed bureau would classify the clerks in departmental service into three classes. The first class would comprise all clerks who have been in the government service for say ten years, at the end of three years from the passage of this bill. The next class will go out in six years and the third class in ten years. Appointments hereafter would be made on the recommendation of Congressmen and would be duly proportioned among the Congressional districts. Ten years would be the limit of official life. Having the fear of his Indiana constituents ever in his thrifty eyes, the proposed measure especially exempts honorably discharged sailors and soldiers from its provisions.

Although it had been expected that the special House committee charged with the investigation of the Silcott defalcation would report this week, the complications arising during their meeting yesterday now precludes the possibility of a unanimous recommendation. Besides the proposition of the passage of a deficiency appropriation bill, there are two other schemes pending before the committee. One of them is to divide the money left behind by Silcott pro-rata among the members who lost their salaries. The other is to send the case to the Court of Claims.

Should the committee finally disagree, a resolution will be introduced in the House instructing the committee to report at once the bill introduced by Mr. Payson on Wednesday. This bill, divested of quibbling, simply provides for a deficiency appropriation sufficient to reimburse the members. It is believed by the friends of the measure that they can convince any reluctant Senators that it is a proper measure, and that the government should reimburse Congressmen for the natural losses resulting from disregarding the recommendations of the Treasurer of the United States for twenty years, in failing to provide for the House a duly authorized disbursing officer.

Senator Morgan yesterday offered a a resolution recognizing the United States of Brazil as a "lawful and rightful government" and providing that the people and government of these United States shall recognize the new flag as the banner of a free, sovereign and indipendent government. The resolution may be opposed on the ground that the republic of Brazil has not yet asked recognition, though it is a well known fact that the State department is merely waiting to see how strong the new republic is before offering it tardy recognition.

Congressman Dalzell of Pittsburg, is outspoken in his denounciations of Senator Quay's successful interference in the appointment of the new postmaster for Pittsburg. He says: "It is a wrong to me as the Representative of my district and in indefensible violation of Republican precedent. It is a wrong done at the dictation of a selfish and guiding bossism, from which the people of Pennsylvania will sooner or later relieve themselves." It appears that John Wanamaker has been arrayed against Mr. Dalzell during the entire quarrel, while the President was at first for the strict observance of the time-honored Republican custom of allowing a Congressman to name the postmaster at his own home. But when it came to antagonizing the chairman of the national committee Mr. Harrison's good resolutions vanished before the frown of the Napoleonic Quay. The latest advices are to the effect that the Dalzell and Chris Magee wing of the Republican party in Pittsburg will knife Delamater, Quay's candidate for governor.

DRUNKENNESS—LIQUOR HABIT—In all the World there is but one cure, Dr. Haines' Golden Specific.

It can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it, effecting a speedy or permanent cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alchoholic wreck. Thousands of drunkards have been cured who have taken the Golden Specific in their coffee without their knowledge, and to-day believe they quit drinking of their own free will. No harmful effect results from its administration. Cures guaranteed. Send for circular and full particulars. Address in confidence, GOLDEN SPECIFIC CO., 185 Race Street, Cincinnati, O. 33y1

The Forum.
A MONTHLY REVIEW OF LIVING SUBJECTS
By the Foremost Writers in the World.

THE FORUM has won the highest place reached by any periodical; for it publishes articles by more authoritative writers and by more workers along instructive lines of activity than any other publication. It contains eleven studies of great subjects every month. It is impartial, giving hearings alike to each side. It is financially independent, and it belongs to no sect or party or "interest." It is never sensational, but it aims always to be instructive.

The FORUM is of great value to that part of my college work which deals with practical politics and current questions. Two sets are hardly enough for daily use by students.—Prof. ALBERT BUSHNELL HART, of Harvard.

I consider THE FORUM as furnishing the most intelligent and sympathetic audience that a thoughtful writer can find to address in any land.—Prof. ALEXANDER WINCHELL, of the University of Michigan.

THE FORUM continues to hold its place as the foremost of our magazines, for the variety, the value, and the weight of its contributions.—THE NEW YORK TIMES.

There has come forward no problem of grave importance since THE FORUM was established that has not been discussed in its pages by masters of the subject. [illegible]

Work at the Locks.

The work of lengthening locks No. 9 and 10 is an important factor in furnishing employment to men while times are so dull this fall. Last Saturday 180 men recieved pay for work they had done during the week, and many teams are also used, making no less than $800 that was paid out by Contractor W. S. Nelson for last week's work. This work is being rapidly pushed and good weather for the past ten days has favored it.

Educational Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Oswego Educational Council will occur Tuesday, December 31st, in the City Hall, Oswego. The topic of the day will be "The Work of the Teacher's Class, or the Preparation of Teachers for Rural Schools." It does not seem to be generally understood that all who are interested in educational matters are gladly welcomed to these meetings. We have room not only for members, but for all friends of education.

[illegible] factory at West [illegible] destroyed by fire last Wednesday [illegible]

The influenza is at work in several cities of this state but has not reached Fulton yet that we know of.

We will now begin to have more daylight in the twenty-four hours. Saturday was the shortest day.

Rev. W. A. Rice preached two able sermons at the Presbyterian church last Sunday, morning and evening.

D. J. Freeze, formerly jeweler for Draper, is reported as doing a good jewelry business at Higginsville, Mo.

William Seaver, porter at the Lewis House, fell from a wagon at Oswego Falls evening and badly sprained his wrist.

Contractor Fanning has part of the timbers up for the new paper mill, and the carpenters began putting the siding on yesterday.—Phœnix Chronicle.

Landlord Dingman of the hotel Kirk has sold his four-year-old Henry Clay colt to Jones & Laprarie of Fulton. The consideration was $225.—Phœnix Chronicle.

Union prayer meeting of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist churches will be held to-morrow evening at 7:30 in the Presbyterian church parlors.

The holiday season seems hardly complete without snow, but there is not a particle on the ground. Rain fell nearly all day yesterday and Volney mud reigned supreme.

The Board of Supervisors made their annual visit to the Oswego County House and found everything in first class condition. Resolutions eulogistic to the management were passed.

To-day there will be the Full Service at Zion church at half past ten in the morning. The Sunday School is so form part of the choir, and no doubt the service will be very appropriate to this glad season.

Markie & Mackie's Metropolitan Minstrels which gave a performance here last Wednesday evening collapsed at Cleveland, this county, Saturnight, The proprietor of the Getman house there seized trunks and their contents to satisfy a claim for board.

Truman Showers while riding in a buggy near Bowens Corners was stricken with apoplexy on Wednesday last and died shortly afterwards. He was a well known resident of South Hannibal and leaves a wife, three sons and two daughters. Funeral was held from his late residence on Friday last.

The fair and fancy sale of the Woman's Relief Corps held last Wednesday afternoon and evening was a success financially and otherwise. The net proceeds being about $100. The silk quilt on which $56 worth of tickets had been sold was drawn by Thomas Coles. Articles not sold at the shank of the evening were auctioned off by Amos Youmans. A delegation from the W. R. C. of Baldwinsville attended.

On Thursday last the canal boat which rested upon the dam broke in two and one half with the lumber thereon went over and down the river. A large part of the lumber had been taken to the shore, and a line fastened to the bow of the boat. The bow was then drawn up the stream when the eye to which the line was fastened pulled out and the accident occurred. There are prospects we are informed of a litigation as the result of this. Charles Clute who agreed to remove the the boat and contents for $75 claims pay for time and labor for the lumber taken from the boat, while Baldwin refuses to pay as he claims the contract was not fulfilled.

The services at the Baptist church last Sunday evening were under the auspices of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Mrs. Judson, wife of the first missionary ever sent out by the Baptists.

Introductory remarks were made by Mrs. Cross, president of the society, and a fervent prayer offered by Rev. J. C. Breaker, the pastor. A well written sketch of Mrs. Judson's life was read by Mrs. A. Emerick, "The Worship of Gandama" by Miss Eleanor Gomon, "Progress of Mission Work in Burmah" by Miss Porter and "The latest news from Burmah" by Mrs. Clarence Streeter. Recitations were also given by Miss Cora Sylvester and Miss Lulu Trask.

Advertisements for next week's issue of THE TIMES should be handed in not later than Monday, as it will be printed on Tuesday evening or early Wednesday morning.

[illegible] Messrs. Cole, Gilbert, Beck and Goodjon, with Mr. F. V. Nash at the organ. Mr. Candee of Hamilton Theological Seminary, who has preached at the Congregational church for several Sundays past, was present and offered the opening prayer. Rev. Mr. Rice of Syracuse gave an excellent talk, relating his early experience as to how he became a christian. His earnest and able talk carried with it weight and it was a pleasure to know that every seat in the room was occupied. Mr. A. Hanna, in response to a call from Mr. Bacon, made some touching remarks and Rev. J. C. Breaker made the closing prayer.

Next Sunday afternoon Rev. Wm Dempster Chase will lead and another good meeting is assured.

The members of the four Young People's Christian Endeavor Societies will unite with the Women's Auxiliary in giving the reception to the young men of the two villages in the rooms from 8 to 10 p. m. on New Year's day. Light refreshments will be served and a musical and literary program carried out.

For the purpose of perfecting arrangements for this, ladies interested are asked to be present at a meeting which will be held in the rooms on Thursday afternoon of this week at 4 o'clock.

What a Pajama Is.

In a voluminous mail received by us this is included:

To the Ebitor of the Standard:

In an article from the New York Sun published in the Standard Dec. 12. mention is made of the "pajama" as a substitute for the night-shirt. Will you inform me through the Standard how the "pajama" is made? I have been unable to find anyone here who ever heard of such an article. F

Fulton, N. Y., Dec. 21, 1889.

Our correspondent "is in a sorry plight," indeed, for not to know what a pajama is, is to dwell on the very edge of luxury without getting even a breath from the perfumed atmospere of its region. In this world of trial and trouble few are the number who lie down to pleasant dreams in the silken embrace of oriental raiment but as most of us who walk the earth, are denied as well, purple and fine linen by day, how is it possible to expect that many more will be royally couched at night? Yet we are compelled to believe that our benighted correspondent did not make an assiduous search for the pajama in Fulton which village, though not exactly in the very track of opulent refinement is still near enough to it to be infected now and then with the daintier ideas of the gilded world. Did our correspondent address his inquiry to Willard Johnson? Shutting our eyes to make a conterfeit of night, we can see the genial sybarite of the Oswego gulch dozing on his divan of softest down, arrayed like Solomon, in the pinkest and most clinging of pajamas, the very beau ideal and paragon of somnolent innocence and rough hewn manhood. Willard Johnson will undoubtedly enlighten our correspondent, not only by telling him what the pajama is, but by exhibiting to him this wooer of sweet dreams into the bargain. Then the correspondent will be astonished to find the legged night dress he called a shift in adolescent boyhood, is the glorious gift to the rich which in pongee silk is yclept a pajama.—Syracuse Standard.

OBITUARY.

James T. More died of heart failure at the residence of his son, L. M. More, in Buffalo, Friday, Dec. 20th, 1889, at the age of 83 years, 5 months and one day. Mr. More was an old resident of Fulton, living here for over 50 years and until the death of his wife, which occurred about 10 years ago, when he went to Buffalo to live with his son. Every year thereafter he made a visit to Fulton. All that knew him loved and respected him for his many excellent qualities and his annual visits were a source of pleasure to his many friends in this vicinity. Services were held at his late Buffalo home on Sunday afternoon and as was his wish the remains were brought here to be buried by the side of his wife at Mt. Adnah. A prayer was offered at the grave by Rev. W. Dmpster Chase.

Mrs. Jane Ryan died at Syracuse Saturday, Dec. 21. She had been a guest at Q. Rust's in this village until about a week before her death when she went to Syracuse. She was expected to return daily to spend the winter here when word of her sudden death was received. Mrs. Ryan was the widow of the late John Ryan, undertaker at Syracuse, and was a lady of most beautiful character in its highest and purest sense.

Rev. Luther Lee died at Flint, Mich, Friday, Dec. 13, 1889, at the age of 89 years. Mr. Lee who was a Methodist minister, years ago had charge of the church in this village and many of the older residents will remember him. On Sunday, Dec. 1, he preached a sermon, it being his eighty-ninth birth-day. He took for his text "My departure is at hand." He was buried under Masonic order.

Miss Sarah J., daughter of Israel and Eliza Rigley, died Sunday, Dec. 22, 1889, at the age of [illegible] years. Funeral services were held at the house, corner of Third and Seneca streets, Tuesday at 11 o'clock, a. m., conducted by Rev. Mr. Young.

"It don't matter, Mickey," she said, "but any the good wish make it taste as relishin' as if 'twas as big as a barn and cooked in a [illegible]."

There were five charter members of the dinner party, so to speak. "Rocks" so named from his manner of defending himself [illegible] his frequent "scraps," came into the cellar first. He too had a little bundle which was [illegible] with due ceremony. When "Piper" [illegible] he stopped a minute just inside the threshold, and held the door open while he beckoned to some one on the outside.

"C'mon in," said he. "The fellers 'll be glad ter see yer."

Then there entered a little fellow not more than 6 years old. He was very much embarrassed, and held his finger to his lips. Piper, by way of introduction, said:

"Fellers—and Suse—this 'ere little cove" (Piper himself was a big cove, having seen thirteen years, and being the oldest member of the dinner party) "is comin' to our Crismus. He's just gone into the paper sellin' biz, an' he ain't got no boodle. I'm a takin' care o' him till he gits started. See?"

For a minute an embarrassed silence hung over the little group. Then the little people opened their hearts to the newcomer (and they were big hearts for such very small bodies), and he was one of the dinner party.

Piper explained to him:

"You see," said Piper, "we fellers and Suse had heard a lot 'bout Crismuss. We don' know 'zac'ly what it is, but we do know that everybody, wot is anybody, has a Crismuss dinner. So we jes' chipped in, and—and" (waving his hand around the room) "here y' are."

"But I ain't chipped in," said the newcomer.

"Well, wot if y' ain't. Y' can nex' time." So that was settled.

Suse in the meantime had produced a pail from somewhere, and an old stew pan from somewhere else, and some broken crockery from still another place.

"Your'll make the coffee and warm the cabbage and meat, darlint," said Mickey. "Yes are the only woman here."

So Suse went at it.

It wasn't long before everything was ready, and they gathered around the box. The savory odor from the coffee pot and stew pan had tickled the twelve little nostrils, and the six mouths were as eager to taste the poor little dinner as ever yours was to pick your succulent Christmas turkey bones.

They fell to at once.

"I'm 'fraid the coffee ain't very good," said Suse. But she smiled the satisfied smile that every housewife smiles while decrying her own dainties, and was as pleased as you ever were, my fine lady, in similar circumstances, when Rocks exclaimed in answer:

"Finer'n Delmonico's, I'll bet."

Before very long the dinner had been eaten. They sat around and talked for awhile, and the little 6-year-old fell asleep with his head on Suse's knees, and her fingers passed lovingly over the little fellow's dirty forehead, and by-and-by she leaned over and kissed him.

The tallow candle burned low in its green bottle candlestick, and when Piper rose and queried:

"Well, fellers—and Suse—has we had a merry Crismuss?" A fervent "You bet!" went from the mouths of every one but the 6-year-old, and he smiled in his sleep.

The dinner party was over. D. E. M.

The Drumstick.

Behold my rotund wealth of meat,
With all its juices, rich and sweet!
How firm, how solid, are my parts,
And how I go straight to the hearts
Of children, with distended jaws,
In wait to hide me in their maws.

Ah! how I love to lie in state
Upon the table, while you wait
With eager eyes and teeth that burn,
Until it comes to be your turn.
How crisp my skin, and, oh! how brown,
And how I tickle going down;
And, then, my bone, oh! what delight,
To pick it till it's clean and white.

How would you like, on Christmas Day,
To tramp till noon and then, we'll say,
To come back home, well almost starved,
And find me waiting, nicely carved?
Between your finger and your thumb
You hold me up, thus (yum, yum, yum!)
I tickle every nerve, I thrill
Your stomachs, and I fill the bill,
And with all men I nothing lack—
In fact, I have the inside track!

"No thoroughly occupied man," says a great writer, was ever yet miserable." Unless he was trying to amuse a 2 year-old child while its mother went out calling.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

She—"Oh, see that scarecrow out there in the field!" He—"That isn't a scarecrow." "It must be; see how motionless it is." "That's the hired man at work."—Yankee Blade.

A man's hair is a good deal like a man himself. After a certain age it ceases to come to the front.—Burlington Free Press.

A country editor in Nebraska has just been robbed of $300, and sympathy for his loss is swallowed up in curiosity to know how he got so much money.—Exchange.

"Upon my soul," exclaimed Mrs. Flyaround, "I never saw such an old gadder in all my life as that Mrs. Neverhome is! Actually, I called seven times at her house and couldn't get in once."—Epoch.

"The bustle is a thing of the past," says a fashion exchange. It always was a little behind.—Binghamton Republican.

It's very monotonous to be rich, but there is a variety about being poor that sometimes makes us weary. —Philadelphia Inquirer.

Bonhomie.—Uncle Henley, who has been introduced to the Duchess of Sockmock, and is staggered for something to say)—"Proud to see yer. How'd yer leave his nibs th' d-d drake?"—Judge.

"Will the coming man fly?" asks a scientific writer. Judging from our protracted spell of rainy weather, the "coming man" will have to swim as soon as he gets here.—Norristown Herald.

Balm—Papa (after the seance in the wood shed)—"Do you know that it pains me more than it does you to have to whip you?" The Terror—"No, papa; I didn't know it; but now that you've told me I feel better."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

"Here's a go! Johnson, the murderer, has just been found innocent, and the Governor has telegraphed a pardon. We've got the whole account of the hanging set up, with illustrations, and the form is on the press." —Life.

Type—It's funny, sir, but there is hardly a vowel in this case, and there's no dead matter to throw in. I can't finish this job unless I can get some more type.
